Testimony comes to hand from Germany of the frightful tortures imposed by the Huns by way of punishment on French, Russian and British prisoners who refuse to do the forced labor which the Germans seek to impose upon them. The Paris Matin voices the complaint of a French prisoner, who by a lucky subterfuge came through from Munster to France. "We have," he says, "witnessed on two days really inconceivably dreadful incidents. The men who refused to go to work in the factories were savagely beaten with the butt ends of heavy sticks or dragged by the feet until they pitifully gave in and promised to consent to go. On a complaint being brought to his notice, the colonel replied: 'It will be always so whenever the men refuse to obey.' You may imagine the dreadful plight of those wretches forced to work against their brothers and against their country."

What can one say as to the treatment inflicted upon the Russian prisoners in Germany as revealed by the Journal des Debats from information contained in the Russkoe Slova? This is nothing short of the most abominable martyrdom as attested and vouched for by numerous recitals and letters and even illustrations which have been supplied by some escaped prisoners. Russian prisoners are made to travel under such disgusting and horrible conditions that many die during the journey from inanition and asphyxiation. They die, but their corpses are left standing supported by their comrades, since 50 soldiers are crowded in a carriage which at the best could accommodate only 20, and the journey lasts three days and three nights.

On arrival at their destination the prisoners are subjected to convict labor, and abominably fed. The Germans compel them to work on the manufacture of shells and the preparation of asphyxiating gases. They are driven in hundreds to digging of trenches under the shrapnel and gun fire of the Russians. If the prisoners refuse, they are unmercifully beaten and starved and condemned to solitary confinement, with their right hand fastened by chains to the left foot. In this pitiable condition they are left for whole weeks at a stretch, or they are suspended from a torturing rack. All this the poor, miserable prisoners endure most heroically; it is their best chance of avoiding still greater infamies. There have been hundreds of similar cases, and these repeat themselves every day where soldiers, in order to escape working against their country, cut off either one or two of their fingers, or even the whole hand.

War Perfects Surgery

Surgery is making great advances as a result of the war. W. H. Delemore, president of the British Dental Association, told his fellow members at the annual meeting that one of the lessons the war will teach will be the correct method of treating injuries of the jaw and face. Photographs exhibited showed remarkably successful results in healing gunshot fractures of the jaw with a minimum of disfigurement.

"My takings have dropped from $100 to $10 a week owing to the war," said a hairdresser at Clerkenwell County Court.

HEROISM OF THE FRENCH

Men Who Seize the Opportunity and Save the Situation

Among the episodes recounted by men wounded in battle is one recording the conspicuous gallantry of a French infantry commandant named De Font Reaux. On one of the most critical days of the struggle round Douaumont, the men of our regiment, dazed by five hours' incessant shelling, weakened in the centre. Their line was not broken, but they threatened to yield. The men in some places fell back a couple of hundred paces and threw themselves on the ground. De Font Reaux, realizing the danger, seized a rifle and deliberately walked forward under a hail of shrapnel and, standing alone on the crest where the fire was hottest, shouted, "On your feet, lads, and form fours!" The men immediately obeyed. When they had formed up into an open column the commandant, shouldering his rifle, shouted 'Forward!" and led them back to the firing line.

During the German bombardment of Verdun and the surrounding positions, which lasted 170 hours without a stop, three men were buried in an underground cap on the Plateau de la Vauche. They had just finished packing a mine at the end of the sap and were on the way back to the surface when a German 8-inch shell exploded above them and blew in the roof of the gallery. They thought their last hour had come, and one of them pulled out a revolver to end his life. But a comrade stopped him, pointing out that the mine they had just laid must soon explode and they would either be blown to pieces or, if the packing held good, would be able to dig their way to safety. His supposition proved correct. Hardly had he finished speaking when there was a deafening report and the gallery was filled with hot air and gases. Half-choked the three men crawled back along the gallery to the wall they had built and cut their way through into the crater formed by the explosion. It took them over an hour to force a way through the heaps of German corpses at the bottom of the pit to the surface. On reaching the fresh air the men fainted. Eight hours later they were discovered by stretcher-bearers and taken away in an ambulance.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Mossburg, Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

MARCHING TO MUSIC: HOW RUSSIA ADVANCES

Vivid Picture of Hosts of Empire Passing to Front—Splendid Bands and Weary Nurses

Stanley Washburn, of the London Times, writes from Lutsk, Russia, as follows: Thanks to the courtesy of a genial and obliging commandant, we are given a room in a hotel in the main street. Everything belongs to the military now, and when you want quarters you go to the commandant and he allows you a vacant place in which to spend the night. All night long there is the constant roar of traffic beneath our window. Again and again we are awakened by the brazen clamor of military music crashing out the superb strains of the Russian marching songs, as the regimental bands, fifty strong, go swinging down the street at the head of the columns pressing onwards to take up in turn their burden at the front. As one sat on the road at Novo Minsk in Poland and watched the Russian army go by in defeat, so now one may sit here and see the spectacle of a great army advancing after victory. Now, however, it is to the crash of music, while then the only sound was the shuffle of weary feet plodding through the dust.

Endless Material

With creaking limbers and jingling chains, with the six sturdy little horses' necks straining in their collars, the loaded ammunition wagons pass in columns a mile long. Then for half an hour one may watch the odds and ends of transport. Miles and miles of peasants' carts bearing food, provender, huge loaves of bread, are succeeded by four-horse wagons piled high with regimental and staff baggage. These turn aside to let the field telegraph column pass, with its innumerable little two-wheeled carts, loaded with poles and coils for the communications.

Perhaps behind them a long column of the two-wheeled two-horse carts with small-arm ammunition for the infantry passes tumultuously over the rough cobbled stones. Huge motor lorries filled with petrol demand a way through the surging crowds with bellowings of their horns, while motor cars from the various staffs pass and repass each other, more insistent still for the right of way. Intermingled with the throng are the carriages of the town, now commandeered by officers who have local business to attend to. Wagons loaded with barbed wire wound on great spools are conspicuous in the procession.

Dusty But Singing

A dozen times a day the traffic must pull aside to permit the passage of troops going to the front. These come through battalion after battalion, their copper-tinged faces grey with the fine white dust of the road. Below us are the quarters of a general who has just come to this front, and he stands bareheaded on his balcony and calls out greetings to his men as they pass beneath the window. As far as one can see both up and down the street, the surging masses of khaki figures with their fixed bayonets swing with their long stride, roaring out their marching songs at the top of their lungs, those wonderful songs to the cadence of which hundreds of thousands of men have died these past years.

The pavements, too, are crowded with those who have their part in war. Sisters of Mercy, tired, dirty, and covered with dust, lean wearily against doorways watching with as their empire, in motion—for humbly speaking, every quarter of Russia is represented here.

BY JOVE!

said a well educated man the other day when he was asked this question:—"Why, when you have a cold, a cough or bronchitis (troubles, you will note, of throat and chest) do you persist in pouring cough syrups, lung tonics and the like into your stomach, which is perfectly sound?"

Ever think of it? The stomach and the lungs are not connected, otherwise food swallowed would choke you. Lung and throat troubles were never yet cured by dosing the stomach. To cure coughs, colds and bronchitis, you must breathe the cure. Peps provide the rational treatment for these ailments. Peps are tablets made up of pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes—not swallowed down to the stomach, which is not ailing. Try a 50c. box of Peps for your cold, your cough, bronchitis or asthma. JAP PRAISES ALPINI

Italian Mountain Fighters Are World's Best, Says Admiral

August Beaumont writes from Milan, Italy, as follows: I have had an interview with Rear-Admiral Saneyuki Akiyama, of the Imperial Japanese navy. He visited the Russian front, was at the French and British fronts, witnessed the beginning of the battle of the Somme, and was present as a close spectator during three days of the Battle of the Lower Isonzo, saw the attack on Monte Sabotino, and witnessed the taking of Gorizia. He said to me: "I saw the attack from the beginning, and continued observing the battle for three days. It gave me an excellent impression of the Italian army. Their attack was very successful; the troops were all in very good condition; they are well equipped and supplied and fought splendidly. Officers and soldiers are confident of victory. I have also seen the Alpine troops. They are the best of any kind in any country."

Teach Child to Remember

Mr. George Foster, K.C., Montreal, urged that every child attending school should be taught the names of the men from his or her district who had paid the great sacrifice in this war, and the circumstances under which he had lost his life. These lists, he argued, should be recited and made a necessary part of the knowledge of a scholar before passing. The idea is a good one, and calculated to increase the knowledge of the rising generation that will lead to intelligent patriotism in years to come.

Prepare This for a Bad Cough—It's Fine

Cheaply and Easily Made, but Does the Work Quickly.

The finest cough syrup that money can buy—costing only about one-fifth as much as ready-made preparations—can easily be made up at home. The way it takes hold and conquers distressing coughs, throat and chest colds will really make you enthusiastic about it.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Shake thoroughly and it is ready for use. The total cost is about 54 cents and gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of a most effectual, pleasant tasting remedy. It keeps perfectly.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed or swollen throat membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough will disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is known the world over for its prompt healing effect on the throat membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

MUNITIONS KINGS ARE NEWEST ARISTOCRATS

War Profits Buy Entry Into British Society—Ambition of Newly-Rich

An English correspondent writes in the Weekly Despatch: "I was never better in my life," replied Jourdan to my question. Everybody knows Jourdan, though not by that name. He is the medium of sale or purchase of things that are expensive and out of the way. If you want a necklace of large black pearls or the lease of a town house exceptionally situated, Jourdan is your man. If you want to dispose of a motor yacht as good as as new, or of a racing stable, horses, tracks, and paddocks altogether, Jourdan is the first man you ring up on the telephone.

Because I vainly imagined that most of the things in which he specialized are something like drugs on the market of to-day I asked after his welfare sympathetically, to find that my sympathy was wasted.

"I never had so many clients in my life," he continued to my further question. "Plenty of sellers and buyers for all they have to offer—at a price. . . ."

Contractors Benefit

"Each big war, you see, founds its own families. A few are warrior families, but the bulk of them are contracting families. This war is about to repeat the experience on a scale vastly magnified. Already they are bringing their ambitions and their war profits to the plane where they can make the most use of them. They are gravitating from the provinces, where they are making their money, to London, where their wives intend to spend it.

"Let me give you a few instances: There is K——. He had a lucky share in a steamer or two, and two years ago was the unenvied owner of a fleet of disgraceful tramps. No one but he could have made them pay before the war, and he only did it by scraping and driving like a fiend.

Luck Does It

"Then came the war. W— was on velvet. His tramps were just had enough to be more valuable to him than a fleet of the finest liners. The owners of well-found craft had to part with them to the Government, at prices which must certainly pay them very well. But they have to gnash their teeth in rage at the profits W—— is grinding out of his assortment of ugly old tramps. He has just paid my price for a fine mansion.

"There's another man who is a clothing contractor. Sport is his line; wants to win the Derby some day with a horse of his own breeding. He is buying at the right time and with judgment. Now he owns a stud farm and a choice lot of horses; also a training establishment on the best part of the Downs."

He himself refused to leave his wounded men, and remained there valiantly at his post until a shell struck him and he was killed.

LICENSE INSPECTOR BUSY IN RENFREW

He Has Secured Over $1,500 in Fines Including one of $200 from a County J. P.

RENFREW, Nov. 2.—Those who violate the liquor law in North or South Renfrew have to reckon with License Inspector John Connolly, who pursues his duties without fear or favour. Since the law came into force he has secured in fines upwards of $1,500.

Last week a hotel keeper was made pay a fine of $200 and costs for allowing somebody to bring liquor into his premises and treating friends. A store keeper in the upper country paid a similar fine for having a bottle in a place other than his private dwelling. For a similar reason two Renfrew men have been convicted, but elected to spend the next three months in gaol. Two citizens were made pay a fine of $10 each for being intoxicated. An upper country J. P. was convicted and paid $200 and costs.

Since the sale of liquor has once more been legalized in Portage du Fort, the droughty find it handy to secure a supply, ostensibly for private use but they ofttimes err in convivialities.

3 DAYS OF RAIN IN PARIS MEANS MUD ALONG THE FRONT

PARIS, Nov. 2 — Paris is wafer soaked. There has been a steady, earnest downpour for three whole days and nights and more is expected. Paris is accustomed to much rain at this season, but in the past it has been taken as a matter of course. This year, however, rain brings a feeling of impatience, for it is realized here that rain means a hampering of the military movements and a delaying of the advance at Verdun and on the Somme, for rain brings mud, and muddy roads and quagmire fields are not alone unpleasant, even in war, but a decided hindrance to all efforts to go ahead.

Finishing Lambs For The Block

On the Dominion Experimental Farms some interesting results have been obtained from a number of experiments in lamb feeding conducted during the last few years.

The large percentage of Canadian lambs are marketed in the fall direct from the pastures. All the lambs from the farmer's flock are usually lifted at the same time, which means that the well finished lambs of good weight, must help to sell the light, thin lambs, which may be as well bred, but, being late lambs or twin lambs, have not done as well as their flock mates. Well finished lambs of uniform weight invariably command a higher price than mixed lambs varying in size, weight and finish, hence it is always more profitable to hold the lighter lambs, and sell only those of uniform weight and finish. Again, the selling of the most of our Canadian lambs during the fall months practically always causes a slump in the price. Lambs not required for immediate consumption are held in cold storage to the profit of the wholesaler in view of the usual increase in price of from $1 to $3 per hundred pounds between them months of November and April.

When the farmer appreciates these two conditions the lamb trade will be revolutionized and the farmer will finish his work and reap full profits for food stuffs consumed by, and labor expended on his sheep. Many farmers with abundance of roughage, can well afford to finish from one to three carloads of lambs during the winter season, thereby making top market prices on the farm produce and a good margin of profit in addition. Realizing the existence of such conditions all over the Dominion, a large amount of investigational work along these lines has been conducted on the Dominion Experimental Farms throughout Canada. Details of this work may be seen in the annual reports; however, a brief summary of the work to date may be timely.

PROFITS IN WINTER FEEDING LAMBS.

In the six years' work conducted on the Experimental Farms system, the profits on the winter finishing of lambs have ranged from 25 cent. per head to $2.10 per head over the cost of feed. In other words, the Experimental Farms and Stations have purchased unfinished lambs on the open market or from drovers, and after charging good prices for marketable farm feeds and cost prices for other roughages, have made from 3 to 33 per cent. on the investment in the lambs, labor not included. Even allowing a fair margin for labor, this is as profitable a line of feeding work as can be carried on and shows a return on investment greater than is usual in the finishing of steers or shoats.

THE CLASS OF LAMBS TO BUY.

The class of lambs to buy depends largely on the lambs available, and market requirements. Usually, the well bred lamb showing plenty of constitution and thrift, and weighing from 60 to 80 pounds, is the best stocker lamb to put into winter quarters. Lambs weighing from 80 to 100 lbs. if thin, may be profitably put in the feed lot for a short finish, and if good fall pastures are available this may be as profitable a line of work as any. The finished, heavy lamb, weighing from 80 to 110 pounds, should never be purchased for feeding purposes. The time when greatest profits can be made in purchasing lambs is usually between the months of August and November. However, the condition of the pastures and of the lambs themselves as well as the markets, will regulate the time for purchase. The proper time to sell the lambs is when they are finished, whether this be November or April, or any intervening month. This applies also to the selling of lambs off grass. Finished lambs will make small gains at a very high cost per pound, which cost will usually be far in excess of the market price at that season. In addition to this, the markets are demanding a well finished lamb, not overdone, and ranging from 95 to 105 pounds live weight, depending upon the breed and the season of the year. This, of course, does not apply to the young lamb trade of the spring and early summer.

AVERAGE PROFITS IN WINTER LAMB FEEDING.

The enclosed table shows an average profit over feed—on Experimental Farms and Stations throughout Canada, in the feeding of many carloads of lambs—of $1.05 per lamb when the spread between the buying and selling prices has exceeded this amount during the past two years, and promises a still further rise during the next two years, one is safe in anticipating a reasonable profit in lamb finishing, in spite of the very high price of lamb at the present time. If this applies to the purchasing of stocker lambs for winter feeding, it would apply doubly to the farmer or the shepherd having lambs in an unfinished condition. It is always profitable to finish lambs before putting them on the market.

FEEDS FOR WINTER LAMB FINISHING.

A large number of feeds have been tried in this work and these may be briefly treated under the four headings: dry roughages, succulent roughages, grains and mill feeds.

Of the dry roughages, alfalfa hay is an easy leader, closely followed however, by fine clover hays and fine mixed hays. At the Experimental Station, Lethbridge, Alta., it has been found that alfalfa hay, when properly fed with succulent roughages and grain, is worth $21 per ton for the finishing of lambs. It has also been found that alfalfa hay alone or with meal is less profitable than when succulent roughages, such as roots, (turnips and mangels), or green oat sheaves, are also fed. What applies to the rich alfalfa hay also holds true with clover hays. Good quality clover hay is worth from 10 to 30 per cent. more in lamb feeding than timothy or similar grass hays. Proving the value of succulent roughages it was found also that good quality timothy hay plus mangels gave from 15 to 20 per cent. more profitable gains than clover hay alone. A hay made from peas and oats, well cured, will produce satisfactory gains but at least 10 per cent. less profitable than alfalfa or clover or a mixture of these with oat sheaves.

RICH HAY IS GOOD.

Fine corn stover will also make profitable gains, but there is a large percentage of waste. However a small amount may be fed satisfactorily as a supplement to good quality legumes, oat or grass hay. Coarse hays commonly found in marsh lands are approximately 60 to 75 per cent. less efficient than clover or alfalfa hay. A limited amount of straw may be fed satisfactorily in finishing lambs, but this should only be as a supplement to clover hay and roots. Generally speaking, the richer the hay and the better it is cured, the more profit to be made in feeding it to lambs. Black seeds alone are most unpalatable and are dangerous to feed, in that a large proportion of the feed will pass through the lambs in an undigested condition and will again germinate on the land. Black seeds fed alone are unprofitable and the lambs will make small gains if compelled to depend on this feed for their sustenance.

BRAN AND OIL CAKE.

It is doubtful, if under average conditions, any high percentage of mill feeds can be fed profitably in lamb finishing. However, where grains are very expensive the following meals may be profitably used: Bran is an excellent addition to a grain mixture, especially in the absence or the partial absence of succulent feeds. Linseed oil cake might often be profitably added to the grain ration to put a final finish on the lambs. Gluten meal is even superior to the linseed oil cake. Cottonseed when not exceeding 10 per cent. of the ration may often be a profitable addition to the grain ration. Middlings, shorts, and fine ground grains are of a pasty nature when moist and should not be fed.

To briefly summarize the feeds, one might say that the character and the quantities of feeds depend largely upon market conditions and feeds available. A ration including some good succulent roughage and properly balanced as to nutritive contents will almost invariably give the greatest profits. Generally speaking, it will not pay to exceed one pound and a quarter of grain per lamb at the finish, nor will it pay to feed more than 5 pounds of succulent roughage and 3 to 5 pounds of dry roughage per head per day at any time during the finishing period.

COST OF EQUIPMENT.

The cost of equipment for the finishing of lambs is very light. Warm quarters are not necessary for sheep of any class. Sheltered sleeping quarters, free from draughts and having a dry floors, are usually al that is required. A good, tight, single-board shed, with doors opening to the south, or for the prairie provinces, a straw shelter or even the protection of the bush or the straw stacks, would under average conditions, be ample for this purpose. Cheap, convenient racks and troughs or a combination rack and trough, will cost per carload of lambs fed and, if made portable may be used for both summer and winter feeding. No other class of stock requires so little in cost of equipment, in buildings, utensils, preparation of feeds, or in any other way as do sheep. In these days when labor is extremely scarce this phase of animal husbandry should appeal very strongly to the farmer who has not sufficient labor to go into dairy husbandry, swine or even beef cattle.

SUCCULENT ROUGHAGES.

Succulent roughages play a very large part in profits from lamb finishing. Generally speaking, good succulent roughages, such as turnips, mangels, sugar beets, corn ensilage, pea and oat ensilage, or the like, make the dry roughages and grains more palatable and more digestible. Again, these succulent roughages are cheaply grown and are rich nutritious foods in themselves. Where corn ensilage may be raised for $2 per ton, it is the cheapest and the best succulent roughage for lamb finishing. When fed with clover hay and grain it will produce 5 per cent. greater profits than a mixture of turnips, clover hay, and grain. However, a mixture of turnips and ensilage with hay and grain will usually give the greatest profits. The turnip is the safest root to feed in finishing lambs, particularly where weather or even rain lambs may be found in the pens. Mangels, particularly, may have a dangerous influence on the kidneys of wethers and lambs.

SCREENINGS ARE GOOD.

The grains which may be the most profitably fed, vary considerably from year to year with the market values of those grains commonly found in Canada. Oats, barley and feed wheat are all excellent grains for lamb finishing and may be fed whole or crushed but never fine ground. A mixture of these three will usually give much better results than any one grain singly. Corn is another grain which excels in the fattening of lambs, particularly those requiring only a short finish. Corn-fed lambs on the Central Experimental Farm have reached a profit of $2 per head, making great gains at a reasonable cost. However, at the present, market prices corn would not be profitable for this purpose. Elevator screenings also are very valuable in lamb finishing, varying in value, however, in direct proportion to the variation in the quality of the screenings. Where there is a high percentage of broken kernels of wheat and barley and oats, screenings may have a feed value almost equal to a mixture of barley, oats and wheat. Elevator screenings containing a high percentage of black seeds and foreign matter have less feeding value. Screenings with dirt and black seeds screened out give the greatest gains and profits. A mixture of whole screenings with barley and oats has given from 10 to 40 per cent. greater profits than the screenings alone, the variation being due to the varying quality of the screenings.

"Miss Blank, which letters on the typewriter do you use most?"

If you should ask your stenographer that question she probably would tell you the "the Vowels." She would not be guessing, either. Before glass was used for keytop covers, a glance at the keys on a typewriter would have shown Miss Blank's analysis to be correct.

A. W. Stenson, manager of the service department of a Kansas City typewriter agency, will corroborate Miss Blank's testimony. Judging by the frequency with which the type have to be replaced, Mr. Stenson would say that these letters in the order named are used the most: e, a, i, o, t, r, s, d, n.

MOSQUITOES CLOSE MILLS

Pest of Insects Compels Plants to Shut Down.

The gulf coast region of East Texas and the western part of Louisiana have been afflicted with the worst scourge of mosquitoes ever known.

Several large lumber mills were forced to close down on account of the pest. Men and animals were tortured by the bites of the insects. Cattle and horses were attacked by veritable hordes of mosquitoes, and the animals huddled together in groups in an effort to protect themselves as much as possible from the bites.

Upon the farms smudge fires were kept burning constantly to drive away the pests, but these efforts seemed to be of little avail.

Remaking Men Shaken by Their Terrible Experiences.

Dr R. Tait McKenzie describes in the British Medical Journal the work of the command depots to which are sent men for whom there is some hope of cure or improvement within a period of six months. The Medical Record prints this summary of it:

"Among those usually sent are cases of profound neurasthenia, the result of sleepless nights and arduous days; shock in all its forms — tremulous hands and tongue, stammering speech and deafness, persistent nightmares and fears by day; disorders of sensation, contractures, and paralysis, rapid and weak heart action, hearts that were overstrained and that are unable to sustain the effort of the lightest gymnastic exercise or the shortest march; rheumatism, real and unreal, in all its forms; lungs suffering from the bronchitis of as poisoning, asthma, and even tuberculosis; profound debilities following typhoid fever, dysentery, and malaria, requiring months of good food, light duty, and progressive exercise to build them up.

"For all of these cases the treatment comes under what may be called physical therapy, electricity, hydrotherapy, massage, mechanotherapy, corrective exercises, physical training, and marching. The procedures employed in the various conditions are described in detail, and it is pointed out that many cases of disordered heart action can be brought up the full physical training, but not into it. Several cases were brought up to this point three or four times, and then had to be returned to lighter duty. Not more than 30 per cent. succeeded in passing into Class A.

"This same experience has been shared by some cases of shock, of bronchitis followed by exposure of gas, and cases of frostbite.

"An analysis of the classified cases sent out from Heston Park up to date shows that nearly 50 per cent. have been returned fit for active service, about 15 per cent. have been sent to lines of communication abroad. About 15 per cent. have been sent to useful work of a sedentary nature at home, and over 20 per cent. have been discharged as permanently unfit, many of these being untreatable from the first.

"A fact which is not to be lost sight of, McKenzie says, is that even though these men may not be sent back as first-class men, their opportunities for a useful career in civil life after the war have been enormously increased."

The Tasmanian government has dammed a large lake and built a hydro-electric plant for light and power that will be distributed throughout the state.

Motion pictures showing the front and back views of noted orchestra leaders at work have been taken and combined so that other musical organizations can be led by them, while audiences can see them as usual at the same time.

Suffered With Heart For Ten Years

Would Nearly Smother

There is nothing that brings with it such fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The uncertain and irregular heart action causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, so that it beats strong and regular, and tone up the nervous system so that the cause of so much anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs M. O. McCready, Wapella, Sask., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I feel that it is only right for me to let you know what your wonderful remedy has done for me, and in a very short time, too. I had suffered terribly with my heart for nearly ten years, could scarcely do any work, and would nearly smother at times. I had many remedies, some only relieving me for a time. I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and felt so much better that I kept on using them, and can truthfully say I feel like a new woman.

"I would advise anyone with heart trouble to use them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 60c, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BRITISH TROOPS HAVE IMPROVED THEIR POSITIONS ON SOMME FRONT

General Haig's Report To-day Reports Success on Somme --British Submarine Reports She Made Hits on Two German Dreadnoughts of the Kaiser Type.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 7.—British positions about Butte De Warlencourt, south of Bapaume, where terrific fighting was centred in the Somme offensive, were improved last night, General Haig reported to the War Office today.

A successful raid was conducted by British detachments on German trenches near Serre.

An Agitation To Compel Germany to Compensate Allies For Loss of Ships

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 7.—Robert Yerburgh, President of the British Navy League, which has been foremost in the conduct of the agitation for full payment by Germany for the destruction of Allied and neutral ships, yesterday said he had the support of two hundred and seventeen Chambers of Commerce in the British Isles, and the most influential men in business life. "The destruction of British and Allied merchant shipping by Germany has unquestionably the object of giving Germany the dominion position as competitor for the ocean-going trade of the world after the war," said Mr. Yerburgh. "The only basis of compensation which could conceivably give satisfaction to the Allies is that Germany must hand over from her mercantile marine when peace is declared, ship for ship, ton for ton, of equivalent values to those sunk by her war vessels against the law of war."

Austrian Sub Sunk By A Torpedo Boat

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

ROME, November 7.—An Austrian submarine that attacked a troop laden Italian transport yesterday, was sunk in an engagement with the torpedo boat escort to the transport, the Admiralty announced today. The torpedo boat was so badly damaged it sank later. The transport escaped damage. Most of the torpedo boat's crew was saved, and the crew of the submarine taken prisoners.

LONDON, November 7.—Further report from a British submarine operating off the Danish coast claims to have scored hits on two German Dreadnoughts of the Kaiser class, the Admiralty announced today. A report from the Admiralty yesterday said a British submarine had hit a Dreadnought with a torpedo, but that the damage done was not known.

British Navy Is Tested By Storms

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Eng., (Special Cable), November 7.—For four days and three nights the British Isles have been the centre of terrible storms on land and sea. Much anxiety is felt regarding the safety of portions of Britain's protecting navy, which has borne the brunt of the storm, in the North Sea, the English Channel, and around the islands of the north.

British ships on patrol duty off the various coasts have suffered experiences even unusual for British sailors. The heaviest Dreadnoughts were hurled about on giant waves like sail boats. Gunners at their stations were compelled to tie themselves to the guns, and captains were unable to leave their bridges for from twenty to forty-eight hours.

Wildest stories reached England of disasters to British ships in the storm, but so far as known one or two patrol boats only have failed to report.

Newspapers describe the last few days as the greatest test of seamanship and efficiency of the British navy in war in the history of England.

The German Government Put The Muzzle On

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 7.—A despatch to the London Times from Amsterdam, Sunday follows: The Reichstag was dismissed yesterday amid scenes of considerable indignation by one of those sudden autocratic decisions which prove its powerlessness. It seems that the Reichstag desired to discuss Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg's speech, but the government "put the muzzle on."

German Losses In Juil Valley Heavy

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 7.—German losses on the Roumanian frontier in the Juil Valley fighting have exceeded a division and a half, a wireless despatch from Bucharest stated today. A German army division consists of about 20,000 officers and men of virtually all fighting classes.

Berlin Claims Of The British Losses

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN, via Sayville, November 7.—The sinking of a small British cruiser by a German submarine off the Irish coast has increased the enemy's losses in battleships and cruisers to 501,790 tons, the War Office said to-day.

Roumanian Armies Advance Along The Whole Line

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BUCHAREST, November 7.—The Roumanian armies on the Dobrudja front have advanced along the whole line, the War Office announced this afternoon.

PUBLIC SERVICE WILL BE HELD AT THE ARMOURIES

The Funeral of Lieut. Arthur Ackerman Will Take Place To-morrow Afternoon and Will Be of a Semi-Military Nature

MANY VISITORS COMING

The funeral of Lieut. Arthur R. Ackerman will take place to-morrow afternoon and will be of a public semi-military nature. There will be a private service at the home of Lieut. Ackerman's parents, Dalhousie street, and afterwards at 2.30 o'clock, there will be a public service in the Armouries. Owing to the absence of the necessary equipment it will not be possible to carry out all the customary details of a military funeral, as both rifles and a gun carriage are lacking. However, many officers and men will follow the remains of the young officer to its last resting place and it is expected that many of Peterborough's returned soldiers will attend in uniform. The pall-bearers will be six officers who have returned from the front and the funeral cortege will be headed by the band of the 57th Regiment. The City Council and other local bodies will attend, and it is expected that a number of officers from outside the city will attend, while Lieut.-General Sir Sam Hughes may also be here.

The body will arrive in the city early to-morrow morning.

St. Peter's Patriotic Club Sent 102 Xmas Boxes For Soldiers

At the regular monthly meeting of St. Peter's Patriotic Club last night, the secretary, Mrs. Lehane, presented the following report of the work finished during the month as follows: 15 flannel day shirts, 20 night shirts, 4 dressing gowns, 3 pairs of pyjamas, 71 sheets, 6 pillow cases, 345 towels, 20 pairs of socks. The socks were included with the Christmas parcels and were sent with 39 other pairs that were on hand. The club forwarded one hundred and two boxes as Christmas remembrances to the boys at the front. Boxes will also be sent to those whose names were sent late for the main shipment. The Thursday afternoon teas are proving of material assistance to the ladies in the raising of considerable of the money from which the material for comforts and necessities are made.

Will Discuss The H.C.O.L.

The high cost of living will be discussed by the Mothers' Club of the Y.M.C.A. Mrs. Jos. Kendry will give an address, after which opinions and suggestions will be given by some of the practical mothers of the city as to ways and means of reducing the cost. This meeting will be held in the boys' room of the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday afternoon a three o'clock. All women's societies, mothers' clubs, circles and all women interested are invited to attend.

Clever Student and Good Athlete Has Given His Life For Empire—Bombardier Herbert W. Simmonds Wounded But is Remaining on Duty—Capt. Hudgin Who Was Attached to 93rd Battalion Wounded—To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Among the recent casualties reported in Toronto appeared the name of Cecil Feeney, killed in action, a Peterborough boy who enlisted from St. Michael's College. He was first included among the missing, but at the week end the gleam of hope his friends held out disappeared with the more definite announcement of his death at the front.

Private Feeney was born in Marmora, but passed the greater part of his life in Peterborough. He attended St. Peter's school and afterwards the Collegiate Institute, where he not only exhibited exceptional mental ability, but also splendid athletic skill. At St. Michael's College he amplified both his work in the study hall and on the campus. When he enlisted he was in his third Arts year, with a fine record in his various classes and a bright future opening before him. He was catcher of St. Michael's ball team and played with Father Carr's crack Intermediate Inter-collegiate rugby champions for two years, one of which was in 1914, when St. Michael's also carried off the Intermediate championship of the Dominion in the C.R.F.U. It was learned to-day that after the 1914-15 term Cecil enlisted with a Toronto unit.

His old Peterborough friends, including Collegiate Institute graduates, will learn with regret of Cecil Feeney's death at the same time tenderly remembering him as a good student, a fine athlete, and not least, a boy with innate qualities of a gentleman.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

Daily Orders by W. D. Johnston, Commanding 247th Battalion, C.E.F. Orders for Wednesday, November 8th 1916.

(1) PARADE.—

All officers, N.C.O's and men except those specially employed will parade in Drill Hall, Armouries at 9 a.m. and 2 p.m

(2) DUTIES.—

Orderly Officer for Wednesday—Lieut. F. J. Hayes.

Next for Duty—Lieut. Bandot.

(3) SERGT'S MESS.—

The use of the pool table in the Sergt's Mess is forbidden to all ranks.

(Sgd.) R. B. Brooks, Lieut.,
Acting Adjutant 247th Battalion, C.E.F.

Among the Peterborough men who have returned from overseas in the past couple of days are Gunner J. C. Smith of the 4th Battery, and Ptes. M. Lonergan, W. T. Jeffrey, W. F. McWilliams and Joseph F. Chase of the 39rd Battalion, while Pte. J. King, another member of the 93rd Battalion, is to go to the sanatorium at Cobourg. Gunner Smith, who before the war was employed on the Trent Canal, is the only one who has seen any fighting, and the artilleryman has seen enough for the bunch, as he was at the front for fifteen months as a member of the 4th Battery. In the hard fighting around Ypres he was twice buried by shells and up to June 1st he had been in all the engagements of the 1st Canadian Division, including the affair at Festubert, when the 4th Battery won fame by taking their guns up into the front line trenches and blowing the German parapet to pieces at point blank range. Gunner Smith is suffering badly from shell shock and has been undergoing treatment in England since last June. He will have to go to the Convalescent Hospital at Kingston for further treatment. Mrs. Smith who has been in England is returning to Peterborough.

The Ottawa Free Press says:

"What is the principal cause of rejection among the recruits?" asked the Free Press of Lieut.-Col. R. J. Gardiner A.D.M.S., 3rd Division. "Cold feet' was the blunt reply, and then the colonel went on to tell that the causes for rejection were many.

In a great number of cases the men have heart trouble, and then also diseases of the lungs spoil the chances of many willing men to go to the front.

Col. Gardiner is in the city on a tour of inspection of convalescent homes and other institutions over which he is the divisional head.

KINGSTON, Nov. 6.—The Army Service Corps here is taking part in a big recruiting campaign in this district which aims at securing a total of 2,470 recruits for overseas service.

The number desired in each department is as follows: Motor drivers, 1,000; transport drivers, 900; supply clerks, 180; bakers, 200; butchers, 50; farriers, 30; wheelers, 40; saddlers, 25; fitters, 30; blacksmiths, 10, and electricians, 5.

Major Hamilton has already secured quite a number. They will be sent to a training depot at the Exhibition Grounds, Toronto, every week.

Wounded But at Duty.

Mr. Peter Simmons, 53 Smith street, received an official announcement this morning that his son, Bombardier Huber W. Simmons of the Canadian Artillery, had been wounded on Oct. 21st, but was remaining at duty. Bombardier Simmons was a member of the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery before the war and went overseas with the R.C.H.A. in the first contingent. His friends will be glad to learn that his injuries are not serious.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 6.—The bugle band and one company of the 235th Battalion, which has been in Belleville for some days, left this evening for Cobourg, where they will go into Winter quarters. The remaining officers and companies will have headquarters in this city and recruit in Hastings and Prince Edward Counties.

The Kingston Standard says:

It has been definitely decided that Major Allen, formerly of the 155th battalion, will command the new battalion which has been authorized for Hastings County, with headquarters at Belleville. Major Allen was junior major of the 155th, under Lt.-Col. Adams, and was unable to go overseas with the 155th owing to the fact that all junior majors had been removed from the establishment of overseas units. He is popular in Belleville and throughout Hastings county. He has all the elements essential to a commanding officer, and his friends

AUCTION SALE OF JEWELLERY, ETC.

At E. V. WARNE'S, 225 George street, will be resumed to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, by Mr. Lyons, of New York, auctioneer.

A number of prizes will be given away during the afternoon.

RETURNED SOLDIERS ORGANIZE A CLUB

The Boys Who Are Home From Overseas Form Association at Enthusiastic and Largely Attended Meeting in the Armouries Last Night.

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

At an enthusiastic and largely attended meeting in the armouries last night the Peterborough Returned Soldiers' Club was launched into being with most encouraging prospects for a successful existence. The name practically explains the nature of the club. It is an organization composed exclusively of the Peterborough soldiers who have been invalided home because of wounds or physical disabilities. Its objects will be two-fold, that is the club will promote social gatherings among its members and will be a the same time a powerful instrument to see that Peterborough men who have suffered from the efforts of the Huns' bullets, shells and gas or from the hardships of training and the trenches, get justice when they return, and a fair chance to earn a livelihood.

The club will see that other men as they return home from the front are warmly welcomed, and will investigate complaints that the men who come back may have to make. It should be an immense power for good in this respect as it will do away with a lot of unreasonable "groaning," as the soldiers put it, while at the same time the club will be powerful enough to see that wrongs are righted and justice done.

At last night's meeting the attendance was thoroughly representative of the different quotas that have left Peterborough, the 21st Battalion being practically the only unit unrepresented. The 2nd Battalion was particularly well represented with six soldiers on hand who had seen hard fighting in Flanders. They were Sergts. Percy Vicker, Pte. C. J. Wilcox, Pte. C. Stenson, Pte. F. Mealey, Pte. S. A. Mills and Pte. A. W. Phipps; while other first contingent soldiers present were Lieut. C. H. Reid of the Montreal Heavy Battery and Sergt. J. Cooper of the 4th Battery, C.F.A.

Sergt. Victor was in the chair and after a brief discussion it was decided to proceed with the formation of the club and the election of officers, the following being chosen:

President—Sergt. Peter Victor, 2nd Battalion.

Treasurer—Pte. C. J. Wilcox, 2nd Battalion.

Committee Members—Sergt. J. Coppick, 39th Battalion, Pte. W. F. Scully, 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles.

It is a pleasing coincidence that Sergt. Peter Victor, who was the first Peterborough member of the Canadian Expeditionary Force to be wounded in the present war, should be the first president of the Peterborough Returned Soldiers' Club.

It was decided that the membership fee of the club should be 25c. per month and also that the military authorities be asked for permission for the club to meet periodically in the armouries. The next general meeting of the club will be held on Monday, Nov. 20th, while the committee will hold a meeting on Thursday night of this week to formulate more definite plans. A number of social events, including smokers and "sing songs" are being planned, and it is hoped to make the organization a jolly, closely united band of comrades who will work for the common good of all.

Among those present were Lieut. C. H. Reid, Montreal Heavy Battery; Sergt. J. Cooper, 4th Battery, C.F.A.; Sergt. Peter Victor, 2nd Battalion; Sergt. Chas. Payne, 1st Wiltshires; Sergt. J. Coppick, 39th Battalion; Pte. C. J. Wilcox, 2nd Battalion; Pte. Ed Cooney, 39th Battalion; Pte. A. Gueron, 2nd Canadian Pioneers; Lance Corp. E. Mandeley, 39th Battalion; Pte. S. A. Mills, 2nd Battalion; Pte. F. Mealey, 2nd Battalion; Pte. G. Fallen, 14th Battalion; Pte. Connors, 41st Battalion; Pte. Chas. Stenson, 2nd Battalion; Pte. A. W. Phipps, 2nd Battalion; Pte. Jos. Phelan, 39th Battalion; Pte. T. Hole, 93rd Battalion; Pte. W. Jeffery, 93rd Battalion; Pte. Thos. Quinlan, 93rd Battalion; Pte. M. Lonergan, 93rd Battalion; Pte. W. Scully, 8th C.M.R.; Pte. C. Stenson, 8th C.M.R.; Pte. J. H. Flanell, C.A.S.C.; Pte. J. Sandbach, 39th Battalion; Pte. Chase, 93rd Battalion; Pte. J. Vincent, 93rd Battalion; Pte. R. Mitchell, 93rd Battalion; Pte. W. F. Jackson, 93rd Battalion.

RADIAL RAILWAY DEPUTATION WAITS UPON THE CABINET

Mayor J. J. Duffus, of Peterborough, Was One of the Representatives of the Ontario Association Who Consulted With Cabinet This Afternoon

ASK FOR LEGISLATION

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Nov. 7.—To ask the Provincial government to introduce legislation at the next session of the legislature, giving effect to the resolutions passed at the meeting of the general executive committee of the Hydro Electric Railway Association of Ontario held in Toronto two months ago, the Central executive of the Association waited upon Premier Hearst and the cabinet this forenoon. Sir Adam Beck, chairman of the Hydro Commission, was present during the interview. The deputation consisted of J. W. Lyon, president, T. J. Hannigan, secretary, G. Powell, Hamilton, treasurer, Mayor Church, Toronto, vice-president; G. B. Ryan, Guelph, A. F. Wilson, Markham, Mayor J. J. Duffus, Peterborough, and Acting Mayor Morris of Hamilton. The deputation asked that from time to time orders in council be granted providing funds for the purchase of rights of way for radial railways, as have been guaranteed by electors and also that enabling legislation be enacted making it possible for the municipalities of the Niagara power district to immediately take over the Chippewa Creek power development, complete its construction and operate it through the Hydro Commission as a municipal undertaking, bonds being guaranteed by the provinces by the municipalities, also that legislation be enacted divorcing the Hydro Commission from any department or the control of any department of the government.

Premier Hearst stated that municipalities and the Hydro Commission would be empowered to purchase the right of way where necessary. The Chippewa Creek matter was delayed for a time owing to certain international questions which had to be settled.

PRISONERS' PARCELS FROM SOLDIERS WIVES AND MOTHER'S CLUB

The Soldiers' Wives and Mothers' Club have sent parcels to all Peterboro boys who are prisoners of war in Germany. Each parcel contained:

1 pair of socks.
5 lbs. rolled oats
1½ lbs. of sugar.
1 tin of condensed milk.
1 lb. fruit cake.
2 packets of soup
1 cake of soap.
2 packets of tobacco
2 packets of cigarette paper.
2 packets of gum.

The Club has previously sent parcels, but this is the Christmas present to each prisoner.

A Landslide at M. Fines'

Unloading Sale of Ladies' and Gentlemen's Clothing, Dry Goods, Millinery, etc.

Wednesday morning begins an unreserved unloading sale of all the large and varied stock of ladies' and gentlemen's ready to wear clothing, dry goods, millinery house furnishings, furs, etc., in Mr. M. Fine's store, opposite the Custom House, 302 George street. The proprietor promises buyers that this will be the greatest chance before Christmas to save money on winter needs. All profits, it is stated on the handbills, have been sacrificed, and the prices will be ridiculously low. To every one purchasing five dollars worth of goods and over a free gift will be given of a handsome clothes brush, guaranteed pure bristles. Get a copy of the hand bills and look over the extensive list of bargains. These days of high prices, when it costs so much for food and clothing, anything that will help the working man to buy his winter supplies at the lowest possible cost, will be appreciated, so that the sale of Mr. Fine's is likely to be a success from start to finish. As this sale will last for only ten days, no time should be lost.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, NOV. 7, 1916

OUR SENATOR.

There is no doubt of complete unanimity, irrespective of party or other consideration, of public opinion as to the right and desirability of Peterborough being given one of the Ontario Senate vacancies. The action of the Conservative Association of the city which is technically indicated as the leader, in obtaining popular, local backing seems to be superfluous. It can, however, do no harm to elicit public opinion, through, say the County Council, Board of Trade or other bodies as to the desirability of having a senator for Peterborough appointed. It seems, however, to be flogging a dead horse to seek to find out, what everybody is agreed upon. It is true the government may be influenced by wide-spread expression of popular opinion, and accept the principle of a senator for Peterborough. But the government being brought to this point, the real trouble—if popular opinion is to be consulted—will begin and the question of agreeing upon a candidate will have to be settled. If at the same time with the question of popular approval of the principle, the names of candidates for the position were submitted, the whole matter might be settled at once. It may not, however, fit in with the plans of the Conservative Association to consult public opinion on the point of the personnel of the candidate That may be regarded as a party plum. A body that can procure with great promptitude the dismissal for a second time of an objectionable government official—though its influence does not seem to keep him dismissed, as he is said to be again, for a third time, in government employ—may regard it as its province to dictate the name to be decorated with the senatorial title. As far as the Examiner as representing universal popular opinion, is concerned, the main point is to see that Peterborough claims to the honour of furnishing a senator are not ignored.

HISTORICAL PARALLEL.

The bombastic and premature proclamation issued by the emperors of Germany and Austria, stating that they, "inspired by a firm confidence in final victory of our armies, and a desire to free the Polish territories conquered by their armies "from Russian domination," and make the "Kingdom of Poland a free and happy state"—God save the mark, with perhaps a Hohensollern as its king—seems to appeal to the unhappy Poles. It is, of course, a delusion on their part and will prove a historical parallel to what Poland hoped and fell short of a little more than a century ago. Then Poland expected "enhancipation from Russian domination,' and would have achieved it had Napoleon's invasion of Russia in 1812 been as victorious as it was disastrous. Not because he loved Poland particularly, but because of political necessity. If he had placed Poland on its feet, with a Bonaparte as king, it would have been a bulwark of French supremacy in the east. We all know how the hopes of Poland for emancipation went out with the downfall of the great Corsican, whose ambition of European domination seemed, even at that time, more likely to be realised than Germany's and Austria's hope to have anything to say in settlement of the fate of Poland, or their own fate, when this war is over. The Central Empires potentates are granting their chickens prematurely. By issuing such a bombastic proclamation they are merely whistling to keep their courage up and falsely heartsen their despondent peoples. But it can have no political effect. Even the United States, with all its submission to German insult and outrage, declares that its cannot recognize Poland as an independent kingdom under Teuton supremacy, while the war is on; and afterwards—but as Kipling would say, "that's another story." Poland is doomed to disappointment in its hopes from German arms, as it was in fact in the failure of Napoleon to reclaim its destinies. The Entente Powers, not the Teuton Tooley street tailors, will decide what is to become of Poland, and Serbia and Belgium, which, according to Asquith's pledge, shall regain "all, and more than they have lost." King Canute kicking against the breakers is no more ridiculous and impossible a figure than Kaiser Wilhelm or Francis Joseph, attempting to "shoo" back by bravado, the oncoming tide of defeat.

RECRUITING IMPULSE.

The Mail and Empire, in rather tardy recognition of the work done by the Committee of One Hundred, in promoting the adoption of prohibition, declares the work of the committee is not finished—it should employ its energy and its organization to the promotion of recruiting. This is not, at all, a bad suggestion, but it stops short this side of advocating the greater effectiveness in giving impulse to recruiting. The Mail and Empire could have gone further and done better. It might have brought its influence to bear upon the Dominion government and might have urged it to take prompt and effective steps to give a much needed impulse to recruiting by placing it upon an organized and systematic basis.

Recruiting has become slow; for one reason because the spirit of voluntary enlistment has exhausted the most of the willing material, a condition that impairs the effectiveness of personal and private enterprise, in giving impulse to recruiting. Custom, habit and iteration and reiteration have dulled the edge of viva voce and platform appeal. We need to have recruiting organized, and if there is any gain to be got from National Service organization, that should be speeded up in getting its machinery into operation. It is felt, and has been proven in isolated areas where it has been applied, that national registration, permitting of concentration of pressure, would constitute an impulse and effect to recruiting. The organ of the government, would be doing better service to recruiting if it urged greater interest and more energetic and better directed action upon the government, which is officially charged with the duty and rests under the responsibility, and has the power and the machinery to produce results.

It is not right to expect indefinite continuance of, and to place sole dependence, as has heretofore been done, upon, the personal voluntary spirit in promoting recruiting; that has served its purpose and virtually exhausted its usefulness, in giving impulse to recruiting, as the voluntary spirit has done in the case of recruiting itself.

There seems to be no need for conscription direct, but there is need for some form of organization that will give approximate results. We must have leadership to get results. A Hamilton Labour man, speaking at a naval recruiting meeting in Toronto, said:

"Believe me, when a man is elected to lead he should go and lead. In this country we have no leadership. We need a Lloyd George in the government."

We need, not only a Lloyd George, but a Lord Derby, and a positive force like Lord Asquith. In default of any of these, either in case or in posse, the organs in sympathy with the government can better show their sympathy with recruiting and give recruiting an impulse by urging the government to take some slight official interest and place recruiting upon some sort of organized and systematic basis.

PROHIBITION.

It is a question whether the attitude of the Ontario Government, as expressed by one of its members, Hon. Mr. Ferguson is in accord with public sentiment or public interests. He declares:

"The Temperance Act is here to stay, without varying one jot or tittle, till the war ends."

It is not worth while discussing whether this attitude is consistent with Premier Hearst's endorsation of the wine and beer candidate in the southwest Toronto by-election, foreshadowing, in case of his success, government action in the direction of amendment of the Temperance Act in the wine and beer interests. The point at issue is the Act itself and its effectiveness. The Act is overwhelmingly in accord with legislative and popular opinion and its real object is the total destruction of strong drink as a beverage, and the benefits that will come from such a condition. As it stands, the Act has many imperfections, and lends itself to evasion of the object aimed at; and remedying these imperfections would make the Act proportionally more effective than it is in reducing drunkenness and attendant evils.

Even in its imperfect state the Act is doing great good. Drunkenness has been greatly reduced in prevalence and the whole community is benefitted; its moral tone is heightened and the social and economic conditions vastly improved in every considerably populated centre. The thousands of dollars, formerly spent weekly on drink have gone into the home, for the benefit of the home. Mr. Justice Riddell in an address in a Methodist Church in Toronto on Sunday night, "thanked God that there was now no open sale of whisky in Ontario" and that "the three and a half million dollars spent annually upon liquor were diverted into the proper channels".

At the annual nomination meeting of the Commercial Travellers Association in London, President C. W. McGuire declared his satisfaction with the new standard hotel situation and was satisfied with it so far. Here we have disposed of one stock objection against prohibition—failure to meet the wants of the travelling public.

Prohibition instead of ruining business has helped business, by diverting money in thousands and, throughout the province, in millions, formerly wasted in strong drink, to purchasing purposes. If prohibition confers so many advantages and good results in place of the disadvantage foretold from its application; if it does so much good in an imperfect condition, that is a warrant for making it more effective by amendments at the coming session of the Legislature. In this view Hon. Mr. Ferguson's declaration that "the Act is here to stay without varying one jot or tittle, till the war ends" is not warranted under any aspect of consideration. If the government, with Mr. Ferguson as its spokesman, adheres to that position; if it refuses to amend the act to make it more workable or remove the defects that may discredit it, it can only be inferred that the government will effectually, if not in intention, maintain conditions that may tend to lead to its rejection when the question of its permanency, or abolition comes before the people on popular vote in 1919.

Leaving the Act in its present imperfect condition untouched, while preventing its full usefulness, will not likely weaken public confidence in its wisdom and general effectiveness. Imperfect as it is in some respects it has achieved an immense improvement; and Mr. Ferguson is, no doubt, right in saying that it "has come to stay"—not in his meaning—"till the end of the war", but for all time; not without change or improvement, but with such amendments as are necessary. Both public and parliamentary opinion approve its principle, and not only support, but demand the condition that it should be given full effectiveness so far as legislative action and provision can avail.

AN INDICTMENT OF COLD STORAGE.

Cold storage ought to be subject to a tax based on profits, a tax that would penalize the exhorbitant trader The men who are making fortunes out of old storage by their ruthless holding up of the necessaries of life did nothing to confer on the public the benefit of cold storage. It is doubtful if the inventor and improvers of the economy made great fortunes for themselves. There is no reason why any grasping persons who have done far less good to the world should be allowed to appropriate this good boon for their own enrichment. Next to taxing swollen profits out of the hands of such people, the most practicable thing would be to make cold storage a matter of public ownership and management. The producer of perishable foodstuffs would then be able to store his products and market them in a leisurely manner, instead of having to surrender them at the low prices offered at the critical moment, or have them perish in his hands. If he made the money he ought to be able to obtain warehouse accommodation that will serve his purpose for the time being — Mail and Empire.

The United States' Mistake in Policy At Beginning of the War

It is not pleasant to criticize, but in this campaign so many men have asked what could have been done and what should have been done, that it is permissible to say that we drifted into danger through sheer failure to uphold our own position. Much useless debate has turned upon what should have been done after the Lusitania was sunk. All the fundamental mistakes of our policy had been made long before the Lusitania episode. The German policy of reprisal was against neutral rights, and we should have stopped it at the moment of its inception. This could have been done by firm and courageous action. It would have involved us in no danger. Now, however, we are in real danger, because the highest authorities in this Democratic campaign do not deny that if the resumption of a more reckless form of submarine activity should result in the accidental loss of American lives on merchant ships, President Wilson would make war against Germany. This would be a dire calamity; and it is plain to see that its origin would date back to the time when, instead of challenging and preventing the submarine policy, early in 1915, we yielded our rights and suffered that policy to be entered upon, merely writing a warning note, while awaiting the inevitable.

It is as if in a feud between neighbours one of them should announce to you, a mutual friend, that he intended to shoot across your dooryard and through your windows, with a view to getting at his enemy on the other side, advising you to look out for yourself as best you could. Would you then have informed him that after he had killed one of your children you would hold him to strict accountability, or would you have challenged his proposal immediately, and prevented him, for everybody's best interests, from putting his insane purpose into effect? What we did as a public policy was to inform Germany that when an illegal mode of warfare on the common highway of the seas had resulted—as it certainly must sooner or later—in the death of Americans, we would then proceed to hold her to strict accountability. We did not make it clear whether we would arraign her for the policy, or for the harm to individuals. The atrocious thing in the public sense was the policy itself. We could have stopped it by challenging it instantly. We could also have previously stopped it by informing England that she must conform to the principles we had so clearly laid down in the identic note—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for November, 1916.

CALLING IN THE AUTOCRAT.

It is an unpleasant innovation to find the mouthpiece of a political party in one Province suggesting sinister action on the part of the Lieutenant-Governor of another Province as to his course in relation to his advisers. The Toronto News, a sharp rival of The Mail and Empire for the position of journalistic leader of the Conservative-Nationalist party, published a week ago in extra large type, at the head of its editorial column, an article calling upon the Lieutenant-Governors of Alberta and Saskatchewan to refuse dissolution to their advisers, in case they are asked for it, "unless provision is made for taking the votes of soldiers."—Montreal Herald.

BLUNDERS IN IRISH RECRUITING.

London Chronicle: But for the clumsy way in which the recruiting campaign in Ireland was conducted the Nationalist response would have been greater. Instead of being smoothed away, difficulties were aggravated and the co-operation of the Nationalists was discouraged. What sense was there, in a country so sharply divided in religion and politics, in appointing Protestants and Unionists as recruiting officers in Nationalist districts? A member of a recruiting committee in one city, chiding an enthusiast, said that they were not anxious to stimulate recruiting among Nationalists for fear that Home Rule would go through smoothly after the war. In another instance a military officer in an influential position warned an active recruiter that he ought not to hob-nob with the Nationalists, who, remember, represent four-fifths of the people. In spite of many discouragements, many Nationalists worked hard to get men. Mr. Devlin, one of Belfast's representatives, attended more recruiting meetings than any other member for Ulster. Other Nationalists were discouraged by the unsympathetic attitude of the authorities.

FAITHFUL TO A POLICY.

There is sad humour in the organizing of a deputation to Ottawa to protest and plead against the abnormal advances in prices. The approaching high cost of living was the issue in the latest Federal election. The Liberal Government, with a low cost of living platform, was voted out of office by a large majority. The Conservative Opposition, with a high cost of living platform, was returned to office triumphant. The endorsation of the Dominion was emphatic. Public opinion could not have been more clearly expressed, and the pre-election attitude of the Conservative Opposition has been faithfully maintained in office. So far as sustaining all the influence which make for the high cost of living is concerned, influences active with money and votes during the campaign, pre-election professions and pledges have been faithfully fulfilled.

It is painfully amusing for a deputation to proceed to Ottawa and ask that pledges and platform be violated. It is as if a Ministry returned on an open barroom platform were asked by a deputation to establish prohibition. Any man with sufficient intelligence to mark a ballot paper must now see that freedom from the restraints which foster combines and monopolies is the only available means of lowering artificially inflated prices. There are interests making inordinate profits out of the high cost of living. They naturally use their political power in their own behalf. They were successful in the Dominion election. Until the people who lose by the high cost of living become as intelligent politically as the people who gain, the high cost influences will continue to dominate. —The Globe.

NEW DRESS DON'TS FOR MISS M AND MRS. M

The latest set of "Don'ts" for women was issued yesterday by Mrs. Charles W. Stockton, president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs. They are:

Don't wear your skirt so short that a person can't tell whether you are sixteen or sixty. Don't spend money on dress which ought to go for good books. Don't wear a silly narrow skirt, as you can't get on a train; nor a straw hat in a snowstorm, or a velvet hat in July.

ENORMOUS SUPPLIES USED BY BRITISH IN THE FIELD

LONDON, Nov 4.—In a general way every one has realized that the mere recruitment of men and the supplying them with arms and ammunition was only a part of the work required of the War Office to put the new British army in the field, but not one person in a thousand realized the enormous task and the multitude of incidents which go into the equipment of a force capable of taking its place in the field under modern war conditions.

The War Office has been faced with the necessity of providing everything, from socks to uniform buttons, from mess spoons to great coats, for an army grown in twenty-four months from less than 200,000 to more than 4,000,000. And the success with which this situation has been met is one of the industrial romances of the war.

Figures, as a rule, tell little, but the government has compiled some statistics behind which can be seen the feverish industry, the unceasing toil, which has permitted the men at the front to take their place as an effective fighting machine beside the French and the Russians and the Italians; the labor which made possible the development of the little contingent which crossed to France in August, 1914, to the greatest volunteer army in the history of the world. These statistics are based on reports up to April 1.

To avoid unduly enhanced prices for necessities, not only to the War Office but to the population at large the government carefully guarded all information which might indicate in the earlier days of the war the real extent of the army's needs. Some prices have advanced, but considering the huge additions to the output of clothing, equipment, tools, drugs and all the other stores needed by the armed forces, there has been virtually no scarcity so far as the civilian population is concerned and only small increases in prices. The buying by the government has been done on a definite principle that has kept the widest resources and requirements of the empire always in view.

WOOLLEN, FLANNEL AND COTTON.

During the first twenty months of the war the amount of woollen cloth required for the Army has been 90,000,000 yards, which would suffice to put a girdle twice around the earth. Shirt flannel has been bought to the total of 84,000,000 yards. These figures, it must be remembered, represent solely the army's needs. Here in a table is a comparison of the War Office's needs in textile products in peace years and in war time in yards:—

	Average in peace years	August 1914, to April 1-16
Woollen and worsted cloth	1,149,000	117,000,000
Flannel	1,234,000	84,000,000
Cotton cloth	632,000	194,000,000

To understand more clearly what this implies to the country's industry, however, it would be necessary to take twelve-twentieths of the amount shown in the second column to compare with the average demands in peace years. It will be found that the demand for flannel has been increased forty-one times, for woollens sixty-one times and for cotton 175 times. It is estimated that about twenty-five per cent of the woollens and worsteds and twenty per cent of the cotton textiles manufactured in the country were for use of Britain's allies.

After the fabrics were turned from the looms there was the question of making them into uniforms and shirts. Of the latter more than twenty six million have been required for field and training wear, apart from the further huge total needed in the hospitals. The soldier, whether in training camp or in active service, wears out his clothes rapidly, and the supply department at the War Office has found that the replenishment demands as much clothing now in a week as did the entire army in a year in the days before the war.

It is not the large items that constitute all the difficulties. Buttons might seem to be of small consequence, but more than eight hundred and forty million of them in all shapes and grades, have been used since the war began, not an important commercial factor in itself.

CLOTHING FOR THE TROOPS.

In the actual work of making up uniforms and their accessories, the army clothing factory was soon swamped when the first contingent took the field. The great clothing contractors of London, Leeds and other cities were called on, and with the adjustment of the necessary labor difficulties the work of keeping the new army clothing was thoroughly systemized. This table will show some startling figures.

Boots, pair	227,000	21,750,000
Service jackets	78,000	11,490,000
Service trousers	92,000	11,004,000
Khaki drill frocks	58,000	1,134,000
Khaki drill trousers	73,000	1,167,000
Pantaloons	13,000	2,507,000
Great coats	34,000	4,836,000
Service dress caps	222,000	11,088,000
Socks pair	980,000	54,684,000
Cardigans & jerseys	77,000	7,555,000
Drawers	194,000	23,144,000
Vests		8,855,000

The new situation in regard to boots is especially interesting. In the vast total noted in the table ordinary marching boots alone are considered, and the millions of pairs of canvas shoes and hospital slippers are not included. About one-sixth were supplied to the allied armies, but the figures are exclusive of 7,000,000 pairs of boots made for Russia.

Summarising the clothing statistics, the government finds that the army's needs in twenty months increased between seventy and eighty times the normal requirement. And to the clothing figures may be added properly between nine and ten million pairs of woollen gloves and 13,000,000 "cap comforts".

RELIEVE HEADACHES WITHOUT DOSING

By Applying Sloan's Liniment to Forehead You Can Stop the Severe Pains

Many headaches are of a neuralgic origin. The symptoms of such headaches are intense and lingering pains in the brow, temples or back of the head.

There is one certain relief that has been known and recommended for years back, Sloan's Liniment. One application and the dull pain is practically gone. Rubbing is unnecessary as Sloan's Liniment quickly penetrates to the seat of the trouble.

Aching muscles, rheumatism, bruises, lumbago, chilblains, sprains and stiff neck can also be most effectively treated with Sloans' Liniment. Cleaner than mussy plasters or ointments; it does not stain the skin or clog the pores.

At all drug stores, 25c, 50c $1.00.

UNDERTAKER IS WED AT NIGHT AMONG GRAVES

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 6.—When E. K. Eicholtz, an undertaker of Abilene, Kas., first began to entertain thoughts of being married along last July, he figured the best thing he could do was provide a ceremony befitting his calling.

He wanted a quiet, impressive affair, and what could be more fitting than a wedding at night among the graves in a cemetery?

For the first time the details of the graveyard wedding were disclosed when Mr. and Mrs. Eicholtz came to Kansas City on their honeymoon.

WANTED QUIET WEDDING

"We want to keep it quiet," she told me when we were planning," said the cheerful bridegroom, and his young wife, who was Miss Ruth Maring of Abilene smiled contentedly.

"So I just thought the quietest place would be the cemetery. She reminded me that it might not be a cheerful wedding, but I told her that midnight was the most cheerful time in a cemetery and we'd be married among the pine trees just at midnight."

"And I wouldn't stand for that," spoke up Mrs. Eicholtz. "I thought 9:30 was about late enough for a cemetery wedding, and I wouldn't give in and it went my way."

"Was it gloomy?" repeated Mr. Eicholtz. "Say, I've spent some of my happiest moments in a cemetery. It was most solemn, of course, just as a wedding should be."

PASTOR ONLY WITNESS

And the only living witness to the strange ceremony was the Rev. Dr. Blaney, Abilene minister, who stood beside a tombstone and officiated at a wedding where only a short time before he had preached a funeral sermon.

"O, yes we're enjoying our honeymoon fine," said Mr. Eicholtz. "You see, I also sell tombstones in Abilene, and while we're on a vacation I'm mixing in a little business."

Dates filled with cream cheese and chopped nuts are delicious.

PRESENTATION TO MR. H. TEWSLEY

A most enjoyable event took place at the home of Mr. H. Tewsley, 689 George street last night, when a number of employees of the J. C. Turnbull Co. gathered to express their regret at the fact that Mr. Tewsley is leaving the company. During the evening Mr. Tewsley was presented with a very handsome travelling bag, the presentation being made by Mr. Lapp, while Mr. L. Lancashire read the following address:

H. Tewsley, Esq.

Dear Mr. Tewsley,—We cannot allow the occasion of your severing your connection with The J. C. Turnbull Co. to pass without expressing to you our regret.

In the ten years during which you have been associated with the Company we have to thank you for your unfailing courtesy and uniformly fair dealing with all the employees; and now in parting we ask you to accept this slight token of friendship and goodwill with a sincere wish for your future success and welfare.

COMMITTEE WILL COLLECT RAGS

The playgrounds committee will collect rubbers and rags on Thursday and Friday of this week. The school children are asked to take contributions or rags and rubbers to the schools as follows: On Thursday at the King Edward, South Central and Queen Mary schools, and on Friday at the King George, Central and Queen Alexandria schools. Parcels that are too large to be taken to the schools will be called for if word is sent to Mrs. I. Mowat, whose telephone number is 1583. Householders who have no means of getting their rags and rubbers to the schools are asked to notify Mrs. Mowat and they will be called for. 2d-10†

139TH PART OF 36TH.

"We reached Liverpool after a peaceful voyage on the big liner, 'Southland,' on Friday morning, October 13th. We had all to wear lifebelts from the time we embarked at Halifax until we reached our port. The English regiments have no bands and our musicians created a sensation on the docks at Liverpool. From Liverpool to West Sandling was one continuous ovation to the Canadians. The people lined the streets and with flags and cheers gave us a great reception. The different battalions coming over were transferred to English battalions. The 139th will form part of the 36th Reserve Battalion."

Stomach Was Very Bad Much Dizziness and Pain

The Liver Got Out of Order and the Whole System Was Poisoned

When the course of the food through the alimentary canal is impeded by sluggish action of the liver or bowels the food remains undigested and as a result it ferments.

This gives rise to poisonous gases which crowd about the heart, and cause dizziness and choking sensations as well as irregular action of the heart.

The liver struggles to remove the poisons from the blood, becomes enlarged, and finally fails, allowing the poisons to pass on to every part of the human system. Complications arise, and there is Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries and apoplexy.

The earlier derangements of the digestive system are such as are described by this letter from Mr. Rochon. He also points the way to cure by use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. Louis Rochon, R. R. No. 11, Ottawa, Ont., writes: "For about seven months my stomach was very bad. I was troubled with dizziness, and had gas on the stomach and awful pains in the right side. The liver seemed to be out of order so I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This treatment seemed to be just exactly what I needed and before the first box was all used I was cured, and feeling as well as ever. I also used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when feeling weak and suffering from nervous headache, and was soon restored to good health. I am proud of Dr. Chase's medicines and recommend them above any doctor's medicine."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, twenty-five cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

SUCCESSFUL SOCIAL TEA HELD BY W. A. R. CLUB

The social tea held by the W. A. R. Club at the Turnbull building, Saturday afternoon and evening, was very successful and the young ladies are grateful to those who helped them in arranging for the affair. Mr. Might very generously placed the tea room at their disposal; the Daughters of the Empire loaned their dishes; Mr. Bellingham provided the tables and chairs, and Mr. J. M. Greene loaned a New Edison and a number of records. All necessary carting was done by Mr. Lytle without charge. The room was prettily decorated with flags and red, white and blue material. The young ladies of the Club in their novel costumes, added charm to the occasion.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE AT ALL SAINTS'

Last night a fair-sized audience gathered in the Sunday School of All Saints' Church, where a most interesting illustrated lecture was given on the British Navy. There were two most enjoyable musical numbers given: A piano duet by Miss Flowers and Miss Horsfield, and a vocal solo by Miss Ruby Quartermaine.

The lecture was given under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary

THIS IS GOOD ADVICE TO TAKE

Try Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills For Lame Back

Every pain in the back signifies a trouble that should not be there. If it repeats there is some trouble that should be immediately looked into. Don't allow yourself to become an invalid through kidney trouble, backache or rheumatism. The setting in of cold weather will aggravate this disease, and for your future good health you should give every symptom that shows itself thorough attention. To those who realize the seriousness of these diseases and wish to secure a remedy that will cure them, they will find if they use Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills that they will not only be benefitted, but cured. If they fail in any one case we will, on application, return the amount paid for the pills. Guaranteed and sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter street, Peterborough. att-tf

COMPREHENSIVE HISTORY OF THE PETERBORO' RANGERS

Lt. F. H. Dobbin Has Just Completed a Vividly Interesting Story of the Career of the 57th Regiment

WORK OF MANY MONTHS

Lt. F. H. Dobbin has just completed a comprehensive and vividly interesting history of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers, covering the career of the Peterborough militia organization, from its earliest days to the beginning of the present war. The volume, handsomely illustrated and arranged, represents the work of many months on Mr. Dobbin's part, the difficulties being increased by the fact that many of the records of the Rangers were destroyed by fire, necessitating a long research into the old newspapers and fragmentary records of all kinds. The task was indeed a difficult one, but Mr. Dobbin has admirably succeeded. His book is a treasure trove of information, showing, as it does, the development of the 57th from its first drill days to its career as an eight-company, city organization. The story of the annual camps and inspections, the trips of the Rangers to many points in Ontario, the visit of many outside regiments to Peterborough, the Rangers share in the Northwest Rebellion and the South African war, the presentation of new colors, the visit of Earl Dundonald, and many other events famous in the history of the 57th are all there. Many names still familiar and others practically forgotten are to be found in the story of the early days. The history is illustrated with many photographs, some of them taken many years ago and all of the greatest interest. The majority of these were supplied by the Roy Studio. One interesting photograph was one of the old drill hall, on Murray street, taken many years ago by Pioneer Sergt. Emile Baumer of the 83rd Battalion. Sergt. Baumer made the picture during his first visit to Peterborough, and took it back to Alsace with him, bringing it back to Canada many years afterwards, and presenting it to Mr. Dobbin. Many of the faces in the pictures shown are those of officers and men who have distinguished themselves on the battlefields at the present war and some of whom have made the supreme sacrifice.

The whole book teems with interesting features.

To Keep Your Skin Free From Hairs

(Beauty Topics)

If you are willing to spend a few minutes time in your room using a delatone paste, you can easily banish any ugly, hairy growth without discomfort or injury. The paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This is then spread over the hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rubbed off and the skin washed. You will not be disappointed with this treatment, provided you get real delatone.

Baker Heirs Are Seeking Big Fortune

TORONTO, Nov. 7.—"Baker Heirs' Association, 128 Ellsworth Avenue, Toronto, Ont., Oct. 24th.

An important meeting of the heirs will be held Tuesday, Nov. 7, 1916, at 10 o'clock a.m., in St. George's Hall, 14 Elm street, off Yonge street. Take Yonge, Avenue Road or Dupont cars, getting off at Elm street. Mr. A. F. Chase of Detroit, chairman of the association, will be present to lay before the meeting, matters of vital importance to the heirs. Your presence is requested. Admission by ticket only. All heirs attending the meeting must become members of the association.

S. D. Abell, district representative
W. F. Chase, Chairman.

Baker heirs in Toronto to the number of about 600 have received the foregoing interesting announcement, and will assemble tomorrow morning as requested, to take part in a search for elusive treasure which rivals the day of Francis Drake and the Spanish galleons. Mr. Samuel Abell, a traveller, resides at 128 Ellsworth avenue, the headquarters of the Baker Heirs' Association in Toronto. One of the heirs to-day told The star the story of this quest for gold.

About 130 years ago Jacob Baker, one of the oldest settlers of Philadelphia, died, leaving an estate in what is now the heart of that city, valued at $700,000,000. At the time of his death the property was leased for 99 years, and was placed in the hands of a trust company. Since then the property has become the site of costly office buildings, and the rents have been piling up till they now reach a stupendous figure.

There are supposed to be about 10,000 descendants of Jacob Baker scattered throughout the country, of whom 600 or more are said to reside in Toronto.

According to one of the Baker heirs in the city, who says that he has already invested $1,500, there was held on October 14, at the Danish Brotherhood Hall, 495 Forest avenue, in Detroit, a meeting of a number of the heirs, when those who were present were asked to become members of the Association of Heirs, and contributed $10 towards the funds. The object of the association is to have the United States Government take necessary steps to have the property given a proper title, and the immense toll of rents now resting in Philadelphia vaults assigned to the heirs.

Even weekly wages of $8 or $10 are not attained in New York housemaids.

MILITARY MOTOR CARS TO BEAR "O. H. M. S."

OTTAWA, Nov. 7.—Military motor cars to bear the sign of the King's service hereafter. There are hundreds of such cars overseas and in Canada. Headquarters at Ottawa, as well as every camp and every military unit, have them for the use of officers and for official transport work. It has been discovered that in some cases these cars have spent almost as much of their time serving Venus as Mars. To restrict their use to war purposes only, it has been ordered that the letters "O.H.M.S." shall be painted on all military cars.

TEAMS WILL MAKE COMPLETE CANVASS OF THE CITY IN AID OF THE PATRIOTIC FUND

Meeting Held Last Evening to Complete the Reorganization of the Team Captains and Team Members--A Simple, Easy and Certain Method of Raising $60,000 in the City and $40,000 in the County--Cost Will Not Exceed 42 Cents a Year For Every $1,000 Worth of Taxable Property, including Exemptions.

WILL GET AFTER MUNITION WORKERS

On Monday next the canvassing committee of the Peterborough Patriotic Fund will take initial steps towards a complete canvas of the city with a view of obtaining the feeling of the ratepayers in regard to the proposal to raise the sixty thousand dollars required for the fund by the issuance of debentures covering a period of twenty years. At a meeting held last evening in the quarters assigned to the Fund in the city buildings, team captains were nominated and armed with the authority necessary to inaugurate such a movement. Each member of the team selected for the canvas will be assigned to the various wards and will be armed with a petition which they will present to each ratepayer for endorsation.

Cost Per Thousand.

The petition calls upon the City Council to enact a by-law placing the entire sixty thousand dollars required for the Fund on the assessment roll. The cost to the property owners will amount to approximately forty-two cents per each one thousand dollars worth of real property, exemptions included. Take the case of a property owner with three thousand dollars worth of property, who, in all probability, is now committed to a straight subscription of anywhere from one to ten and, perhaps, fifteen dollars a year. Under the new proposed system he will be taxed to the extent of one dollar and twenty-six cents a year. The new system will also reach those who so far have ignored their obligations towards the Fund.

Income Tax.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin, executive officer of the Fund, outlined the scheme to the meeting. He was followed by D. D. O'Connell, who among other things informed the meeting that an endeavour would be made to have the Ontario Legislature pass some form of enactment that would reach munition workers and other forms of labour in the shape of a minimum income tax, amounting to at least ten dollars a year and operating on the same principal as the poll tax which this year was raised from one to five dollars.

The Petition.

Each ratepayer will be waited upon and asked to attach their signature to the petition, which reads as follows:

"We, the real estate owners in the City of Peterborough, respectfully petition that the Council do grant to the objects and sustenance of the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund the sum of Sixty Thousand dollars ($60,000), the same to be provided for by means of a by-law authorizing such grant, and the issuing of debentures for a term of twenty years to the above amount.

"And in furtherance of which request we have affixed our signatures as evidence of our desire and intention."

The County Grant.

In a week or two representations will be made to the County Council for the purpose of soliciting the county's aid in raising a fund of forty thousand dollars, so that the total amount raised for the Patriotic Fund will be one hundred thousand dollars. The deputation that will wait upon the County Council will suggest to that body the adoption of measures similar to those which it is proposed to adopt in the city namely the raising of the entire amount by the issuance of twenty-year debentures.

The County Share.

Forty thousand dollars is the county's proportion of the amount required by the Fund according to the number of county dependents now on the list of those receiving assistance from the Fund.

One or more of the team captains may be out sooner than next week, in order to avoid pressing business engagements.

The local canvassers feal that owing to the apathy of the people towards the war it would be next to impossible to raise the entire fund by voluntary subscription. Placing it on the tax roll will lighten the burden for everybody and will ensure the Fund the financial support which it merits.

CANADIAN MEDICAL TRIUMPH

LONDON, Nov. 6—Lieut-Col. Clarence Starr, Toronto, who has had charge of the orthopoedic work for Canada is now at the Canadian Special Hospital at Ramsgate, preparing for setting up in Canada several similar institutions.

Colonel Robert Jones, director of Military Orthopoedic of Great Britain, is establishing hospitals similar to the Canadian hospitals at Ramsgate all over Britain. Canada thus led the way in one of the most successful medical enterprises of the war.

Among recent striking cures at Ramsgate is Corporal Hogan, employe of the Grand Trunk. Having been twice wounded at Ypres he was buried alive during the Somme operations while following tanks. When rescued he had lost his speech, hearing, and taste. After ten minutes treatment through mental suggestion at Ramsgate, his deafness and dumbness had vanished and he has since recovered his sense and taste.

Another man named Villeneuve was struck blind by a star shell and went fourteen months from hospital to hospital fruitlessly. Eventually he reached Ramsgate, where special treatment restored his sight, and he is now on active service again in France.

MILLION FOR VENIZELISTS

Allies are Financing the Greek Revolutionary Party.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—The entente powers have loaned the sum of 5,000,000 francs ($1,000,000) to the Provisional Government at Saloniki, according to an Athens despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company. The despatch says that the Athens and Ionian Bank has received an order to advance a preliminary sum of this amount to the Venizelist officials and charge it to the account of the entente powers.

INSTANTLY KILLED ON A LEVEL CROSSING

Belleville, November 6.—Last Saturday evening at 6 o'clock, Richard Oliver, a well known farmer of Mountain View, Prince Edward County, was instantly killed when he was struck by a Canadian Pacific passenger train, at a crossing on the approach to the Bay Bridge, connecting this city with Prince Edward.

Mr. Oliver, who was 68 years of age, was driving to Belleville to meet his wife, who had been visiting in Sidney township. His horse became startled at a yard engine working east of the road, and a young lady who had ridden across the bridge with him got out and at his request let down the buggy top. She walked across the tracks and had just reached the end of the road when she heard a crash, and looking around saw that Mr. Oliver had been struck by a train and flung many yards away. The passenger train from the west, which was late, had approached, the victim's attention being taken up with watching the yard engine.

The crossing is a level one and is protected by a bell. In the past there has been an agitation for gates at this point. The C.P.R. and the C.N.R. lines at this point are adjacent and on one right of way. The victim leaves a wife and two sons.

JEWELRY, ETC., AT AUCTION PRICES

The auction sale of jewellry, etc., at P. V. Warne's store, 325 George Street, has stirred up a good deal of interest in Peterborough. Every article comprised in this stock is being put under the auctioneer's hammer, and will be sold for whatever price is bid, regardless of profit or loss. Mr. Warne is making a complete wreck of prices for the sake of disposing of his entire stock with as little delay as possible, as he is engaged to fill another position out of the city. The store fixtures, Jewellry tools, etc., are included in the sacrifice. As it is urgently necessary to convert these goods into cash, the public will understand why such ridiculously low prices are accepted. Christmas only hang about five weeks away, this sale affords a rare chance for securing valuable gifts at nominal prices. Watch this paper daily for particulars of this sale. No goods exchanged or on approval. All sales are for cash only. The auctioneer is Mr. J. A. Kenny of New York, who is conducting the sale on straightforward methods.

One of the new and attractive features of this sale is the prizes given away to the ladies. On the opening day a diamond ring was presented to the lady present having the lucky number, Mrs. W. F. Browne, of Dalhousie Street, being the fortunate lady.

Cheese, emery, fish and figs are leaders among Grecian exports to this country. Greece's imports from the United States are largely sugar, wheat, flour and rice.

Offensive Gave the Allies 72,981 Prisioners

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, November 7.—On the Somme front from July 1 to November 1 the Franco-British forces have captured 71,532 men, 1,449 officers and 988 machine guns in their great offensive. They took also 178 field guns and 215 trench mortars, the War Office announced.

Will Ask County Council To Support Move For Senator

When the County Council meets two weeks hence they will be waited upon by a delegation from the West Peterborough Conservative Association with a request to support the present movement for the appointment of a Senator from Peterborough. Representing the entire county, it is felt that their co-operation will carry weight with the petition, which will be presented to Sir Robert Borden by a numerous deputation that will go to Ottawa in the near future. The Board of Trade will be asked for their sanction, likewise the Retail Grocers and other representative bodies.

In the consideration of this question thus far, it has remained entirely open. At the meetings of the Conservative Association no individual has been nominated for the honour, which, it is believed, will be bestowed upon Peterborough by the Premier. It was felt that the people should make their own selection, and an effort to obtain an expression of their favour will be made before any name is included in the petition.

PRESIDENT IS ESCORTED BY A BODY GUARD

Examiner Special:

PRINCETON, N.J., Nov. 7. — It required sixteen men, three autos, four hours and fifty-four gallons of gasoline to deliver President Wilson's vote for himself here to-day. The President with his bodyguard of secret service men and retinue of newspaper correspondents, made the trip from Shadow Lawn early in the morning, and although it was only 9 o'clock when the President reached the polls, he was the fiftieth voter. The Booth was in a fire engine house. The President's arrival was quickly learned by residents here, and a big crowd of people gathered about the voting place to cheer the executive. He was given an ovation by Princeton students in passing through the streets of the city.

G.T.R. COMPANY ACCEPTS FINDING

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Nov. 7—The Grand Trunk Railway Co. has accepted the finding of the Board of Arbitration appointed to inquire into the dispute between the company and its maintenance hours of labour. The report was made two weeks ago, but the company for a time hesitated to accept the finding at first. Hopes are expressed that the C.N.R. and C.P.R. disputes with their maintenance of way men will be decided amicably along the lines of the G.T.R. decision.

Shot Five Deer In Two Days

LINDSAY, Nov. 7.—The Lindsay hunting party, comprising Capt. Maple, George Clark, Fred Coatsworth, A. McGahey and Foster Lytle, have returned from the deer haunts with five deer, having established a record in the deer hunting line insofar as their length of stay in camp was concerned. The hunters were only two days in camp at Deer Bay, Peterborough County, where they bagged the five deer. Those secured by Capt. Maple and Fred Coatsworth were large bucks.

WINNIPEGGER KILLED BY AUSTRIAN IN SHACK

Winnipeg, Nov. 7.—Geo. Clements, aged 42, a son of the late George Clements, an old time tailor of Winnipeg, was murdered it is alleged on Saturday in a little shack four miles west of Husavik, near Sandy Hook, Lake Winnipeg, by Mike Hyrhorcsuk an Austrian. Mr. Clements with three other Winnipeg gentlemen, on Friday went down to Winnipeg Beach to lock up their summer cottages for the winter, and on finding that a number of articles had been stolen they enlisted the services of the mounted police. On reaching the shack of Hyrhorcsuk Mr. Clements identified several of the articles stolen and while he was stooping to examine a pail the Austrian reached for a gun and fired. Hyrhorcsuk then tried to reload, but a constable and a farmer who had driven with him to the shack, after a desperate struggle lasting four hours, during which time several women of the Austrian's family took part in the fracas, effected his arrest.

For a number of years Mr. Clements was in the real estate business, but during the past year has been engaged in the grain business with the Columbia Grain Company. He was prominent in local sporting circles.

Prof. Grisdale says he never saw an acre of hay on the Experimental farm into which alfalfa does not enter as one of the grasses.

DEUTSCHLAND READY TO DASH NEXT FRIDAY

New London, Conn., Nov. 7.—Captain Paul Koenig of the German submarine merchantman Deutschland, which arrived here last Wednesday, has indicated that he would make his homeward dash next Friday, probably late in the afternoon. While the captain would not make a definite statement, there was plenty of evidence tending to show that preparations were being made for an early start back to Bremen.

There was a fresh crop of rumors of the presence of a number of cruisers outside the three mile limit, but confirmation was lacking.

Pig iron weighing several hundred tons, used for ballast in the Deutschland, was removed yesterday. As the nickel and crude rubber for the return cargo is much heavier than the dyes and drugs brought over, the craft will not need the ballast.

Within a few hours the storing of more than fifty carloads of material held here for weeks will be commenced and it is believed that as far as the cargo is concerned the undersea boat will be ready to leave in a week.

GERMANS DENY CONVOY STORY

Washington, Nov. 7.—The German Embassy declares that it has no knowledge of a person to furnish a fighting submarine convoy for the merchant submarine Deutschland on her return trip, and agrees that such a convoy would take away the Deutschland's status as a peaceful merchant man. This is a well recognized principle of international law, the officials at the Embassy said.

At the British Embassy officials say if the Deutschland is met by a convoy outside the three mile limit she would undoubtedly supply that vessel with fuel, which would in their opinion remove her peaceful character.

CLIP CONTROLLERS' WINGS.

Montreal Aldermen Vote to Amalgamate Board With Council.

MONTREAL, Nov. 7.—A majority of the Aldermen voted yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the City Council for a temporary amalgamation of the Board of Control with the Aldermen to carry on the civic administration until the civic elections in 1918, when it is proposed to abolish the Board of Control.

An amendment to the city charter is being sought at Quebec to the end that the Board of Control may cease to exist, and pending the legislation desired by the Aldermen they propose to clip the Controllers' wings by "amalgamating" them with the Aldermen in such a fashion as to nullify the Controllers' powers.

DIES FROM MOTOR MISHAP.

MONTREAL, Nov. 7.—Count de Kermena, a Frenchman of noble family, who came to this city nearly forty years ago, and was a professor of languages, died yesterday at the Hotel Dieu as a result of an automobile accident. He was fifty-eight years of age.

GREEK REGIMENT JOINS THE ALLIES

PARIS, Nov. 7.—A Havas despatch from Athens says: Colonel Calomenopoulos, commanding the 43rd Regiment at Volo, with numerous officers and virtually all the soldiers, has joined the Nationalist movement. He will report to General Sarrail, the French Commander of the allied forces, and make an effort to regain the Greek forts which were turned over to the Bulgarians.

London, Nov. 6.—Reuter's Athens correspondent says advices from Patras report that the French flag was hoisted yesterday on the Greek light flotilla at Keratsini.

The Greek Government last week refused to permit the Entente to use this flotilla for patrol purposes on the ground that it would be equivalent to a departure from neutrality.

STOMACH MEDICINES ARE DANGEROUS

DOCTORS NOW ADVISE MAGNESIA

Just how dangerous it is to indiscriminately dose the stomach with drugs and medicines is often not realized until too late. It seems so simple to swallow a dose of some special mixture or take tablets of soda, pepsin, bismuth, etc., after meals, and the folly of this drugging is not apparent until, perhaps years afterward when it is found that gastric ulcers have almost eaten their way through the stomach walls. Regrets are then unavailing; it is in the early stages when indigestion, dyspepsia, heartburn, flatulence, etc., indicates excessive acidity of the stomach and fermentation of food contents that prevention should be taken. Drugs and medicines are unsuitable and often dangerous—they have little or no influence upon the harmful acid, and that is why doctors are discarding them and advising sufferers from indigestion and stomach trouble to get rid of the dangerous acid and keep the food contents bland and sweet by taking a little pure bisurated magnesia instead. Bisurated Magnesia is an absolutely pure article which can be readily obtained from any drug store. It is absolutely harmless, is practically tasteless and a teaspoonful taken in a little warm or cold water after meals, will usually be found quite sufficient to instantly neutralize excessive acidity of the stomach and prevent all possibility of the food fermenting.

Only Early Mail To Reach the Soldiers

OTTAWA, Nov. 6—A memorandum relating to overseas mail for soldiers was issued by the Post Office Department this morning as follows:

"In view of numerous enquiries as to the last date on which parcels can be posted to ensure delivery to overseas soldiers before Christmas, it is thought well to state, having regard to the irregularity in the Atlantic service, and the possibility of congestion, that the earlier parcels for overseas soldiers are mailed the better, if it is desired that they should be delivered before Christmas, this being particularly true as regards parcels for soldiers on the continent, which should be mailed as early as possible so that the greatest latitude will be afforded in order to ensure delivery before Christmas.

"In every case the mailing of these parcels should take place before the middle of the present month. It is possible that letters might be mailed as late as the last week in November and be delivered to the overseas troops before Christmas, but letters should be mailed as early as possible in order to provide for all contingencies."

MONTREAL TO PAY $500 FOR EGGS SEIZED

MONTREAL, Nov. 7.—The city of Montreal was condemned by the Court of Appeals to pay John Layton and Company, Limited, $500 as compensation for the famous seizure of $100,000 worth of Chinese frozen eggs on their arrival in this city in October, 1910. The company sued for $58,000, and this action was dismissed by Mr. Justice Monet in the Superior Court of Quebec on June 28, 1915. The company appealed and the decision yesterday was on the appeal. The appellants' head office is in London, England, and they have an American office in New York. The frozen eggs were shipped in cans and bulk, having been put in Hankow, China, shipped to Liverpool, and thence to Montreal. The shipment to this city consisted of 236 tons. Fifty tons were forwarded to Toronto, and the balance stored in a local cold-storage establishment. The eggs were seized by the city on the ground that they were not wholesome and suitable for food.

Will Friday Be Unlucky Day?

NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 7.—Captain Paul Koenig of the German submarine merchantman Deutschland, which arrived here last Wednesday, indicated yesterday that he would make his homeward dash next Friday—probably late in the afternoon. While the captain would not make a definite statement, there was plenty of evidence tending to show that preparations were being made for an early start back to Bremen.

There was a fresh crop of rumours yesterday of the presence of a number of cruisers of the Entente powers outside the three-mile limit, but confirmation was lacking.

Cargo Worth $10,000,000.

BRIDGENORTH, Conn., Nov. 7.—That the cargo of the German merchant submarine Deutschland now at New London amounted to approximately $10,000,000 was announced here by James L. McGovern, collector of customs for Connecticut. Of this sum, he said, $9,000,000 was represented by stocks, bonds and other securities shipped from Germany for the purpose of strengthening German credit in the United States.

About $1,000,000 of the value of the cargo, Mr. McGovern said, consisted of dyestuffs, medicines and chemicals. A very small proportion was represented by diamonds and other precious stones, he declared.

EARLE WILLIAMS
in "The Car and His Majesty" from "The Scarlet Runner"

The two million dollar serial, first featured in The Strand Magazine, next issued in book form and now dramatized in 12 parts. TO-NIGHT the First Episode, in two reels, each Episode being a complete story, of—

The Scarlet Runner

To-Night's Episode of this wonderful story is entitled "THE CAR AND HIS MAJESTY." It presents EARLE WILLIAMS, one of the best Actors of America, to play this important part. The whole story is full of strong dramatic situations.

We also present CHAS. KENT and MARY MAURICE who made the "BATTLE CRY OF PEACE" so great a success, in a three reel Drama—

"THE INNER GLOW"

Also a grand Comedy, run in two reels "MISS FRECKLES," "THE THREE JOHNS," "THE BOGUS GHOST" and others. This great selection for the same price of 10c, which covers War Tax.

Local G. T. R. Employees Who Receive Permanent Passes

Four of the station employees are eligible for the Grand Trunk Railway Company's considerate offer to its workmen of a permanent pass over its lines. Those who have been with the Company fifteen years receive for themselves and their wives a pass over the lines in the district within the district of the Divisional Superintendent. To those who have been twenty years in the service of the Company a pass is given over the entire system. This also includes the employee's wife or a dependent. Mr. Fred Clementi of the station, and three gatemen Messrs. Charlie Noyes, Jack Horner, and John Midleck have served over fifteen years, and it is believed that each of them is eligible for the pass over the entire system. Other fifteen-year men are the following section foremen: Tom Jackson, Harry Noyes, John Wellburn, and Mr. Alf. Wellburn of Lakefield. Pensioned foremen include the general pass Mr. Wm. Pilling is one of the local pensioners of the Company. Obviously the men all appreciate this offer from the Company and hope that they will be able to make use of their passes. It means that they and their wives may visit relatives and friends, and all they need to show conductors is the Company's pass. The Companies are rapidly developing a paternal spirit that appears decidedly commendable.

A STRONG ATTRACTION AT THE GRAND FOR THE PRESENT WEEK

Priestland-Chamberlain Company Have Good Caste And Splendid List of Plays

The Priestland-Chamberlain Producing Company opened a week's engagement at the Grand last night with a thoroughly artistic production of the New York success, "Slaves of the Mill," a drama based on the eternal struggle between capital and labour. The company proved one of the strongest repertoire attractions that has visited Peterborough, and their thoroughly efficient work last night should ensure them capacity business all through the week. The company is well balanced and clever and with a strong list of plays should earn a warm spot in the hearts of Peterborough's theatre-goers. H. Webb Chamberlain, Frank Priestland, Miss Warda Sayre and other members of the caste gave sparkling interpretations of their parts. To-night the company will present Nat Goodwin's amusing three-act comedy, "The Chauffeur."

MANY WITNESSES FOR THE DUMMER CASE

It is understood that the county authorities have liberally "papered" the countryside of Dummer and the surrounding district with subpoenas for the preliminary hearing of the charge of cattle stealing against David Hill et al. The authorities have been delving away since last Friday but their search for the material witnesses they needed last Wednesday has been fruitless up to this afternoon.

"September Morn" Coming Again

Musical Comedy That Won So Many Laurels Here Will Be at Grand Next Monday

She is coming—dear little Miss "September Morn"—clothed in the form of a three act musical comedy with gorgeous costumes, irresistable comedians, songs and girls—lot of them. Wm. Moore, is the bright, shining star of the play, which is presented by La Comte and Flesher's specially selected musical comedy company of nearly fifty. Many new dances have been staged including the latest foreign creation called the "Shark Swish Dip."

Besides Wm. Moore, the company contains Ruth Wilkins, the "American Gaby Deslys" who is a wonderful dancer and clever otherwise and that splendid actress and singer, Maud K. Williams, who is seen in a prominent role and the company embraces many entertainers, out of the ordinary, besides a big chorus of pretty girls. The big La salle Opera House (Chicago) Company and production will be seen in this city next Monday night, November 13th at the Grand Opera House.

German Papers Take No Sides

BERLIN, Nov. 7. The German press shows considerable interest in the approaching American election, printing all available news arriving by way of Holland or re-printing summaries of the situation from old English newspapers.

The Catholic organ, the Kolnische Volks Zeitung, to-day devoted a lengthy editorial to the subject but studiously avoided taking sides. If the German people at one time, it says, sided with one of the candidates because they assumed that he was more friendly to Germany, they now see their mistake.

The Frankfurter Zeitung also prints a leading editorial expressing the opinion that the outcome of the election is very much in doubt. It treats with great sympathy President Wilson's programme for eliminating war through a peace organization established through propaganda of the peace idea, but refrains from expressing preference between candidates.

Among the smartest sports dresses seen in New York was one of rough navy blue flannel trimmed with a tan flannel collar, cuffs and belt edged with bright Paisley twill.

INVESTIGATING THE OUTBREAK

Special to Examiner:

TORONTO, Nov. 7.—The Provincial Board of Health has received an interesting report from Dr. Maloney of Cornwall, the special officer of the board sent to Montreal and Westmount to investigate the outbreak of infantile paralysis there. Dr. Maloney reports that careful inquiry of medical officers has failed to discover the probable sources of the epidemic, but from outside information it is learned the disease came from New York. Dr. Maloney also reports that the number of diseases is larger than first reported to the Ontario Board of Health. The disease is chiefly among the English-speaking people, and the well-to-do class. It is being kept under control.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

TWO MILITARY TEAMS ARE FIRST IN THE O. H. A.

TORONTO, Nov. 7.—The first clubs to enter teams in the O.H.A. for the coming season are from military organizations, viz., the 227th Battalion located at Hamilton, and the 235th Battalion, at present located at Belleville.

The 227th Battalion was recruited along the North Shore, and includes all the crack amateur hockey players from Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie. The Sudbury team was especially strong last year, and its supporters claimed that it was the best amateur team in Canada. The 227th has entered both senior and intermediate teams in the O.H.A. Lieut. H. G. Rees is the President of the 227th Hockey Club, with Sergt. R. A. McKinnon Secretary. They should cut quite a big figure in the O.H.A. senior ranks this winter, and put Hamilton in a high place on the hockey map.

235th Battalion May Move.

The 235th Battalion will have a team in the intermediate series, and, while at present located at Belleville, may be moved to Cobourg or some other town along the lake front. Capt. C. W. E. Meath is President, and Sergt. H. Kingscott Secretary of the 235th team, which has a number of good hockey players in its line-up.

At the annual meeting of the O. H. A., which will be held early next month, each club whose fees are paid will be entitled to one delegate. Notice of amendments to constitution, etc., are due November 18, and nominations for office November 25. Certificates are issued to all players. Junior players must be under 20 years of age January 1, 1917. Official birth certificates are required. Under the required O.H.A. residence rule a player must be a bona-fide and continuous resident of the town to which his club belongs since August 1, 1916.

Exceptions to Residence Rule.

The exceptions are enlisted soldiers students, teachers and sailors. The last named must play where they were living last January. Soldiers enlisted for overseas service, like students and teachers, may play in their home towns, with a soldiers' team, in the town or regimental district in which they are located, or with any team in the town in which they are located. Players living in rural districts, villages or police villages must play in the nearest O.H.A. town. A junior player, however, has the privilege of playing in the nearest town to his residence which has an O. H. A. junior team.

MILITARY NEWS

will rally to his aid in giving Belleville another good battalion. The order for the new battalion will be officially promulgated in a few days.

The Kingston Standard says:

The appointment of Captain O'Flynn of Belleville as second in command of the 247th battalion of Peterborough, settles the controversy that has been waging for some time in Belleville as to who would command the new battalion proposed for Hastings county. Captain O'Flynn was a candidate for the appointment, and his many friends were urging that the young returned officer be given the rank of Lt.-Colonel, and placed in command of the Belleville unit.

In the casualty list to-day appears the name of an officer who is well-known in Peterborough in the person of Capt. E. G. Hudgin of Picton. Capt. Hudgin was attached to the 93rd Battalion for a short time last autumn. By hockey fans he will be remembered as a member of the Picton hockey club.

An official message to-day states that Corp. Grant Potter, son of Rev. J. G. Potter of Montreal, formerly of St. Andrew's, Peterborough, is seriously ill. He was badly wounded several months ago.

FIRST RETURNS FAVOUR HUGHES

Special to The Examiner:

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Nov. 7.—New Ashford, the smallest town in Massachusetts County, was the first town in Berks County in the U. S. to-day first town in the United States to-day to announce its election result. Out of twenty-five registered voters twenty-three went to the polls and made known their choice for President, as follows: Hughes 16, Wilson 7. In 1912, New Ashford's vote for President was: Roosevelt 6, Taft 7, Wilson 4.

RED CROSS DAY AT THE STRAND

The executive of the Red Cross desire to acknowledge, with hearty thanks the courtesy and generosity of Mr. Schneider in placing at their disposal both afternoon and evening, the Strand Theatre.

The pictures were very good and remarkably clear and steady. Large audiences were present and a substantial sum was thus raised for the local society.

An added pleasure to the evening's entertainment was afforded through the kindness of J. M. Greene & Co., who provided an Edison Diamond Disc and some other splendid records, both vocal and instrumental which were enjoyed by those present.

Those who ushered were Miss Maud Rush, the Misses Gladman and Miss Jean Neill.

The latest "Concerts at the Front" party to be despatched by Lena Ashwell are seven artistes who have just gone to Egypt to visit troops and hospitals for several months.

MR. WALTER CLUXTON AT THE GRAND

Well-Known Peterboro Boy Here With The Royal Alexandra Players

Among the stars with the Royal Alexander players at the Grand Opera House this week is a well-known Peterborough boy, Mr. Walter Cluxton, grandson of the late Wm. Cluxton. Mr. Cluxton has been kept busy shaking hands with his many friends. He was here in "A Message from Mars" a number of years ago, and later with Nat Goodwin in "Never Say Die." Mr. Cluxton will be at the Grand all this week, and his friends will welcome the opportunity of seeing him.

"The Slaves of the Mill," which made such a hit last night, will be repeated on Friday night.

Sailors in Demand

Men Signed up as Fast as Released From Steamers.

SARNIA, Nov. 7.—As fast as the lake boats, big and little, lay up here for the winter, the men who have manned them are being sought after by employers who are suffering from a shortage of help. There are many such in Sarnia and as the sailors are all big strong men they are finding any amount of work for the winter at high wages. Many of the boat-owners are making arrangements with men who have proven valuable during the summer to re-engage with them as soon as navigation opens next spring. In this way they are endeavouring to avoid a shortage of help for themselves.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION RESULTS ARE STILL A MATTER OF DOUBT

Neither Hughes or Wilson Had Been Elected at Eight O'clock This Morning on the Basis of the Official Returns From Yesterday's Election—Only Once in the History of the Nation Has the Situation Been Equalled—The Last Available Figures Give Wilson a Lead of Five Votes.

WILSON 237, HUGHES 232

NEW YORK, November 8.—Neither Chas. Evans Hughes nor Woodrow Wilson had been elected President of the United States on the basis of the official returns from yesterday's election available at 8 a.m. to-day. The count as gathered by the United Press to that hour showed: Wilson 237, Hughes 232. Still in doubt 62. States in the classification of Doubtful included California 13 electoral votes, Indiana 15, Kansas 10, Minnesota 12, New Hampshire 4, New Mexico 3, Oregon 5. Only once before in the history of the nation has to-day's situation in the Presidential election been paralleled, and that was in the historic Tilden-Hayes campaign of 1876. Then Hayes was adjudged the victor, after a bitter contest, by one electoral vote. American political history was enriched by last night's amazing swing back and forth of the returns for Hughes, against Wilson, and for Wilson and against Hughes. The first returns, available shortly after six o'clock, showed Wilson leading. Then came a Hughes sweep with a tremendous lead in New York, and reports of a big plurality for the G.O.P. in Kansas, and Massachusetts. Preliminary returns added to the Republican candidate's growing list. But once more the swing changed. A Wilson drift set in. Ohio went unmistakably Democratic, and the President's managers began questioning the Massachusetts returns. They gained as later returns from Indiana offset the first favourable Hughes trend. At 8 o'clock this morning the President was five votes ahead of his Republican opponent in the returns as gathered by the United Press.

LOOKS LIKE WILSON.

NEW YORK, November 8.—Charles E. Hughes made his first appearance to-day when he opened the door of his room, in the Hotel Astor, called Lawrence Green, his secretary, and asked Green to bring him the latest returns. Green scurried away remarking that "It looks dangerously close."

ASBURY PARK, N.J., November 8.—Secretary Tumulty told President Wilson early to-day that at 7:30 the President could feel assured that he had a minimum of 264 electoral votes—two less than necessary to elect—and that "things were constantly looking better." Included in the State Tumulty figured for Wilson in arriving at this conclusion, were Minnesota and Kansas. Tumulty did not figure in Idaho, California, New Mexico, New Hampshire, Deleware or West Virginia, which are included among the debatable States.

A DEMOCRATIC CONGRESS.

NEW YORK, November 8.—Even if Charles Evans Hughes squeezes Woodrow Wilson out of the Presidency he will be faced by a Democratic Congress. It is evident that the Republicans have not elected the ten senators required to dominate that body, which has unlimited possibilities of vetoe. With about one hundred Congressional districts to hear from, the Republicans seem to have made small gains in the House of Representatives, but they haven't a majority.

Early this morning Chairman Vance McCormick said Wilson was re-elected, and wired to every State and County chairman where the result was close: "Our opponents are desperate, you must personally see that the ballot boxes are guarded and protected, and nothing left undone to safeguard our victory."

COLUMBUS, Ohio, November 8.—Woodrow Wilson carried Ohio in a landslide. Predictions early to-day based on 86 counties, give him the State by fifty thousand. Carried along with the landslide were James Cox for Governor and Atlee Pomerene for United States Senator, beating Governor Willis and Myron T. Herrick by pluralities of from 10,000 to 30,000.

ONLY TWO OFFICERS ABOARD LANAO WHO WERE NOT AMERICAN CITIZENS

Captain, a Chinaman, Tells of Attack—Stood By to Aid Survivors of Norwegian Vessel, Which Was Being Attacked Off Portuguese Coast—Submarine Officers Took Everything of Value From Lanao—Later Sank Italian Ship and Attacked British Vessel Which Fought Back and Escaped.

SPOKE EXCELLENT ENGLISH

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The morning papers give great prominence to the report that the steamer Lanao, sunk by a German submarine, was an American ship. Lloyd's report that the vessel was no longer of American registry has not yet been published here.

The Lanao was hailed in the darkness, 25 miles off the Portuguese coast, by a German submarine on November 2. The chief officer, who is a Chinaman, took the crew aboard the submarine which sank the Lanao by a bomb placed in the engine room. Members of the crew say that while they were aboard the submarine a British steamer was unsuccessfully attacked.

STOOD BY TO HELP.

A Daily Chronicle despatch from Barry, Wales, says: The officers and crew of the United States steamer Lanao were landed by the Norwegian vessel Thromp at Barry Saturday night. The Lanao was bound from Manila to Havre with a cargo of rice. Captain Mainland, the commander; G. Godinez, chief officer, and William Munson, chief engineer of the Lanao, were seen by me and told the story of their adventures. "On the evening of October 20," said Mainland, "we were passing St. Vincent, on the Portuguese coast, when we encountered a German submarine. When we sighted her she was engaged in sinking a Norwegian vessel. She afterwards endeavoured to sink an English ship, but was driven off by the guns of the latter. We slackened speed and stood by the Norwegian steamer in case it should be possible to save any of the crew.

IMPERATIVE ORDERS.

"The submarine, which seemed about 300 feet long, fired three warning shots across our bow. This, we understood as a signal that they wished us to stand by and communicate with them. Chief Officer Godinez and four of the crew rowed over in one of our boats, went aboard the submarine. He treated them with every courtesy. The commander of the submarine, who

THE LITTLE FORTUNE

BY ARNOLD FREDERICKS

"Now we can hold them on the charge of attempted murder, until the necessary papers have been obtained, which will result in bringing Hartmann to New York for the murder of Reinhardt."

"You still believe, then," said Grace, "that Vernon is really Hartmann, the companion and murderer of Reinhardt?"

"Yes. What has really become of Vernon himself I cannot say."

"I can," said Grace.

Her husband gazed at her, somewhat incredulous. "You have found out something?" he asked.

"I have found out everything, Richard," she said. "Vernon is Hartmann! Hartmann is Vernon! They are one and the same!"

CHAPTER XXI.

LEFEVRE SOLVES A MYSTERY.

Some ten days after the arrest in Paris of the man who had represented himself as George Vernon, and the woman who had been his companion, a party of several people gathered in the office of Mr. Germaine, the managing director of the Trans-atlantic Line.

The party consisted of Mr. Germaine himself, Mr. Ogden Morris, Mlle. Mercier, Captain Bonnot, whose vessel had arrived in port that morning, and Barnes, the chief detective of the line.

They were awaiting the arrival of M. Lefevre, the prefect of police. He had requested them to meet him at Mr. Germaine's office, and all realized that it was for the purpose of laying before them the solution of the mystery which for nearly a month had surrounded the disappearance of the Richelieu's purser, and with him of the singular coin which had formed Mlle. Mercier's legacy.

During the two weeks which had elapsed since the sailing of the Richelieu, Mr. Germaine had heard nothing further of M. Lefevre. He had, in fact, dismissed the whole matter from his mind, fully believing that the prefect would handle it with entire satisfaction to all concerned.

The message from Lefevre, therefore, requesting a meeting on this morning, came as somewhat of a relief. He concluded that now the whole matter would be finally cleared up.

Captain Bonnot, whom he now saw for the first time since his departure, was able to give him no further information. "M. Lefevre left the vessel at Havre after we had had a slight misunderstanding. That is all that I know. Vernon went to Paris saying that he wished to take a vacation of a month or two before resuming his duties. I have not heard anything of him since. As for the statement that the man was not Vernon at all, it is absurd. There can be doubt in the matter whatever."

Mr. Morris sat in a corner of the room, smoking his usual black cigar. He had little to say. "Wait until M. Lefevre arrives," was all Mr. Germaine could get out of him.

Barnes seemed to share his feelings. His efforts to locate Hartmann in New York had proven a fatal failure to him. He preferred not to refer to the subject at all.

At ten o'clock promptly the prefect came in. He was as immaculately dressed, as debonair, as ever. Even the gardenia in the label of his coat seemed still to bear upon it the moisture of the early morning dew.

He bowed to the assembled party, sat down, and began to pull off his yellow chamois skin gloves. "I am delighted to see you, captain," he said, turning to Bonnot. "I trust you have quite forgotten that unfortunate argument we had the day before our arrival at Havre."

"Oh—quite—quite. I assure you," Bonnot replied, a rather startled look crossing his face. "I trust I made no mistake."

"None that was not readily rectified," replied the prefect, winking surreptitiously at Mr. Morris. "You were a little wrong concerning Mr. Vernon, but I will admit, so was I. We are therefore quits."

He turned to Mr. Germaine.

"If you wish, monsieur," he said, "I will relate as briefly as possible a story which concerns, more or less, nearly every one in this room."

"Go ahead, monsieur. I am eager to hear it, and I do not doubt that the others here share my feelings."

The prefect cleared his throat. "The matter begins," he said, with the death of this young lady's father, Alphonse Mercier." He paused and then glanced for a moment at the young girl, then resumed his story.

"The originator of the scheme to defraud Mlle. Mercier of the legacy left to her by her father, was the latter's physician, Reinhardt, who as you will remember was later murdered by his accomplice at the Hotel Rochambeau.

"This man, Reinhardt, came originally from Havre, and was in the past a boon companion of George Vernon, also a native of that place.

"After Reinhardt came to Paris to practice they saw little of each other, but still kept up their friendship.

"So far as I can learn, Vernon occasionally went up to Paris while ashore and he and Reinhardt were in the habit of going on drinking and gambling bouts together, during which they both lost considerable sums of money.

"On the morning that Alphonse Mercier sent for Mr. Morris, for the purpose of disposing of his little collection of coins, he busied himself by cleaning them, preparatory to turning them over to Mr. Morris.

"While doing so he made a startling and unexpected discovery. The one-franc piece of the first Napoleon he found to be of enormous value, not intrinsically—not even as a rare coin, but because of a certain matter concerning it which I will explain later.

"This news he communicated in part to his physician, Reinhardt, who happened to be with him at the time. He did not tell Reinhardt the real secret of the coin, but he did tell him it was of great value.

"The idea of obtaining possession of it at once entered Reinhardt's head. He would have done so then and fled, but for the arrival of Mr. Morris. He saw the franc placed in the envelope directed to Mlle. Mercier along with her father's letter, and saw Mr. Morris take them away with him.

"He knew that Mr. Morris planned to sail for America on the Richelieu the following day, and he at once went to Havre, and sought out his friend, George Vernon. Between them they concocted a plan to obtain possession of the coin, which is to my mind, unequalled in its diabolical cleverness.

"Vernon, of course, knew that he could readily remove the package from the vessel's safe but he also knew that he could not possibly get away with it. Mr. Morris would inevitably call for its return long before the vessel reached the dock at New York, and he would either be obliged to turn it over to him or render himself accountable for its loss.

"Another way to conduct the theft, of course, would have been for some one else, presumably Reinhardt, to attack the purser, and take the package from the safe. This, however, would have been extremely difficult to carry out without suspicion resting upon some one on board. The ideal method of course was to have it appear that Vernon had himself removed the package from the safe, and for him then to disappear.

"They talked this plan over that night at great length, and decided that Vernon should first remove the package from the safe itself, and then by means of a clever disguise, apparently disappear.

"They knew, however, that the number of passengers on the vessel would be well known, and that it would be impossible to add another to the number without inviting immediate detection.

"They therefore decided to provide an extra passenger, who they might conveniently dispose of at the proper time.

"Vernon, it seems, was slightly acquainted with a young man of about his own age, in Havre, by the name of Henri Musset, a foreman in the ship-yards. This young man was at the time desperately ill with tuberculosis. Vernon introduced Reinhardt to him as a lung specialist. The latter offered to take Musset to America with him, treat him free of charge, and later send him to the dry climate of the west, where, he assured him, he would speedily recover.

"Musset was of much the same build and height as Vernon, and wore a black beard—a fact, no doubt that had much to do with his selection by Vernon for the purpose in hand. He was a very sick man. Reinhardt attended to the purchase of the tickets, and through the connivance of Vernon the two were entered on the passenger list as Mr. Hausmann from Brussels, and Gunther, his attendant. Hausmann was supposed to be an invalid.

"The two went aboard the vessel at night. Those few who saw them say that Musset appeared to be very ill and that his so-called attendant was obliged to support him as he came on board.

"No one was at all surprised, therefore, when the following day he failed to leave his berth.

"Whether he died or was killed shortly after his arrival on board, I do not know. George Vernon, in his confession, claims he died the same night. If so the fact was cleverly concealed from the steward, who brought the two men their meals.

"It was given out that Musset, or rather Hausmann, was a great sufferer from rheumatism, and could not for a few days leave his berth.

"The following night the safe was opened and the package removed. Vernon did this himself, left his office and threw the key through the grating of his window on to the desk within. The mark that it made in falling is still plainly visible.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief — no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Elys Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.

THE ONE CERTAIN THING

Out of every thousand men of the age of thirty-five, TEN will be dead A YEAR FROM TO-DAY.

If you knew that you were going to be ONE of the TEN, it would not take ten minutes for you to decide to put on all the Life Insurance you could stand.

But, you do not know that you are NOT GOING TO BE ONE OF THEM. Therefore you should insure NOW.

REMEMBER THIS: There is ONE DAY in your lifetime when you pass from a HEALTHY MAN to an UNHEALTHY MAN.

One day you can get Insurance and the next day you cannot. Therefore you should insure NOW.

Even a Life Insurance Company cannot afford to insure one life ALONE, it can only afford to give Insurance when there is a group of policy-holders.

If a Life Insurance Company cannot AFFORD to insure one life, HOW-MUCH LESS CAN YOU DO SO.

Should you neglect this important matter until it is too late, the ones to suffer will be those dependent upon you, (those of your own flesh).

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back its Natural Colour, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

WHAT BETTER MESSENGER?

Over the garden fence the conversation had suddenly turned acrimonious.

"An' if yore boy 'Erbert ties any more cans on our pore dog's tail," was Mrs. Meggins' stern ultimatum, "'ol 'ear about it, that's all! Oh, an' per'aps you've come wiv that saucepan wot you borrowed last Monady."

"Erbert," asked Mrs. Grubb, shrilly, "wot 'ave you bin doin' to Mrs. Meggins' dog?"

"Nothin', ma," replied the small boy, unblushingly.

"There!" said his mother, triumphantly. "An' you returned 'er saucepan yesterday, didn't you, dearies?"

"Sent it back by 'er dog," said Herbert, calmly.

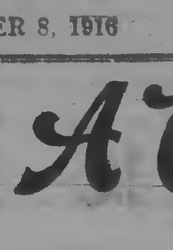
A Woman's Problem

How to Feel Well During Middle Life Told by Three Women Who Learned from Experience.

The Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Read these letters:—



Philadelphia, Pa.—"I started the Change of Life five years ago. I always had a headache and backache with bearing down pains and I would have heat flashes very bad at times with dizzy spells and nervous feelings. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new person and am in better health and no more troubled with the aches and pains I had before I took your wonderful remedy. I recommend it to my friends for I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. Margaret Grassman, 759 N. Ringgold St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Beverly, Mass.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for nervousness and dyspepsia, when I was going through the Change of Life. I found it very helpful and I have always spoken of it to other women who suffer as I did and have had them try it and they also have received good results from it."—Mrs. George A. Dunbar, 17 Roundy St., Beverly, Mass.

Erie, Pa.—"I was in poor health when the Change of Life started with me and I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, or I think I should not have got over it as easy as I did. Even now if I do not feel good I take the Compound and it restores me in a short time. I will praise your remedies to every woman for it may help them as it has me."—Mrs. E. Kissling, 931 East 24th St., Erie, Pa.

No other medicine has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women may receive free and helpful advice by writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Such letters are received and answered by women only and held in strict confidence.

WOMEN WINNING WAR AS TRAIN CONDUCTORS

Visit to Training School in England Described—Fine Comradeship and Efficiency of Pupils

An Englishwoman writes of the work of a school for women conductors, as follows: "They'll never stick it!" a friendly omnibus conductor had assured me, when I asked his opinion upon the proposed incursion of the fair sex into his sacred precincts. "Well," I said, when I met him again, "what do you think of the conductress now?"

His praise was unstinted. "I never thought women could do so well," he said.

"Of course you didn't." I agreed. "The capabilities of we women have always been belittled—even we underestimated them. And you really think the conductress a success?"

"They're ju splendid!" was the quick reply. "We couldn't do better ourselves," which was indeed commendation. "Of course it's the training they've had that's done it," he added; and I realized fully the truth of that addition, for I have had an opportunity of seeing the prospective woman-conductor in training at the London General Omnibus Company's schools, and could appreciate the remark.

Safe and Thorough

The visit proved to me conclusively that no effort is spared on the part of the company to turn out really efficient and competent guardians of their vehicles, and no energies are withheld that will ensure the safety of the public.

"Safety first" is the motto of the company. The words are in evidence throughout the schools and garage yards, and form the axle around which the instruction revolves. "Safety first," too, is responsible for the sensible warmth of the smart military uniform coat, for the much-discussed shortness of the becoming skirt, and for the stout and low heeled boots that are insisted upon.

When I visited the school a few days ago I was amazed at the thoroughness of the course of training the women undergo before they are considered capable of "taking to the road." The training takes about three weeks, and during that time the woman receive a nominal payment of 50 cents per day for food and fares.

Many Apply; Few Chosen

Each applicant (and there have been over 4,000) is interviewed by a representative of the company, who judges her adaptability to the work and weeds out the unsuitable. From those chosen the woman doctor selects only the medically fit for these arduous duties, the company being anxious for, and indeed determined on, the engagement of those women only who are physically able to stand the strain which is constantly and necessarily imposed on them.

There are over one hundred and thirty girls, belonging to that company, alone, on the road, while there are nearly two hundred and fifty at the school. Of those about 35 per cent. are higher domestic servants, 15 per cent. shop assistants, and the remainder are drawn from all classes—clerks, waitresses, post office employes, dressmakers, and many girls whose lives have hitherto been wasted "doing nothing." Among them there exists a charming comradeship, born of the knowledge that they are uniting in "doing their bit to help to win the war."

LEADING A MAN'S LIFE

There will be no more suave British butlers and footmen after the war if the Bishop of London has his way. "Does any one suppose that after the war linen-drapery assistants will return to the shops and be content to hand out laces to ladies again?" he asked, and answered his own question: "Of course not." He continued that he hoped the world had seen the last of Englishmen in the prime of life acting as footmen in great houses. He had tried women since the war began, he said, and found them much better. He hoped that England should see men who had learned to live men's lives in these glorious days refusing to live anything but a man's life after the war.

KITCHENER'S BANTAMS

Kitchener's Bantams are the little men who do not measure over five feet, three inches. The late Secretary of War was too wise to turn them down because they were under size. He formed them into battalions, drilled them with his other soldiers, and made them ready for France. Now they have got into the thick of the line-smashing and the Germans know they are there. They will not belie their name. Moreover, they have advantages all their own. They offer small targets. Shots aimed to fell six footers will miss them. And they can crawl up on a machine gun or worm their way to wire entanglements without being as easily seen as a standard soldier. They can also pick out the smallest of holes to hide in when German bullets are scorching the fields. If anybody can sneak within charging distance of the enemy trenches, the Bantams can. Let them once arrive, and the Germans will not need to ask whether or no they are real fighters. Big men may push their way through by sheer strength but count on the little men to get there just the same.

HAPPY GIRL MUNITIONERS

Cheerful, Uncomplaining Workers Need More Recreation

A London correspondent writes: It would be hard to find anywhere a merrier or gayer crowd than the girl workers in the munition factories of the London area. They have had to do without summer vacations, they are very much underpaid as compared with the male workers, and they have protested time and again to the Minister of Munitions without receiving anything but promises in return, but aside from wages they find nothing to grumble about. Since Lloyd-George appointed Seebohm Rowntree to supervise their "welfare," sympathetic intelligence has been applied to many matters important to health, but commonly overlooked in establishments run by men, such as rest rooms, meals and places in which to eat them.

The welfare department of the Ministry of Munitions is tackling the question of recreation, which is urgent in these days when thousands of women and girls are suffering from overstrain. Lately a series of twice-nightly shows have been given in many munitions workers' camps to crowded houses. This is only a beginning and the girls are being appealed to to take a hand in the business of organizing recreation. There is now a club for girls at Woolwich, with Will Crooks, the well known member of Parliament, as chairman of the advisory committee, which is arranging sports on a ground near the Arsenal. The girls themselves are everywhere forming dramatic societies and glee clubs and go in for dancing, gymnastics and many other forms of diversion to relieve the monotony of lives which would otherwise consist only of bed and work.

MINE-LAYING U-BOAT CAPTURED BY BRITISH

Thrilling Moments While Mines Scraped Cruisers Was Queen Craft on Exhibition

A curious German submarine caught just as it was about to lay mines off the East Coast, was placed on exhibition in the Thames and viewed by hundreds of thousands of sightseers. This is not one of the fast, big U-boats which have preyed on shipping, but a little fellow without guns or torpedo tubes, built solely for mine laying. A British destroyer was out exercising off the coast. When she sighted this submarine, the German boat was in difficulties. It was misty weather. The destroyer drew close and the English sea men noticed that all the crew of the U-boat seemed to be on deck.

The British commander called out for the Germans to surrender. The latter hauled down their flag and put their hands above their heads. At a word from their commander they jumped into the water and swam for dear life away from the ship. Internal explosions followed and at the last and heaviest a cascade of hammocks and other debris shot out of the open conning tower to a height of forty feet. That there was this vent for the explosive forces probably saved the ship.

Daring Feat

Although the submarine had laid no mines, two had been released by the force of the explosions and were foul of the bottom of the vessel. Contact with the "horns," which jutted out all around the mines, would have set off enough high explosive to wreck a battleship. A young British officer now performed a highly difficult and dangerous task. He went down in a diving suit and made the mines safe by detaching the detonators, afterwards securing the mines in a safe position.

How Mines Are Laid

This submarine is the "U65," and carried twelve mines. She was built in five sections in Germany, brought to Zeebrugge, on the Belgian coast, in freight cars, and there put together. Her length is 110 feet. Amidships is the conning tower, with periscope and wireless mast. Forward of the conning tower are six shoots or air locks in which the mines are stored, two to a shoot. The mines were discharged electrically from the conning tower. These mines weigh 1,200 pounds loaded and cost about $900 each. When one of their horns is jarred by a ship's hull, a glass vial in the interior is broken, letting loose a liquid which energizes a battery, and the mine explodes with terrific violence.

KINDLY QUEEN ELIZABETH

Benefactions and Personal Services of Albert's Worthy Consort

Paris advises say: By her tactful and thoughtful ways Queen Elizabeth of Belgium is endearing herself daily more and more to the hearts of her people. On the anniversary of the tragic death of Madame Le Page, an unfortunate victim of the "Lusitania," Queen Elizabeth went incognito to place a wreath of flowers on her grave. Not a week passes that she does not visit the trenches, and more than the little luxuries she always distributes the soldiers value her kind words and her sweet smile.

She has founded the Charles Theodore school and Maria Jose Garden for little Belgians. In the former are little boys and girls old enough to attend school and in the latter are the babies. Surrounded by beautiful trees and enclosed in white fences in the midst of a stretch of green grass are erected the brightly painted wooden buildings. Little streams flow through the park bridged by rustic arches and the twisted branches of the old apple trees give this children's city an almost Japanese appearance. The Queen frequently visits the children and plays with them.

The other day a peasant woman who came with her newly born baby in her arms to claim her other little children, whom she had left in the charge of the matron, was met by a dainty figure dressed in white from head to foot, who took the baby in her arms and offered coffee and cakes for the little family. Not until after she had gone did the women know that it was Queen Elizabeth who had been entertaining her.

The wounded who owe so much to her kindness love her also. The men in the Institute for the Re-education of the Maimed in Port Villez sent to Queen Elizabeth a large basket filled with the lily-of-the-valley that grows so luxuriously in the grounds of the Institute.

"RUSSIAN LION" NO MORE

Hackenschmidt, a Wounded German Prisoner, Never To Wrestle

George Hackenschmidt, the famous "Russian Lion" who failed to wrest the title from Frank Gotch, will never wrestle again. This was the statement made by Jack Curley, Hack's former manager. "I received a letter from George the other day," said Curley. "He is in a prison camp near Berlin, where he expects to stay until the war is over. He will never wrestle again. He has two good hands, but not two good legs. He has water on one knee and has had several operations for relief from the condition, but it will be impossible for him to do any mat work."

We know other Machines! Autos Engines, etc

Why not our own Body Machine?

We study and admire the machinery invented by man, and too often overlook and neglect that most marvellous machine—the human body.

To understand and take care of the heart, lungs and liver; the arteries and veins, the skin, the teeth, the eyes and all the intricate machinery of the body, is no small task.

But, unlike any other machine, the body replaces its own wear and waste, and, consequently, the most attention required is that which has to do with the organs of digestion and excretion.

So long as proper food is supplied for nourishment and the liver, kidneys and bowels are regular in their work of eliminating poisonous waste matter from the system, the great majority of human ills are avoided.

In this connection Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are appreciated on account of their promptness and efficiency in arousing the action of these filtering and excretory organs, and thereby removing such disorders as liver complaint, biliousness, constipation, indigestion, kidney disease and backache. With these organs in healthful action there is no such thing as Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries and rheumatism.

REMOVE BUTTER DUTY.

Will introduce Motion at Grocers' Meeting With This Request to Government.

With butter reported selling at 36 and 37 cents in New York, and 37 and 38c in Chicago, a motion will be presented at Wednesday night's meeting of the Retail Grocers by Mr. S. H. Mitchell, requesting the Government to remove the duty from butter and to admit oleomargarine and permit its manufacture in this country. If the United States prices are as quoted Mr. Mitchell states that the price in Canada would be reduced to 33c for dairy butter, and the oleomargarine would retail at 25c.

HAVE A GOOD COMPLEXION! THE FLOWER OF GOOD HEALTH

The true secret of complexion lies in the blood. Keep it rich, pure, nutritious, and, above all, keep the system regular. No aid to complexion compares with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They tone and enrich the blood, clear the system of waste products, promote good digestion, and, in short, establish sound health, which, after all, is the keynote to all happiness and well-being. Don't delay; the charm of a lovely complexion and all the blessings of health are yours, once you employ the old-time family remedy. All dealers sell Hamilton's Pills, in 25c. boxes.

A SONG OF AVIATION

With a humming and a drumming,
to announce that I am coming,
Up the long blue silent speedways
of the universe I soar,
Saying, "Howdy!" to Canopus, as I meet his rays of topaz,
Sweeping into virgin spaces where no man has been before.
Far below me flies the eagle, now a bird no longer regal,
Since his flight is short and puny
as a wren's compared to mine.
For the spheres unfold before me, and
I see the mystic glory
Of the infinite extending to the rim of things divine.

Oh, the wonder and the thunder of the wings that reel as under The eternal veils of silence that are wrapped around the stars!
Oh, the monstrous orbons falling through the distances appalling
Where a host of nameless planets race their bright celestial mars!
Sing, ye wires and stunts and bruges!
Let it ring across the spaces,
Jupiter alone no longer rules the stellar empire vast,
Riding on my daring pinions, earth
can share the air-dominions
And the star-trust has been broken —smashed to smithereens at last.

SOCIETY OF NATIONS ADVOCATED IN PARIS

PARIS, Nov. 6.—A lasting international peace can be made possible only by the foundation of a society of nations whose guiding principle shall be the settlement of differences by law and not by force, declares a resolution adopted by the Congress of the League of Rights of Man in session here. The resolution, framed and approved after long discussion, says:

"This society shall be based upon the recommendation of the right of nations, great and small, to independence, upon the institution of compulsory arbitration applicable to all international conflicts without exception and reserve, and upon the organization of international forces capable of repressing by appropriate penalties all attempts at revolt or aggression.

"To insure lasting peace in the future, the treaty must not contain germs of war or revenge. It shall consecrate the right of people to dispose of their own destinies and shall not provide for the dismemberment of States or annexations of territory against the will of the population. On the contrary, it shall annul annexations imposed by force such as that of Alsace-Lorraine.

"It shall create an economic regime under which certain temporary measures, applied as penalties, shall guarantee to each people exercise of its legitimate activities without permitting the existence of any aggressive organization for economic conquest.

"Justice requires that the future peace treaty shall provide penalties against the responsible authors of war, and punishment to those who wage war in defiance of the law of nations; that States who are aggressors shall make reparation proportionate to the enormous damage done, and, finally, a system of guarantee which, without infringing the principles enunciated above and notably without having recourse to forcible annexation, shall safeguard the world against further aggression.

Finally the congress, taking note of declarations made by Entente statesmen, expresses hope that to give the world an earnest of their designs the allied governments will decide to submit all their eventual conflicts to arbitration and form a federation among themselves as the first outline of a future society of nations, welcoming the adhesion thereto of all States, small and great, who remained outside the struggle.

A SMART CAPTURE

On one occasion a neutral bank steamer was overhauled. She was believed to be carrying suspiciously large supplies to a suspiciously vague destination, but was allowed to proceed for political reasons, and in the name of freedom of the seas. Nevertheless, with innocent fishing boats dotting the waters at intervals of half a mile, and wireless telegraphy to help them, the sea has almost as many eyes and ears to-day as it has fishes, and at dusk a drifter rolled up to the neutral friend again. "Begorra, it's twins!" said the gunner, training his twelve-pounder on to her; and twins it was. For, tucked close under either quarter, lay a German submarine, quietly being fed. Before they could submerge or bunk away, the crew of the drifter had boarded the neutral and persuaded the submarines, with the help of a dozen revolvers, that they were prisoners of war.

spoke excellent English, said he had orders to sink all ships of whatever nationality carrying contraband for the allies. He regretted that he was compelled to do this, but he informed us his orders were imperative.

GERMANS TOOK EVERYTHING.

"He sent an officer and four sailors from the submarine who ordered us to get into the ship's boats and go aboard the submarine. Then they placed a bomb in the engine room of my ship. A terrible explosion followed after we left the ship, but I did not see her sink. The Germans took away every article of value belonging to the ship, including the picture of my wife. They carried off the sextant and barometer.

"The submarine cruised about some time and finally the commander put us aboard the Norwegian steamer Tromp, which brought us to Barry. We saw no more of the German vessel after we left."

CHIEF ENGINEER'S STORY.

Additional particulars of the sinking of the Lanao are given by the chief engineer of the vessel in a despatch to the Chronicle from Cardiff, as follows: "These additional particulars of the sinking of the Lanao are given by the chief engineer of the vessel:

"When we were about 29 miles off the coast of Portugal a German submarine, and therefore could not see what happened to our ship after the Officer Godines was rowed to the submarine in order to take the ship's papers and also to ascertain why the vessel had been stopped. He was detained aboard the submarine, the commander of which sent an officer to tell us we must abondon our ship and get into the boats. We did this and then a bomb was placed in the hold. We were all crowded aboard the submarine, and therefore could not see what hapuened to our ship after the bomb exploded.

BRITISH FOUGHT BACK.

"While we were on board an Italian ship came into sight and this was sunk, the commander making the remark: "This is the fourth." After this a large British ship passed us. She was attacked by the submarine, but returned its fire, and at the last the Germans drew off, and the British ship escaped."

According to the engineer, all on board the Lanao, except two officers, were American citizens.

Annual Festival Was Observed at Downer's Corners

Three Hundred or More People Were in Attendance—Guy Fawkes' Effigy Burned

On Monday evening members of the Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 321 gathered at Downer's Corners where the annual observance of Guy Fawkes was accounted for. It was one of the most successful events of its kind that has been held for some years. At the conclusion of a substantial supper which was served in the basement, the guests foregathered in the hall where an interesting programme had been provided. Ald. J. Saunders presided.

Among those who took part were Miss P. Emmerson, Percy Luther, Miss M. Shephard, John Smith (a Scotchman), Miss Myra Arnott, Miss Edith Peters, Mr. J. John, Gladys Douden, the Misses Arnotta and Mr Kitney

During the programme addresses were delivered by Rev. R. A. Whatham, Rev. J. A. McKenzie, Col. J. W. Miller, W. A. Howard, and County Master E. Reid.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., Ald. Edgar, Ald. Evans and a number of parties from town went out by motor to spend a sociable evening with their friends.

When the National Anthem had been sung the crowd gathered in front of the hall, where Guy Fawks was buried in effigy

AMOS RUSIE NOW WORKER IN MUNITION FACTORY

MILTON, Pa., Nov. 7.—Amos Rusie has been heard from again. The famous Hoosier Thunderbolt, said by old timers like Capt. Anson to have had more smoke than Walter Johnson of Pittsburg, is toiling in a munition factory in this town.

In his day Rusie was as big a figure in baseball as Alexander the Great. He was a child of misfortune. He bloomed in the sport when salaries were low and conditions bad for the player.

Rusie was no plaster saint, but the chances are 10 to 1 that he would have quit baseball with a fortune instead of being broke had he began his major league career in 1910 instead of 1890.

The Indianian was mishandled when he was the idol of New York fans. The late Andrew Freedman bought the Giants and disciplined Rusie so heavily that it took the heart out of him. He ended his career in Cincinnati, having been traded for Christy Mathewson, and since then has had a pitiful existence as an unskilled workman.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

In "just aprons" there is just as much care taken by the modern housekeeper in making a selection as in the choice of the dress that such garment may cover and protect, and justly so, for in putting her house in order one wants to be in order in her dressing.

The serviceable garment in the illustration is made attractive with a yoke facing. The front is slashed and finished for lacing, as the apron slips on over the head. An elastic at the waistline takes care of the fulness and evenly distributes it in the skirt section. Braid is employed as a finish for the neck, sleeves, and to trim the envelope pocket in each front.

It is now customary to wear an apron without a dress when it has sleeves and completely covers the wearer: this design is one that will serve as a dress, if your work demands a large part of the morning hours.

Linen, dotted percale, gingham and like fabrics are appropriate for such garment. It requires no effort to copy such a simple design.

The apron pattern, No. 8,006, is cut in one size only. To make it will require 7⅝ yards of 36 inch material.

To obtain the pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 3 for 25 cents.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

FOOD RIOTS IN GERMANY

Fortunes Made in Food Speculation While Working Classes Starve

Food prices have now reached such a height that housewives all over Germany are in despair, while in various places serious riots have taken place in which practically only women have participated. All letters from wives and relatives to soldiers at the front referring to the sufferings at home are being confiscated. But this cannot be kept up much longer, because the absence of letters from home is shown to exert a very harmful influence on the soldiers.

A Berlin correspondent protests against the high prices ruling in all the large cities of Germany. He expresses his astonishment at the fact that the Imperial Government has not yet been able to find a remedy against this state of affairs and declares that it would be very dangerous to try the patience of the German people much harder, when there are abundant signs that it has almost reached the breaking point. What particularly exasperates the people, he says, is, that speculation in foodstuffs is going on in Berlin in the most disgraceful manner, so openly that the Government cannot possibly be ignorant of the fact that certain shameless individuals are making fortunes while the working classes are actually starving. We find ourselves as if in a besieged fortress and the rules and regulations which prevailed at a time when the markets were open to everybody should not be allowed to prevail today. It is not enough to issue orders, the authorities must also see that they are enforced and obeyed, and from this point of view the conditions which exist throughout Prussia today are disgraceful. These facts cannot help but weaken our faith and confidence in the men who are at the helm. In other places, as for instance in the Duchy of Hesse, where the cost of living and particularly the price of meat is very high, the Government has thought it right to establish a price centre.

Clergyman Wins D.S.O.

The first Distinguished Service Order won by a clergyman in the war was given to Rev. Percy Guinness, formerly a curate outside Birmingham. Mr. Guinness very gallantly carried a wounded officer, under very heavy fire, from the trenches to the ambulance, and later on the same day carried a message from the firing line to headquarters, again under very heavy shell fire.

WOUNDS AND INFECTION

Fresh Air a Good Healer For Shell Wounds

The professional healer, like the professional fighter, has found that many of the things he learned in South Africa he has had to unlearn in Flanders. Wounds seldom proved troublesome in the Boer War, because the South African veldt was almost virgin; but in Belgium and France, where the land has been cultivated for centuries, the gentle germ is always ready to enter the smallest wound and bring about tetanus and other diseases.

At first surgeons were in despair, fearing that much-vaunted antiseptics were of no avail. It required long search and experiment before methods of overcoming new difficulties could be discovered. Then, owing to the lavish use of high-explosive shells, wounds are more complicated and more difficult to keep clean, while the pointed bullet works more harm than the blunt one of the "good old days."

Plenty of fresh air is found to work marvels, so there is at least one hospital in which the patients live practically in the open. It has also been found that wounds remain clean if water continually flows over them, so the clever surgeon has constructed little baths which fit over the wound, a supply of warm water impregnated with oxygen continually flowing through.

A German Dug-out

An officer in the Lancashire Regiment gave an amusing description of a scene in a trench abandoned by the Germans. The officers were described as looking as if they were dressed for parade, with their uniforms quite clean. The trench and dug-outs were fitted up like dressing rooms in a hotel. There was electric light, a great water pump, and abundance of clean clothes, shirts, linen, boots, washing and shaving gear, cigars, cigarettes and food. It looked as if the German officers had expected to be there for many a long month.

RELIEVE HEADACHES WITHOUT DOSING

By Applying Sloan's Liniment to Forehead You Can Stop the Severe Pains

Many headaches are of a neuralgic origin. The symptoms of such headaches are intense and lingering pains in the brow, temples or back of the head.

There is one certain relief that has been known and recommended for years back, Sloan's Liniment. One application and the dull pain is practically gone. Rubbing is unnecessary as Sloan's Liniment quickly penetrates to the seat of the trouble.

Aching muscles, rheumatism, bruises, lumbago, chilblains, sprains and stiff neck can also be most effectively treated with Sloans' Liniment. Cleaner than greasy plasters or ointments; it does not stain the skin or clog the pores.

FUTURE OF THE EMPIRE

Britain to Invite Daughter Nations to Afterwar Councils

The big imperial problem for all alike—which is as real to the Canadian as to the South African and New Zealander—is the future organization of the British Empire as an actually living and organic whole. Let it be observed that the present insistent demand for reorganization has not originated in this country. If it had, its significance would not be half so great, and it would require to be approached with far greater caution. Any attempt on the part of Great Britain to foist a new organization on the Dominions would have been regarded with the gravest suspicion. But, whatever blunders have been made in recent times, that fatal one, at least, has been avoided, and for the last twenty years the old opprobrious phrase, "Downing-street rule," has fallen into complete abeyance.

England learned the painful lesson of 1782 well and truly. She tried the policy of Colonial interference in the eighteenth century, and it ended in disaster, with the result that our statesmen rushed wildly to the other extreme, and some even of the most sagacious grimly believed that the natural and desirable end of Colonial self-government was emancipation and complete political independence. The entire delusion of that theory is gloriously established by the spectacle which it presented to our eyes at this present moment. The Dominions are in arms for the common cause; they have sent, not contingents, but armies thousands of miles to the European battlefields; and it is they and not we who have taken the lead in saying that the time has come for closer organization. It is our part at home to accept the omen, with thankfulness, and to enter the Council Chamber of the Empire prepared to discuss far-reaching projects which only yesterday were deemed abstract and visionary, and far removed from the sphere of practical politics.

INVENTORS THRIVE

Big Fortunes Await, If Present War's Rule Holds

Although the number of patents filed in England during the war has been far below the average in normal times, Messrs. Hughes and Young, the well known agents, state that this is the best time for inventors since the great cycle boom. It is computed that one of the many inventions connected with hand grenades has already brought the fortunate inventor upwards of $750,000 in royalties. The inventor of the Gardwell machine gun is reported to have received $825,000 and a royalty of $15 per gun manufactured.

The deviser of the "Boss" periscope trench rifle, with which the Australians are equipped, has received a large sum for his patent rights. The inventors of a life saving appliance received orders valued at over $150,000. Hundreds of other inventors have made money by using their brains during the war and producing devices for simplifying existing machinery, thereby enabling manufacturers to reduce the cost of working.

Most of the successful war inventors are those who put their inventions to commercial use before submitting them to the Government. The man who invented a special box for carrying hand grenades submitted samples, quoted prices, and received a large order, which has laid the foundation of an extensive business. Those remunerative inventions patented during the war have been a non-inflammable substitute for celluloid, possessing all its advantages without any of its drawbacks; a substitute for glass, and a process for removing the solder, tin, and chemical from scrap and galvanized articles, and for utilising the base metal. A fortune awaits the inventor of a machine that will automatically type letters from dictation.

CLEVER ARAB REVOLT

Ruler of Mecca Upset Turkish Calculations and Prestige

Accounts of the uprising against the Turks in Arabia show that the operations which resulted in the capture of the principal seaports and other cities by the rebels apparently were carefully conceived and systematically carried out. The Grand Sherif of Mecca raised three armies, the commands of which he gave to his three eldest sons. The first of these, under Sherif Fortaa, besieged Medina, the city containing the tomb of Mohammed; the second, under Sherif Abdulla, occupied Taif, 65 miles southeast of Mecca, making prisoners of most of the garrison; while the third captured Jiddah, the chief seaport of Arabia, imprisoning its defenders. While besieging Jiddah the Arabian forces warned the garrison not to destroy its arms and ammunition, and consequently a battery of field guns, numerous rifles and quick-firers, and a great quantity of ammunition were captured.

Apparently, says a despatch, the Grand Sherif and his followers decided to suppress all traces of the Turks in their country, cutting the telegraph lines, tearing up the roadbed of the Hijas Railway and destroying the stations for nearly 100 miles to the north in order to prevent the Turks from sending reinforcements. It is related, adds the correspondent, that when Enver Pasha visited Hijas the Grand Sherif told him he was an ignorant youth who had dragged Turkey to her destruction.

Dr. Elsie Inglis, Commissioner of the Scottish Women's Hospitals for Foreign Service, has been awarded the Serbian Order of the White Eagle for her work in Serbia.

With a bullet wound in his head and a revolver at his feet, Lieutenant J. Ewart Alexander, Norfolk Regiment, was found at Norwich. He died later.

LLOYD-GEORGE'S BURDEN

"One Continuous Job" But Marvellous Man Recovers Fast

Discussing the heavy duties of Lloyd-George as War Minister, T. P. O'Connor writes as follows: What sort of a life does this man lead who has responsibilities so heavy? It is a life of continuous work. It begins early in the morning, sometimes too early—for now and then over-work and over-anxiety interfere with his sleep, and at five or six o'clock he is staring awake. He then turns to some of the papers beside his bed, and begins his work when he ought to be asleep.

In olden days he had always his Saturday and Sunday at Walton Heath; and on Saturdays he played golf all day long with the same keenness as he gives to every other occupation. I have often said that though I like his company always, I prefer any other partner at golf to him; he is so keen that he makes his partner nervous—especially when a match depends on a short putt.

Now he rarely goes to Walton Heath till late on Saturday. Sometimes he is very tired; sometimes that extraordinary power of recuperation he has finds him fresh even at the end of a week. He sees his friends at certain hours; at others he throws himself into a hammock or sits across two chairs, and makes up for his arrears in sleep. If you want to see him at his best you must go to Walton Heath and watch him among his friends.

WEAK, NERVOUS OHIO WOMAN

Made Well by Delicious Vinol.

Bellefontaine, Ohio,—"My blood was very poor—I was in a weak, nervous, rundown condition. I tried different remedies without benefit and one day my druggist told me about Vinol. I tried it and it built me up in every way—blood, strength and nerves, and I tell my friends it is the best medicine on earth."—Mrs. Earl Brunson.

Vinol, which contains beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates, and glycerophosphates, sharpens the appetite, aids digestion, enriches the blood and in this natural manner creates strength.

THE FALLEN HERO.

Across the oceans foam,
Bear the young hero home.
With mournful pride.
Beneath his native sky.
In the dear land to lie,
For which he died.
Gallant, and strong, and gay.
Proudly he marched away.
In warlike gear.
Now lies he, pale and cold.
As form of marble mould.
Upon his bier.
In manhood, glorious prime
E're the chill frosts of time.
Hopes flowers could blight.
Died, he as heroes die,
With dauntless courage high.
In shock of fight.
No more the drum, at morn.
Nor shrilling bugle horn.
With loud alarms,
His deep sweet sleep shall break.
Nor battles trump awake
Him now, to arms.
His warefare all is done.
Before life's setting sun.
Came swift release.
For him, where cruel war,
Ne'er, the bright bliss can mar.
Eternal peace.
On the fair roll of fame.
Shines bright inscribed his name
The world may read.
And to this prostrate clay.
High tribute, well we pay.
Of honours meed.
Comrades with silent tread.
Follow the valient dead,
Slow, to his rest.
With muffled drums tattoo,
And the brave, banner, blue.
Wrapped o'er his breast.

MRS. A. F. CALDER.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. H. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

The harder you make the land produce the harder it is willing to produce, the more cheaply it will produce and the more profitably it will produce.

Cattle Markets.

Toronto Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 66 cars, with 1,085 cattle, 67 calves, 624 hogs, and 1,273 sheep and lambs.

There was practically no change yesterday from Monday's prices. Choice heavy steers and good butcher cattle are steady and firm. Medium and thin butcher steers and heifers generally a little easier than last week. Good butcher cows and bulls steady. Canners and cutters in good demand at firm prices.

Stockers and feeders steady for anything of quality and a fair demand.

Sheep and lambs steady.

Hogs steady at yesterday's lower prices.

Had Weak Back and Kidneys

SUFFERED SO COULD HARDLY MOVE IN BED

When the back becomes weak and starts to ache and pain it is a sure sign that the kidneys are not performing their functions properly.

On the first sign of any weakness or pain in the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They are a remedy for the kidneys only and make right for the seat of the trouble.

Mr. Francis McInnis Woodbine, N. S., writes: "I deem it my duty to let you know the wonderful results I have received from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. For a long time I had been suffering from weak back and kidneys. I used to suffer the most at night, and sometimes I could hardly move in bed with the pain. I could do no hard labour. A friend advised me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial, and I am glad I did for the pain in my kidneys is gone, my back is strong, and I can perform any hard labour and get my good night's sleep. I only need three boxes of the pills."

Berlin Admits Successes By The British, French and Roumanians

German Statement Concedes Loss of Ablaincourt and Pressoir to the French and Also Gains by the Roumanians on the Northern Front---Hearst Papers Have Been Barred From Canadian Mails.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN, via Sayville, November 8.—The War Office statement to-day admitted the French and British claims of yesterday that the Entente Allies had captured the villages of Ablaincourt and Pressoir, and mentioned counter attacks delivered against those places last night, without success.

ALL HEARST PAPERS ARE BARRED IN CANADA

OTTAWA, November 8.—The Dominion Government has decided to put under the ban all Hearst papers. After Saturday, November 11th, all Hearst's publications will be refused the privileges of Canadian mails, and any person found with copies in his possession will be liable to arrest, fine or imprisonment. The list of publications so banned include the New York American, the Chicago American, and thirteen other Hearst publications from various parts of the United States.

French Troops Have Smashed On Again

Tremendous Blow Struck South of the Somme—Ablaincourt and Pressoire Both Carried by General Joffre's Troops in Brilliant Advance

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, November 7.—French troops struck a tremendous blow south of the Somme to-day. On a front of over four kilometres (nearly three miles), extending from Chaulnes Wood to southeast of Ablaincourt sugar refinery, Joffre's troops smashed forward against the forces under the Crown Prince of Bavaria, carrying the villages of Ablaincourt and Pressoire, both of which were strongly fortified, as well as several other German positions. More than 500 prisoners were captured. The War Office report states that the attack brought on important gains despite the heavy rain. The villages of Ablaincourt and Pressoire were first brilliantly conquered by the infantry. Pushing their lines forward the French captured also the Ablaincourt cemetery, which was strongly fortified by the enemy, and carried their positions as far as the outskirts of Genrecourt.

The attack was launched early this morning after the artillery guns had pounded the German front throughout the night. The French swept forward against the dazed Teutons, breaking down obstacles, and inflicting heavy losses on the enemy, who had sought refuge in their deep underground galleries.

The advance puts Peronne, the southerly point of the German line, in imminent peril. The town is now practically pocketed, as was Combles just before its fall. The fall of Peronne and Bapaume would menace the entire 100-mile Noyon salient of the German armies.

Meanwhile the British during the night made a further advance in heavy fighting against Bapaume. They seized ground in the region of Butte de Warlencourt, according to General Haig's report, extending their positions to the east of the high ground.

To-day the British front in the Les Boeufs area was severely shelled and the German support and communication trenches in the neighbourhood of Armentieres and Wytschaete were bombarded, according to the official statement from British headquarters in France issued to-night. Rain prevailed all day.

Facts About The Arabia Suppressed

LONDON, November 8.—Although the facts of the Arabia sinking were known in London early yesterday, the censors would not permit publication of them, it being presumably the Government's purpose to avoid even an appearance of an attempt to influence or sway the American Presidential election. Officials hinted that they wanted to eliminate any possible chance of it affecting yesterday's balloting in America, if the attack was made with this in mind.

New Positions Have Been Heavily Shelled

PARIS (French Official), November 8.—Positions captured at Ablaincourt and Pressoir yesterday were subjected to heavy artillery bombardment by the Germans last night the War Office reported to-day. In the Orient, the statement said, the Bulgarians were repulsed in three desperate attacks on Serbian positions, in the bend of the Cerna. They finally retired to their own trenches leaving many dead on the field.

American Steamer Is Attacked By Sub.

LONDON, November 8.—S. O. S. calls were sent out by the American steamer Columbian out of Brest yesterday evening. The calls said the Columbian had been attacked by two submarines, one of which shelled her.

The steamer Columbian, reported shelled by a submarine, is an American-owned boat, bore the American flag at her mast head and carried a crew of 120 men, half of whom are Americans, officials of the American-Hawaiian Line here said this afternoon.

It was stated the Columbian sailed from Boston to Genoa, via Brest, September 21, carrying a general cargo.

PUPILS OF THE COLLEGIATE WHO WON SCHOLARSHIPS

MR. KENNER'S REPORT

Mr H. R. H. Kenner, principal of the Collegiate Institute, presented to the Board of Education, last night, the names of the winners of the Nicholls Scholarships won by Collegiate pupils at the midsummer examinations. The successful students are as follows:

Honour Matriculation, ($20), Helen P. Cumberland.

Upper School Part 1 ($20), Florence E. Rodman.

Lower School ($10), Isabel D. Baird.

Pass Junior Matriculation ($15) Gretchen E. Gladman.

Pass Junior Matriculation ($15), Ethel M. Steele.

It may be recalled that these scholarships were made possible by the generous and encouraging grant left by the late Charlotte Nicholls for pupils attending the Collegiate Institute.

TENTH EPISODE "YELLOW MENACE" ROYAL TO-NIGHT

The Tenth Episode of the great photoplay "The Yellow Menace" will be shown to-night at the Royal. These two reels are said to be the most stirring of all the other episodes, of this million dollar series. Go and see what is predicted as the fate of America if the Asiatic emmigration continues, as it has been doing. This sensational play is an eye-opener.

MARVIN KIRN IS PRES. OF COLLEGIATE LIT.

The Literary Society of the Collegiate Institute, which was suspended during the first term under war conditions, has been revived with the following officers to manage its affairs:—

Hon. Pres.—Mr. H. R. H. Kenner.
Hon. Vice-Pres.—Mr. A. D. Hone, M.A.
President—Marvin Kirn.
Vice-Pres.—Phyllis Young.
Secretary—Harlan Skuce.
Treasurer—Hazel Crowe.

It was felt that the society's opportunities to the students should be afforded for the present classes, and meetings will be held regularly with the usual programme's.

BIRDMAN IS ON LEAVE

Flight Sub-Lieutenant Leslie Stevens of the Royal Naval Air Service is Spending a Short Furlough at His Home Here

HAS BEEN IN HOSPITAL

Flight Sub-Lieutenant Leslie Stevens of the Royal Naval Air Service, the first Peterborough aviator to arrive home from overseas, reached the city this morning and will spend a short furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Stevens, 631 George street. Lieut. Stevens came over on the Scandinavian and has only a brief furlough, sailing for England again on November 25th. He has been in hospital since July as the result of an accident, followed by an attack of appendicitis.

The regulations of the air service will not permit Lieut. Stevens to say much about his work, nor was he inclined to do so when the Examiner saw him this morning.

He has been overseas for over a year and for a long time was on duty as a night flyer, being for some time the only Canadian aviator engaged in this thrilling work. The Peterborough boy has had a hand in several raids over enemy position, but has nothing to say about them beyond the modest statement that he was in "one or two little affairs."

Lieut. Stevens is looking well and his friends are all glad to see him home even if his visit is necessarily a short one. He does not expect to get back to flying until the end of the year.

He thinks that more and more Canadians will be attracted to the air service. "It's a grand game," is the way the Peterborough boy speaks of the aviation work.

ONE CENT SALE OPENS TO-MORROW

This is Something Novel That Will Appeal to the Buying Public

A one cent sale commencing on Thursday of this week and continuing until Saturday will be held in the two local "Rexall" drug stores, namely McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte streets, and E. L. Payne, corner of George and Simcoe streets. Information concerning this important event will be found in another section of this issue. A one cent sale is something novel that should appeal to the public generally. For example, a toothbrush that ordinarily sells for twenty-five cents will be sold at two for twenty-six cents at the one cent sale. You pay the regular price for one article, and then we give you another of the same article for one cent. The United Drug Company is assisting in this sale with their well-known lines.

KITCHENER LEAGUE PARCELS TO BE SENT OVERSEAS ABOUT NOV. 15

The Canadian Kitchener League will hold a "Tea of the Allies" on Saturday afternoon and evening next in the Turnbull building. The League, now busy working for the boys in the trenches, hopes to send their Christmas parcels in about a week.

Don't fail to visit this bright and attractive tea room. Everything is being done to make your visit pleasant and enjoyable, and by patronizing the tea rooms you can help fill the boxes for the boys in the trenches.

The Canadian Kitchener League intend sending their Christmas shipments on or about the 15th inst. All who are knitting for the club are asked to bring in as many socks as possible before this date.

As the League wish to send a number of boxes to our boys in the 93rd on active service, they would be pleased to receive names and addresses of the boys in the different units. Any persons wishing to enclose presents for the boys of the 93rd are invited to send them to 431 Gilmour street, and the League will see that they are forwarded.

Afternoon Returns Have Not Yet Definitely Decided The Winner

Peterborough Pays Tribute To Memory Of Gallant Officer

Funeral of Lieut. Arthur Ackerman Carried Out Under Military and Public Auspices---Pall Bearers Were All Officers Who Had Fought in France With Lieut. Ackerman While Many Returned Soldiers Were in the Firing Squad.

Peterborough paid its tribute to the memory of one of its gallant young sons this afternoon, when the funeral of Lieut. Arthur Ackerman, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Ackerman, was carried out under military and public auspices. The body arrived in the city on the early morning train, accompanied by Major Charles Ackerman and Major S. T. Medd, and was removed to the home of Mr. B. F. Ackerman, Dalhousie street, where a service was held at noon. Afterwards the remains were taken to the Armouries, where a public service was held this afternoon. A huge crowd assembled to participate in the service. The Public Schools were closed for the afternoon and flags were flying at half mast from many of the public buildings.

George street was lined deep with people to see the long funeral cortege pass. The procession was notable for the number of officers and men who had seen service overseas. The nine pallbearers were all officers of the 2nd Canadian Battalion who had fought in France with Lieut. Ackerman while the firing party included many Peterborough veterans of the present war, a number of them who had also been members of the 2nd Battalion and who had left Peterborough in August, 1914, with Lieut. Ackerman.

The pallbearers were Major Howard, Major Ponton, Major Goodwin, Capt. O'Flynn, Capt. Kidd, Capt. Curry, Capt. Birkhall, Capt. Whelan and Capt. Woolcombe.

The funeral cortege was headed by the firing party in charge of Capt. Belton. Many of the men who followed him wore the uniform of Canadian units who have distinguished themselves at the front. Included in the long procession were the city officials, the officers of the 347th Battalion, visiting officers, the Collegiate Institute Cadets, the employees of the B. F. Ackerman Company, and a long line of automobiles and carriages. The "Dead March" in Saul was played by the band of the 57th Regiment, in charge of Lieut. Gliddon.

The service at the Armouries opened with the reading of the 90th Psalm by the Rev. R. G. Peever, Pastor of George Street Methodist Church. "These are not ordinary times, and this is not an ordinary service," said Mr. Peever. To-day, we are paying our last respects to a battle-scarred soldier of Peterborough.

Rev. S. Greatrix.

Mr. Greatrix, Pastor of St. James' Methodist Church, who followed, said: We are here to pay our last tribute to one who has laid down his life in the defence of the flag that for a thousand years has braved the battle and the breeze. I do not say the late Lieut. Ackerman, because I believe in the continuity of life. When the late Captain Richardson of Kingston as assigned to a difficult and dangerous task among the volunteers selected was Lieut. Ackerman. Capt Richardson lost his life. Lieut. Ackerman once remarked that he esteemed it a greater honour to be associated with such a gallant officer than to receive the Military Cross, as he did, for conspicuous gallantry. The things for which Lieut Ackerman died are of an imperial character. There is no country in the whole world that guards more sacredly the rights of the people than the British Empire, and that affords a greater freedom to its people than the same country. There are no people that respond more freely to the cause than the British people. It is to perpetuate such a tradition that Lieut. Ackerman fought and died, like thousands of others are doing. The question of the hour is, did these men die in vain. Are we worthy of the sacrifice.

Surviving Comrades.

Captain Kidd and Captain O'Flynn, two officers who were associated with Lieut. Ackerman in the 1st Canadian Contingent, 2nd Battalion, paid glowing tributes to their fallen comrade. Both officers recalled a number of instances where the late Lieut. Ackerman had distinguished himself on the field of battle.

Canon Cornish.

"Actions speak louder than words," said Canon Cornish. I am proud to have had the honour of following in the footsteps of men who have spoken to you and who have done their duty and done it well for the Empire of which we are all so proud. In reading the list of casualties from day to day I feel that I am in the presence of God's heroes. Now that we are paying our last respects to a fallen hero our thoughts wander back to the dark days of the autumn of 1914. We think of the little army in Britain well knowing they were to fight the mightiest fighting machine the world has ever seen. It was a question of duty that was all. They gave all that they had for the sake of their King and country. All those who have done that are great men. They are fighting for the traditions of a great race."

Rev. Mr. Peever, in bringing the service to a close with prayer, said that the deeds of the late Lieut. Ackerman stood out as a challenge to Peterborough and its citizens to put forth their best efforts in an endeavour to bring the present struggle to a speedy and successful conclusion.

MAJOR S. T. MEDD HAS RETURNED

Will Return to England Next Month—Need More Men

Major S. T. Medd, who left Peterborough in command of "B" Squadron of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, returned home this morning in charge of the remains of the late Lieut. Arthur Ackerman. Major Medd will return to England on December 9th. He has been granted a month's sick leave. Major Medd, who is staying at his home, 402 Charlotte street, has little to say regarding the conditions as they exist in England. "Everything seems to be satisfactory," he said. "Our greatest need at the present time is more men," he added.

The trip over on the steamer Scandinavian was of an uneventful character. The weather was fine with the exception of a couple of days of stormy weather.

MARTIAL LAW IN IRELAND LIKELY TO DISAPPEAR SOON

LONDON Nov. 7.—According to the Yorkshire Herald, the Government has decided to recall Major General Sir John Maxwell from Ireland, where he is in command of the British forces, and he will be succeeded by Lieutenant General Bryant Mahon lately in command of the western frontier of Egypt.

It has been known generally in Dublin for some time that Major General Sir John Maxwell would be recalled and replaced by Lieutenant General Mahon. It is expected here that martial law will be withdrawn with the change in command and a new effort for voluntary recruiting is also expected. Major Price, chief Intelligence officer at Irish military headquarters, it is also believed here will retire. It is reported that untried interned prisoners are to be released on signing an undertaking not to engage in seditious activity calculated to interfere with the successful carrying on of the war.

DEMOCRATIC CELEBRATION

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8. — Returns from the doubtful States early this afternoon have thrown no definite light on the Presidential contest. The Republicans, however, claim California and Minnesota, and on the strength of these predict enough votes to elect Hughes. Democrats do not concede the loss of these two States, and claim absolutely as their own such doubtful States as Kansas, Idaho, Washington and Wyoming. West Virginia shows gains for the Republicans, but by a very narrow margin, and such rock-bound Republican States as New Hampshire are expected to remain in the Republican column, but by a greatly reduced majority. It should be stated that notice has been given by New Hampshire Democratic leaders that a recount will be demanded. Chairman McCormick, of the Democratic National Committee, give out the following list of States with an electoral vote total of 312, which he claimed for Wilson:

Alabama	12
Arkansas	9
California	13
Colorado	6
Delaware	3
Florida	6
Georgia	14
Idaho	4
Indiana	15
Kentucky	13
Louisiana	10
Maryland	8
Minnesota	12
Mississippi	10
Missouri	18
Montana	4
Nebraska	8
Nevada	3
New Hampshire	4
New Mexico	3
North Carolina	12
Ohio	24
Oklahoma	10
South Carolina	9
Tennessee	12
Texas	20
Utah	4
Virginia	12
Washington	7
West Virginia	8
Wyoming	3

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Confined joy had no room at the Democratic headquarters this afternoon. As the trend toward President Wilson grew more strongly defined during the early afternoon the crowd in the 42nd Street building headquarters increased both in noise and size. By 1 o'clock the lid was ripped off and thrown into the discard. Just before that hour Chairman McCormick received from O. K. Cushing, California State Chairman, a telegram saying the Democrats out there believed they had carried the State. Men and women stampeded for the exits and, led by a hurriedly hired band, started toward Fifth Avenue, where the Republican headquarters are located. The Democrats remembered the serenade they got from their friends, the enemy, last night, when it looked like Hughes. The parade, which included citizens and citizenesses of every hue and class, had the forces of the law added to it when Sheriff Kincaid, Bayonne, New Jersey's fighting sheriff, jumped from nowhere in particular on the crowded sidewalk to head off the procession. Secretary of Treasury Meadoo was so delighted by the later returns that he suddenly started passing out handfuls of the new dimes which he designed for the Un-

PATRIOTIC FUND.

The merits and claims of the Patriotic Fund in the abstract are so self evident as to need no urging. There is, however, opportunity, for difference of opinion in regard to the best means to be adopted to maintain the Fund at the necessary figure. Individual contribution is in sympathy with the spirit of our part in the war, the voluntary spirit. But there is a limit to voluntary contributions in the matter of means, because its burden falls repeatedly upon thecomparatively few, and as in recruiting the willing do the work, while many stand aloof.

There have in the past year been a multitude of demands upon the means of the willing and those demands still remain to be met. The Patriotic Fund is in the language of the street "a large proposition". To raise $60,000 in Peterborough, money down, or spread over a year is a rather large order.

In this connection the proposal printed in the Examiner yesterday seems to be defensible. It is to provide the $60,000 by municipal grant, by the issue of debentures, covering a term of twenty years. In this way payment would be made easy, the annual addition to the tax rate, being forty two cents upon an assessment of $1,000.

The City Council is to be presented with a petition to the above effect. This petition will within the next few days be presented for signature and it is expected that the signatories will be sufficient to warrant the council taking the action proposed. Such a proposal two years ago, when employment was unfindable, and money scarce, would have been a far different thing from the present time. Now, when employment is plentiful, wages high, and general prosperity prevails, it does not seem to promise anything onerous.

During the past year willing ratepayers have been paying at the rate of $10, $15, 20 and up to $100 or more dollars a year through subscription. Under the debenture plan the payments will range from 40 cents to 50 cents a year in the majority of cases and in the case of the wealthiest property owner, not more than fifteen dollars a year.

It is to be hoped that when the petition is presented it will be readily signed. It is felt that it is difficult if not impossible to raise the necessary amount by voluntary contribution.

We who are at home, earning good money, enjoying all the blessings of prosperity, and without any sacrifice enjoying the advantages, present and prospective of the sacrifices of those who are fighting; and we are in duty, bound to help contribute to the maintenance of those left dependent, by the absence of their bread winners at the front fighting our battles. All of us enjoy the benefit of the sacrifices made and it is only simple justice and an equitable division of the burden to provide that all should in proportion to their means be given the privilege of doing their bit.

LEADERSHIP.

The Toronto News in its usual mild and moderate way, deprecates the doings of "False Liberal Leaders", whose campaign of criticising the government, it declares is an obstacle to recruiting. This is a debatable subject; if the Liberal leaders are "false" in criticising the government there is reason to believe that government leadership has not measured up to the occasion, and has not done in the best way, what it might have done. If criticising the government is treason, what about the criticism that has come from many journals and many members of the party supporting the government? The News thinks the government has given splendid service in conducting this war as far as Canada is concerned—that is a matter of opinion—and the organ knows that the government has deserved a little criticism. The real animus of the News is revealed when it works up to its real object, an attack on Sir Wilfrid Laurier and puts the blame for slow recruiting upon his shoulders. It condemns him in that he refused the "non-partisan appeal" of Premier Borden to join him in a recruiting undertaking. Where was the non-partisan appeal when the government in its first steps in the organization of the National Service Commission, interfered and with partisan interests in view, tied the hands of Sir Thomas Tait with partisan thongs and then asked for Sir Wilfrid Laurier's co-operation in a work that a man like Sir Thomas Tait had to refuse, because of the government's interference with his freedom of action—a display of the cloven foot of partisanship in an enterprise that was presumed to be deprived of every influence of partisanship.

If the News wants to get at the true cause of slowness in recruiting, it will not forget that the presence of Nationalism in the cabinet is not a negligible factor. Besides, the government management of the war has not, been, as its unthinking partisan claim, quite free for undesirable features; the lack of government leadership in the matter of recruiting creates an uneasy feeling; and government indifference in the matter does not seem to be unconnected with the popular indifference. The Liberal leaders, who are now declared to be false leaders have stood by the government and voted with the government for unstinted financial help and have naturally some right as Canadians, to watch with a little critical interest the expenditure of this money on behalf of effectively persistent Canadian share in the war.

The difference between the leaders is that while the Liberal leaders have only a personal responsibility in the matter, the government leaders having a direct official responsibility added to their responsibility as citizens. It is the government and not the Liberal leaders who have to give an account of their discharge of duty. The responsibility in theirs and as to the manner in which they have met it there is wide divergence of public opinion. The question of the moment is, are the government leaders taking the attitude and employing action in the presently vital matter of recruiting that the people expect and demand?

THE MILITARY SPIRIT.

Last Sunday a Toronto minister preached a sermon against inculcating the spirit of militarism in the schools. His objections are not gratuitous, for he has sons at the front and preparing to go. He deprecates the fact that there are church officials in Toronto who would force boys of tender years to take up military training in our public and high schools. He declares that the military spirit is at the bottom of the present war in Europe. He adds:

"This military spirit does not exist in Germany alone; it is only there in its worst and most brutal form. It is present in Great Britain as well as in Germany, and it is in Canada as well as Great Britain."

The reverend gentleman fails to make an obvious distinction. The military spirit in Germany is an altogether evil and, as he says, "brutal" spirit of aggression and destruction. In Britain and Canada, whatever military spirit there is, is defensive and preservative. There is much that is commendable in the military spirit. In its best features it is patriotic, and patriotism is a divinely sanctioned, if not divinely enjoined, thing. Miltary traning in our schools is not likely to develop the malignant side of the military spirit; nor justify the preacher's fear that "the military ideal will be fastened upon us at the colse of the war. There is no danger of that, we shall then have had enough of war and be satisfied to have met the demands of the highest spirit of militarism, the defance of our country and liberties. It will, however, help develop the patriotic spirit that impels its possessor to place the interest of his country first and incites to worthy service and, if necessary, to sacrifice. There doesn't seem to be any danger of the limited sum of military training in school, which ends at fourteen to eighteen years, fixing anything in the boy's mind like the military spirit or ogre in Germany exercises upon the whole life of the unfortunate German, under compulsory military service conditions. While there seems little danger of moderate military training in the schools developing a militiaty spirit in its objectionable form, it serves to meet a great need in the youth and people of Canada—the spirit and fact of discipline. Our undisciplined natures are what lead us astray and weaken and give wavering impulse to our lives Discipline, as involved in military training in the schools, involves respect for authority and submission to its requirements. If a boy learns in school to respect the human authority of the state, he is in a fair way to a recognition of the claims of divine authority upon his life.

CONSIDERATION OF QUESTION OF THE HIGH COST OF LIVING

If the recent delegation of mayors to the Federal Government was of any real value it lay in the publicity that there is a suspicion abroad that the increased cost of foodstuffs in Canada is due largely to combines of dealers who have deliberately manipulated the markets, through the agency, innocently or otherwise, of the cold storage companies. Coal rings were also spoken of with a vehemence that left no doubt in the minds of the governmental committee as to the strength of the statements. Whether or not the government will take steps to ascertain the facts remain to be seen. The Minister of Justice hinted that if any evidence was brought forward sufficient to warrant him he would prosecute any organizers of combines that affected the food of the people. If it is left to private citizens to make the charges, and consequently to bear the expense it would not be very conducive to action, but we understand that the government will shortly delegate to municipalities, under the War Measures Act, power to take drastic measures to break such combines.

The Minister of Labour stated that the cost of living in Canada had increased but 17 per cent., which was less than any of the belligerent countries and, with the exception of the United States, which is 12 per cent. even a smaller increase than any of the neutral countries. The percentage was based on figures taken from 60 centres in Canada. While we assume the figures to be correct on the whole we do say that they were somewhat misleading for the discussion For instance, the other day we received a letter from a certain district in New Brunswick giving the prices of certain foodstuffs and in ascertaining the prices in Montreal and Toronto, we found there was a difference approximately of 60 per cent., which to say the least, is strong circumstantial evidence of food trusts somewhere. A further statement by the minister was that though measures had been taken in other parts of the Empire to regulate the prices of food very little relief had been obtained. We would suggest again that that was hardly the point raised by the delegation, though we are frank to say that we wish it had been. The main question as we understood it, was the suspicion of food trusts which had caused the prices to be raised in certain industrial centres by 40-50 and up to 60 per cent. If there are no food trusts and no artificial raising of prices by manipulators and the advanced prices are caused only by supply and legitimate demand then the citizens of Canada will be satisfied to pay, but they do object to any one seeing undue profits at their expense, and since the Federal Government has the machinery through its agricultural department to find out the real facts of the situation, it is to be hoped that the truth will soon be told to the people. Mr. W. D. Lighthall stated the case in a nutshell when he suggested that when competition is replaced by monopoly regulation becomes necessary. That point has been reached in Canada.—Canadian Municipal Journal.

RUBBER MARKET IS AN EXCEPTION TO THE RULE

Control by the British Government Has Worked Out to the Benefit of the Every-Day Purchase of Rubber Goods

Since the second year of the war dawned more every day men and women have become familiar with the stock market—its ups and downs, its short selling, its margins, ex-dividends, etc., than ever before. To these people the real purpose of the market means something, where a few years ago it did not, but to tell these people that a government, and above all, the British Government, had interested itself in the "pulling off" of a corner would undoubtedly open their eyes.

Nevertheless, this is true, Great Britain has accomplished one of the biggest corners ever known in the commercial world and there is everything to indicate that this corner will continue for years to come.

The product affected is rubber — now the commonest of everyday articles — and the corner unlike those executed by private interests, is for the benefit of the masses, instead of a small group of capitalists. Great Britain could, if she wished, make it next to impossible to get any article of rubber beyond those already manufactured, but, instead, she has so controlled the market that, to-day, it is possible to purchase rubber at about 67c a pound, in the crude state, whereas, before the war, it was $1.67 a pound, and in 1910, it sold for $3.00 a pound.

While other conditions have sent food and staple articles soaring in price Britain, through her ingenuity in this affair, has steadily pushed the price down. Rubber is to-day the commonest article for footwear, apart from leather, and when this is considered, the importance of Britain's action is readily seen. Leather prices have increased, shoes have mounted in cost dollars a pair at a time, and still rubber has descended and the cost of rubber footery has remained about the same, in spite of the increased cost of fabrics and chemicals that enter into their manufacture.

The average person may wonder how this all happened. The answer is simple. In 1908 the bulk of the world's supply of rubber came from Brazil—from the wild trees of South America. That same year, Great Britain, appreciating the importance of the industry and its possibilities of increase, conceived the plan of encouraging rubber plantations in the Malay States, Sumatra, Ceylon and Java. The success of the project is now apparent.

In 1908 the rubber produced in South America was sufficient for the world's use. This year, the rubber supply will be 202,000 tons and the South American contribution to the whole is only 23 per cent., in spite of the fact that the South American production is fully as large as it was in 1908.

These figures make evident at once the importance of the rubber industry, the wisdom of Britain's control of the market, and also bring forcibly to the mind of the average person the saneness of the use of rubber as a substitute for leather, particularly in footwear—or at least as a means of saving the more expensive footgear.

RAG COLLECTION BY PUPILS OBJECTED TO

With the best of intentions and following a precedent established by city schools, the Playgrounds Association arranged a rag collection at the schools to-morrow in aid of the playgrounds. Mrs. (Dr.) Neal, Mrs. A. Mowat and Mr. Sangster, representing the Association, waited on the Board of Education last night regarding a minor matter of $28 overdraft to pay for bats and balls, and after it was satisfactorily settled, the rag question blew up. Mr. Eastwood complimented the Association and all that, but he questioned the advisability of the children bringing old rags to the schools.

If objection could be raised to the rags from any home Dr. Neal felt that the same objection could be applied to the children from that home.

Mr. Gordon understood that the rags would not be carried into the school.

Mrs. Mowat observed that the government had advocated this work and even Toronto schools adopted it.

Mr. Eastwood's suspicion of old rags underwent no change, but he was satisfied to permit this collection.

"And don't let it happen again," laughed Mr. Denne.

MR. BISHOP'S COMPLAINT ALREADY CONSIDERED

H. M. Bishop, in a letter to the Board of Education requested an investigation of a difficulty which he wrote had arisen between his children Stanley and Muriel on the one hand and Principal Voaden and Miss Stewart of the Queen Mary school on the other.

Mr. Crane stated that the case had received every consideration. He had interviewed parents, children and teachers, the Supervision committee was acquainted of the facts and he refused to attempt to proceed further.

Mr. Gordon moved that the letter from Mr. Bishop be referred to the Supervision committee with power to act.

Mr. Denne—They say they have already acted.

Mr. Gordon's motion received no seconder Mr. Crane moved, seconded by Mr. Denne, that the letter be received. Carried.

OVERLOOKING THE POINT.

The party papers are doing their best to make a grievance of the fact that Sir Wilfrid Laurier declined to commit himself blindly to a national service scheme the conditions of which had such an effect on Sir Thomas Tait that he promptly resigned as soon as he learned them. A point which these papers overlook is that the invitation to Sir Wilfrid came really from Sir Thomas Tait, and was only transmitted by Sir Robert Borden. Why should Sir Wilfrid be expected to acquiesce in humiliating conditions that Sir Thomas Tait would not tolerate for a moment? The grievance is not against Sir Wilfrid Laurier; it is against the system that caused Sir Thomas Tait to drop the whole thing like a hot coal.—Montreal Herald.

HE IS A FRAUD.

Britain Has Solved The Rubber Riddle

Rubbers and Overshoes Are Cheap as Ever Today, While Other Necessities, Particularly Shoes, Have Nearly Doubled In Price.

Rubber has been one of the most insistent and intensely interesting problems of the twentieth century—and its solution is proving of vital importance to the Empire in this great war.

Until 1910 the world depended for its crude rubber on the forests of South and Central America and Africa. The supply increased slowly, if at all, while consumption, since the advent of the motor car, has grown enormously. From an average of $1.00 a pound in 1908, the price jumped to $3.00 in 1910. Manufacturers of rubber kept pace—no doubt you remember what rubbers cost for a year or two—and the situation looked alarming.

The search for synthetic rubber was redoubled in vigor. German chemists had been working on it, and the world seemed to expect them to come through with some ingenious process for manufacturing rubber from its known ingredients, on a commercial scale and at a low cost. But the world still waits—and so does the Kaiser, judging from his indignation over Britain's refusal to let him import rubber by registered mail.

Relief from a rubber famine came instead from the far-sighted development policy of Britain's Empire builders, who for years, in spite of general ridicule, had been encouraging the growth of plantation rubber on a large scale in Ceylon, Sumatra, Java and the Malay States. Money was advanced to planters to carry them through the seven-year period before the trees started to produce, and hundreds of thousands of acres were planted.

By 1910, when the pinch came, British plantations produced 8,200 tons —11% of the world's output. The next year saw 14,000 tons of plantation rubber—nearly 20%. In 1912 it had grown to 29%—in 1913 to 44%—in 1914 to 59%—last year to 68%—or 107,867 tons. This year's production is estimated at 150,000 tons, or 75% of the world's supply.

With three-quarters of the rubber production thus controlled by Great Britain, and the seas in the grip of her mighty fleet, the Allies are assured of an abundant supply for war purposes, while the Teutons' troubles from lack of it are growing daily more serious.

Having a practical monopoly of the supply, and the power to impose such prices as she chose, Great Britain has made it, except to her enemies, a benevolent monopoly, and has set the price of crude rubber lower than it was before the war.

To Canadians this is doubly important, because the climate makes rubbers and overshoes a necessity. Now, when shoe prices are soaring, while rubbers are as cheap as ever, it is clearly economy to protect expensive shoes to the limit by systematically wearing rubbers at every sign of bad weather. Even with heavy soled shoes this pays, for shoes so protected will wear far longer, saving the cost of the rubbers several times over. Besides the big money saving, there is the valuable protection to health. Wet feet and colds go hand in hand, with a ghastly train of ills—easily avoided by wearing rubbers.

Then there is the patriotic side. Vast quantities of leather are absolutely necessary for the army, and the scarcity is growing. Every pair of shoes we save helps to ease the situation, and so serves the Empire to which we owe this welcome cheapness of rubbers.

Save your Shoes and Serve the Empire!

Editor Examiner.

Sir,—It has been a pleasing task to me to write the thirteen letters that you have kindly published in the Daily Examiner. I now proceed to suggest some of the reasons why there is a decline of spiritual life in the home, in business, and the Church, and it is generally admitted that such is the fact. The family home has always stood as the sanctuary of purity and innocence; there the noblest and best inspirations of childhood, innocence and love has been fostered and trained; there the sweetest and purest thoughts of earth have emanated; here mother has taught her little darlings their infant prayer; here they have been trained to love their Saviour, who said: Suffer the little children to come unto Me and forbid them not, for such is the kingdom of heaven, and He took them up in his arms and blessed them; here they were taught to kneel at mother's knee and say their evening prayer; it was the mother's gentle voice that sang them to sleep and watched over them day and night, when they were sick and soothed them in all their troubles, the family altar was reared up in their home, where father and mother read the Word of God and knelt in prayer, and were trained to attend the House of God, and where the Bible was the text Book in day and Sabbath School; where the teacher visited the home and talked with the mother about the dear little ones and the progress that they were making at school and the Minister called and read and prayed and gave good advice and counsel. Cowper, the poet, says of his mother on receiving her picture:

"I heard the bell tolled on thy burial day;
I saw the hearse that bore thee slow away;
And, turning from my nursery window, drew
A long, long sigh and wept a last adieu."

We could go on extolling a Christian home like the above, but space forbids us. We would like to give another picture like this: A family of six children, father and mother, round the table, supper is past, the father sits at one end of the table, with the large family Bible open before him, from which he is reading to his wife and family, who are gathered around him; this is their custom, morning and evening, always this family altar. God loves to see, and blesses and honours them for it, how would it be otherwise. This picture is eulogized in Burns' Cottar of Saturday night, where he says:

"The cheerful supper done, wi' serious face;
They round the ingle form a circle wide;
The sire turns o'er with patriarchal grace,
The big ha Bible once his father's pride."

I have tried to present a picture of a Christian home and a happy family honouring their father and their mother and loving and serving their Heavenly Father. God says Obedience is better than sacrifice. Sin came into the world by disobedience our sickness, troubles and trials are often brought upon us by our wilful, wayward actions, cause and effect follow one another. If children are disobedient to parents, disrespectful, follow their own inclinations, do as they please, neglect the means of grace, the prayer meeting Sunday school the church, spend their time at all kinds of amusements, all kinds of foolish games, wasting precious hours and many of them sinful and destroying, on the other hand mothers are away from home engaged in various work to the injury and loss of the family spending their time in society and visiting and other amusements, no mother can leave her home and assume other duties, whatever they are, without loss to the family—reading silly and foolish books and trashy novels is another great evil—when young people or old people go into the world and commence business, having had a bad or neglected training, we cannot expect them to be true to the best principles they may be very smart and far sighted, and make money, but they will naturally decline in spiritual things and be a hindrance to any church—both these illustrations show this to be a factor in causing decline of spiritual life in the church—thirdly, the church is partly responsible in changing her discipline, what made the church of to-day, was her doctrine, and her discipline and her laity, her congregational singing simple, plain preaching—preaching the word, the famous old horse-back riders carried their library in their saddle bags and when they preached the gospel, men were convicted and converted, under their preaching and wept and repented and were saved, the loss of the class meeting, prayer meeting, before morning service and after evening service many have been under conviction and have been saved at these services, conferences have added machinery to the church work, which has impeded the spiritual, they have made it an easy matter to join any church, in the olden times persons before being admitted into the church had to be in a saved state, I heard a minister say that any member of the church who was given up to dancing by that act cut themselves off the membership; but that was before the conference dropped off the foot note which was against dancing; other services have often taken the place of prayer meeting, there are a great many of her causes which lower the spiritual life of the church it would take three or four more letters you know we do not like to be told our faults, but it is because I love the church and all the people in it (even the hypocrites) that the non-church goers are so hard on some of them per-

"An Extra Run" on FRY'S COCOA

RUNNING a big Mogul on schedule time is about as complete a brain, sinew and nerve test as a man could want. So when the order comes for "An Extra Run" that engineer is wise who fortifies himself with a cup of FRY'S COCOA. FRY'S, because it builds for "nerves of steel." It's such a splendid food as well as a delicious beverage.

CREDITORS WILL SELL HOTEL.

KITCHENER, Nov. 7.—At a meeting of the creditors of William Witt of the American Hotel it was decided to dispose of the hotel as a going concern, liabilities being estimated at $4,000. Fault was found by some of the creditors with the local committees in charge of billeting of defaulters of the Ontario Sunday School Association for not encouraging visitors to patronize the hotels, now that prohibition is in effect. The majority of the delegates were billeted at private homes.

FATHER ON TRIAL.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 7.—The trial of John McIntyre of Glencoe, Ont., formerly a rural mail carrier, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of his daughter, Mary Ilene, opened here yesterday before Mr. Justice Lennox. The charge attributes criminal negligence on the part of McIntyre to secure proper medical aid for the young woman when the need was particularly urgent, the failure of which is alleged to have resulted in her death.

Cheese Board Closes The Season With Record Price of 23 Cents

A Wonderful Season For the Farmers Who Had Productive Herds —Mr. Kerr Again Swept the Board for Government Order, So It Was Rumoured.

THE FACTORY SHOWING

TO-DAY'S CHEESE BOARD.
1,808 boxes at 23 cents a pound.

ONE YEAR AGO.
1,808 Boxes at 16 5-16 Cents a Pound

The chimes in St. John's Church tower were ringing a roundelay to a happy bride and groom this morning while the Cheese Board's last session of the year was drawing to a close, with a record price in sight.

"You're missing a lot of good cheese this morning," Chairman Duff remarked to his audience of salesmen and buyers, and it is probable that the latter were actually missing something. But to the ears of the salesmen, or most of them, that twenty-three cents a pound was the sweetest music they had any desire or yearning to receive.

Mr. Kerr of Belleville, with rumoured Government orders behind him, once more swept the Board, taking the 1,808 boxes of October and November cheese at 23 cents—Twenty-three cents.

The factories boarded as follows:

Ebene	85
Warminster	105
Shearer	84
Selwyn	110
Villiers	54
Warsaw	120
Westwood	141
Oakdale	60
Missing Link	80
Myrtle	125
Ormonde	95
Young's Point	100
Lang	117
Mud Lake	64
Mud Creek	110
Mt. Pleasant	45
Norwood	200
Fleetwood	71
Killarney	100
Total	1,808

A pound off each box was allowed the buyers.

The annual meeting of the Board will be held on May 15th, 1917, or on the first Wednesday after that date.

Mr. Ward's Address.

Keep at its present price, Inspector Ward remarked in a short address, cheese is the cheapest food you can buy. He reminded the salesmen of the new law which comes into force on March 31st, next, providing for the paying with by patrons on the basis of the Babcock test, instead of the present method of selling by weight. Already eleven of the thirty-six factories in this district are using the test, but of the thousand factories between Toronto and Montreal, only eighty are paying by test. Mr. Ward stated that he had recently tested all the milk to factories paying by weight and had found some samples registering only three per cent. butter fat, while others showed as high as six per cent. It was unfair, he stated, to pay for milk of such varying qualities upon the same basis.

Men Competent.

Every cheese maker should be competent to make the test, Mr. Ward stated, but in any event the Government contemplated taking over the testing work at some future date, the factories to pay for the work.

Mr. Gillespie stated that any maker could qualify for testing in two weeks at the Dairy School.

Music & Drama

AT THE GRAND.

Nat Goodwin's farce comedy "The Chauffeur," was the offering of the Royal Alexandra Players, at the Grand, last night. A good-sized audience enjoyed every moment of the play, which is one of the fastest, cleanest comedies ever presented on the local stage. All the characters were well handled, especially those of Tommy, the Chauffeur, in the hands of Frank Hooper, and Mrs. Joderel Jenkins, the mother, which was played by Miss May Eyre. Walter Cluxton, a former Peterborough boy, gave a good, clean-cut performance of Commander Whipple, U. S. A., and was well received in his song review. For to-night this capable company are presenting Geo. Cohan's comedy "The Big Idea."

Twenty two thousand dollars does not seem to be a very large amount of money for a financier to raise, yet that is the amount that stands between penitentiary and honour in the life of Jas. Howard, who is the president of the McKinley National Bank. He has unintentionally appropriated a large sum of money from the bank, and he must replace it by Friday. He has realized on every share of stock and every piece of collateral he has in the world, still he is twenty thousand short. The bank examiner will be at the bank on Friday; this is Monday. In despair he turns to his son and confesses the whole miserable affair. The son, who is a writer of short his death and with the connivance of his father's good name he will commit suicide in such a manner that there will be no suspicion attached to his death and with the connivance of a friend, who is a life insurance agent, his father will be able to collect the insurance money in time to save his commercial integrity. Death is not a very cheerful subject to write a comedy around, but George Cohan is noted for doing the unexpected, and he has done so in his comedy. "The Big Idea," which was referred to by the New York press as the most mysterious comedy writer in a decade. The play is actually written as it is being played, before the eyes of the audience. "The Big Idea," when presented at the Royal Alexandra Theatre by this company, proved to be one of the most talked-of plays ever offered to the Toronto theatre-going public and played to capacity business for the entire week.

Passage of Prohibition in Michigan Means Much to This Province

Special to Examiner:

TORONTO, Nov. 8.—"The carrying of prohibition in Michigan will help us materially in the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act in the territory bordering along the Detroit and St. Clair rivers," said J. D. Flavelle, chairman of the Ontario Board of License Commissioners, this morning. "Prohibition in effect in Michigan will mean more effective enforcement on the Ontario act in that quarter. Some question arises to the effect a prohibition law in Michigan will have upon the Ontario liquor firms which have established offices in Detroit to take orders for delivery in Western Ontario. It is scarcely anticipated that the Michigan law will compel the closing of branch offices of the Ontario liquor firms in Detroit used for the purpose described."

Chairman Flavelle promises that any infractions of the law or blind-pigging operations on the the Ontario side of the border will be vigorously suppressed.

MOST WONDERFUL CURES IN CANADIAN HOSPITAL

London, November 8.—Lt.-Colonel Clarence Starr, of Toronto, who has charge of orthopedic work in Canada, is now at the Canadian special hospital at Ramsgate preparing for the setting up in Canada of several similar institutions, while Col. Robert Jones, director of military orthopedic work in Great Britain, is establishing hospitals similar to the Canadian hospital at Ramsgate all over Britain.

Canada has thus led the way in one of the most successful medical enterprises of war. Amongst recent striking cures at Ramsgate is that of Corporal Hogan, an employee of the Grand Trunk. Having been wounded twice at Ypres, he was buried alive during the Somme operations, while following the "tanks."

When rescued he had lost speech, hearing and taste. After ten minutes treatment, through mental suggestion at Ramsgate, his deafness and dumbness had vanished, and he has since recovered the sense of taste.

Another man named Villeneuve who was struck blind by a star shell, went for 14 months from hospital to hospital, fruitlessly. He eventually reached Ramsgate, where the special treatment restored his sight. He is now on active service again in France.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE PETERBOROUGH HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

Mr. Walter Stocker Was Re-elected President For the Year 1916-17—The President's Address Embodies a Number of Important Items—His Honour Judge Huycke and City Engineer Parsons Were Added to the Park Board—Financial Statement.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Horticultural Society was held last evening in the City Council Chamber. Mr. Walter Stocker, who later in the evening was re-elected to the presidency of the society, presented the following report:

The year just closed has marked the highest membership yet attained by our Society, 876 paid-up members. This is very gratifying in view of the many financial calls made on our citizens by the various charitable organizations.

During the last season two distributions of premiums was made to our members; the spring consisting of a choice of eleven different options, while this fall 6 Hyacinths, 6 Daffodils and 6 Narcissus was distributed to each. This latter distribution has proved to be a very popular premium which is indicated by the number of people who join late in the season to participate in same. In connection with these premiums I might also mention that the Society by letting tenders for the various options are not only making a financial saving for our Society but are also having the plants, etc., delivered in better condition. This is particularly noticeable in the various spring options such as Roses which will be remembered a few seasons ago was largely a failure on account of not being handled quickly enough.

MR. WALTER STOCKER

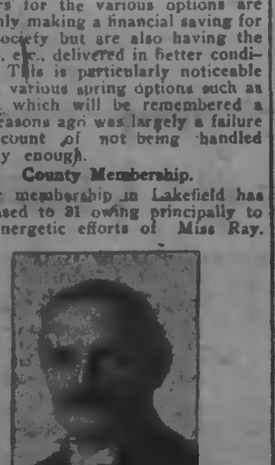
County Membership.

Our membership in Lakefield has increased to 31 owing principally to the energetic efforts of Miss Ray. Warsaw contributed 8 members, Keene 5 and Hastings 1. We have yet to secure our first Norwood member, this should be accomplished in 1917. The usual Lawn and Garden Competition was held during this season and we were pleased to note many new entries, there is still a great number who should be interested in this competition. Mr. Fred Adams, of Toronto, acted as our judge in a very capable manner.

Fountain Completed.

During the season the fountain in Victoria Park was completed, and is now in good working condition, this perhaps might be improved next season by the planting of Ferns between the boulders. During the early part of the summer considerable difficulty was experienced in securing competent help as caretaker for the Park, but we were fortunate later on in be-



HIS HONOUR JUDGE HUYCKE
At last night's meeting of the Horticultural Society His Honour Judge Huycke, was elected to the Board of Directors. Judge Huycke is also a member of the Park Board.

MR. FRANK WISE

ing able to secure Mr. W. S. McKee, who has proved his ability by keeping the Park in excellent condition during the extremely dry season. Many complimentary remarks were passed regarding the appearance of Victoria Park, and I trust the Park Board for 1917 will be able to make arrangements with Mr. McKee for his services next season. The curtailment of the city grant made it financially impossible to continue with the concrete curbing, but we trust it will be possible to continue this work next season. Regarding Central Park as you all know, owing to the necessity of using same during the spring months by the military authorities this Park could not be kept in the condition desired, and as pointed out in my report last year, the Society has not the funds to put this Park in good shape.

The Society is under a deep debt of gratitude to The Peterborough Floral Company for the contribution of $100.00 worth of bedding plants. Without this donation we would have been restricted in some of our work.

In conclusion I wish to thank our Secretary for the able manner in which he has looked after the interests of the Society.

WALTER STOCKER,
President 1916.

ORDINATION IN BELLEVILLE

Number of Delegates From Peterboro in Attendance

On Monday an ordination service was held in the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, Belleville. The Ordaining Council convened at the call of that Church for the purpose of considering the desirability of ordaining to the Christian Ministry Mr. John S. Rough, who for some time has been acting as superintendent of the Marchmont Home in Belleville, and who has on frequent occasions, supplied pulpits of various evangelical denominations, including some in Peterborough.

The delegates from Peterborough were as follows: Rev. J. R. Webb and Mr. R. C. Read, representing Murray Street Baptist Church; Rev. Dougall Brown, representing Park Street Baptist Church; Rev. John Galt, representing Gilmour Memorial Church; Rev. John Gilmour and Deacon Darling of the Lakefield Church. There was an excellent representation of delegates from other churches in the Association.

Examination of the candidates in Christian experience and views of Christian doctrine were heard at a session in the afternoon. The results were highly satisfactory. The Ordaining Council unanimously and heartily decided to receive the candidate for ordination.

The ordination service followed in the evening, with the Rev. W. F. Spidell of Port Hope acting as Moderator. Rev. O. C. S. Wallace, D.D., of Montreal, preached the ordination sermon, while the Rev. Dougall Brown extended the hand of fellowship, receiving the candidate into the brotherhood of the Baptist ministry. Rev. J. R. Webb delivered the charge to the candidate, while the Rev. John Galt gave the charge to the Church.

The leaders of the Belleville Church provided every facility for the comfort and welfare of the visiting delegates during their stay in Belleville.

GIFTS ARE APPRECIATED

Mrs. J. Knox, of the Canadian Kitchener League, has received the following letter:

Belgium., Oct. 20, 1916.

To Mrs. Jos. Knox,
Pres. Canadian Kitchener League,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Mrs. Knox,— I have much pleasure in acknowledging receipt of a bale of socks tobacco and cigarettes, which was delivered to me two days ago.

I have handed these out to the boys of the 5th Battery, in which unit I am attached and I can assure you the gift is appreciated, and on behalf of the boys and myself I wish to convey our thanks to the Canadian Kitchener League whose work is worthy of the highest praise.

Our work is at present rather trying but with the comfort of a clean pair of socks and a good smoke, one feels much more fit for the work on hand.

With best wishes for the welfare of the League.

Yours very truly,
Gunner Alex. Nicol.

TO THROW OFF GERMAN YOKE

Russia Determined--"We Will Never Bow Before the German," is Voice of the People—Peace Without Victory is Absurd

When one sits in Petrograd on a cold winter day in a half-heated room and sees before one the questionable blessing of spending five hours in a queue to get one pound of sugar, one is bound to become rather pessimistic. It seems that the Russians, even in Petrograd, where usually German influence has been specially felt, are in quite a particular frame of mind, writes a London correspondent in Russia.

A few nights ago I spent the evening with the family of a small merchant. Everything was as usual, even the "samovar" was there though soon it is bound to become more or less of a luxury, owing to scarcity of charcoal.

"Peter Ivanovitch," said I to him, "how does the war affect your business?"

"Very much indeed," said he. "A few more months of the war and I shall be forced to close my shop." "Isn't the war dreadful?"

"You see," he went on, "you foreigners do not quite understand what war means for Russia. The Germans have been sucking our blood for centuries and we let them do it. We are rather slow in deeds. The Germans have gradually enveloped our whole life, social and political, directing it for their own economical advantage, and we did not move. Then, through their banks, they began to buy up Russian land to the detriment of our peasants. They began to form syndicates to control the whole of our industries— they began to dream of making Russia their colony. Then at last we woke up and now these neighbours who have abused our hospitality will be swept off the map. There can be no other result of the war. We shall sacrifice everything for that purpose. We will never bow before the Germans."

Faith in the Duma.

Everybody is keen on the war. Amongst the peasants there are some who have returned from the front wounded. Not one of them asked me how long the war was going to last. The only question was, when they learned that I came from Petrograd, when the Duma was going to assemble. They have an implicit faith in the Duma and are persuaded that if it sat permanently the Russian Army would be by now in Berlin. They believe also that it is due to the pro-Germans, who want a speedy, patched-up peace, that the Duma has been prorogued. But they are as determined to fight to a finish as was my friend the merchant of Petrograd.

"We still have plenty of men capable of fighting" said the Mayor of the village to me, "and if 'they' at Petrograd should begin negotiations for peace before the Germans are finally crushed, we shall force them to continue."

Life in the Villages.

One would never say, judging by the appearance of the villages, that Russia is engaged in the most dreadful war the world has ever known. The fields are tilled as usual. It is true there was a scarcity of labour during harvest time, but students of the universities and the higher classes of the Secondary schools organized detachments of volunteers, the "Drugina," who did their best to counterbalance the scarcity.

In one of the villages which I visited there were some Austrian prisoners who were sent during harvest time to help, and remained afterwards. They were on very friendly terms with the peasants and had already begun to talk a little Russian. There is less friendly feeling for the German prisoners of war, and there were some conflicts, but, then the German is always haughty, and, though a prisoner of war, treats the Russian peasant as his inferior.

GERMANS DESTROYED THEIR OWN SUB.

London, Nov. 6.—A despatch to Reuters' Telegram Company from Copenhagen, says that a German submarine stranded Saturday night off Harboosre on the west coast of Denmark. After vain attempts by German torpedo boat destroyers to refloat it, and the refusal of assistance from the local lifeboat station, the crew blew up the submarine and took refuge on board of the destroyers.

NYLIN SUED BY FIRM

COMPANY ALLEGES HE WAS INCOMPETENT AND NEGLIGENT

Brantford, November 6.—A county court suit is to be heard soon in Hamilton between W. Bell & Son, munition workers of St. George, and Eric Alexander Nylin, now held in Hamilton on a charge of tampering with shells. Nylin, who was the superintendent at the St. George plant for some time, entered suit for the payment of $550 salary, and the firm then entered a counter-claim for $1200 alleging that he was incompetent and negligent, causing heavy loss to machinery and loss of orders through his inability to deliver shells as ordered.

TO SHELTER POOR

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 7.—Because of hard times, Dr. Irogoven, new Radical President of Argentina, is arranging to shelter the destitute of Buenos Aires in public buildings. He will pay for their food himself.

This step, taken by the new president, one of the first important decrees he has issued since his inauguration two weeks ago, gave Argentine its first insight into the character of its new executive.

Before he election Irogoyen made no speeches and made no written pledges, though he made it understood that he was opposed to all ostentatious display and was the "people's candidate."

He will turn his salary of nearly $100,000 back into the National Treasury.

Children Like It

It is not an easy matter to get a medicine that children like, or to force them to take one they don't like. Most mothers know that a cough medicine while palatable, should contain no drug injurious to the child. The great popularity of is explained by the fact that it contains no opium or narcotic of any kind, and at the same time is so pleasant and agreeable to the taste that children like it. For this reason it is a favorite with the mothers of young children.

Only Four Applications For the Positions Received by Children's Aid Society—Thanks Extended to Tag Day Workers.

PURCHASING REPORT

With only four applications for the position of superintendent of the Shelter, the Executive of the Children's Aid Society at yesterday's meeting, in the Bank of Montreal Chambers, decided to readvertise in the local papers, including the weekly editions, with the object of attracting possible rural applicants.

Mr. E. A. Peck presided, with the following members present: Mr. Jos. Wearing, secretary; Mr. C. A. G. Spence, Chief Howard, Mr. G. Walter Green, Mrs. Hopwood, Mrs. Stoker, and Mrs. Gibbs.

The applications for the two positions of superintendent and matron were from the following:

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Millar, 282 Carlisle Avenue, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh F. Conners, 617 Bethune street, and Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Leggett.

Chief Howard moved that the appointment be left to the three ladies of the Executive, and Mr. Wearing, with power to act.

Mr. Spence enquired if there was any chance for the reinstatement of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Henry. They had not been given an opportunity of accepting or refusing to manage the shelter under the new regulations. They should at least be given a chance to refuse it.

Chief Howard stated that Mrs. Henry was not physically able to perform the duties of matron.

Mr. Wearing requested that Chief Howard be added to the committee.

Ex-Ald. Green stated that he hardly regarded it wise to leave the important duty of making the appointment of superintendent and matron of the Shelter to a committee. If the committee would report to the Executive he would second the motion.

Chief Howard agreed with the suggestion and the motion carried.

At the same time it was decided to advertise again the applications to be received up to noon on Monday, November 13th. Mr. Green moved to this effect, seconded by Chief Howard, any new applications to be considered with the committee's report, at a meeting on Tuesday next.

Thanks to Mrs. Knox and Workers.

Moved by Chief Howard, seconded by Mrs. Stocker, that the Secretary be requested to write a letter of thanks to Mrs. J. Knox, the Convenor of the annual Tag Day Committee, expressing the appreciation of the members of the Executive Board of the Children's Aid Society for her very kind and generous assistane in our annual Tag Day enterprise.

And that Mrs. Knox be requested to extend the thanks of this Society to the ladies of her committee who assisted in the recent Tag Day campaign and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the press.

Discussed Applications.

In a rather desultory discussion on the applications received, objection was expressed to the Leggett appointment, chiefly because four children were included in the family, and the idea of segregating these children from the Society's wards was repugnant to the Executive. The Miller and Conners applications were not seriously considered.

Mr. Spence reminded the Executive that the Society owned practically none of the equipment and furnishings at the Shelter. If a new Superintendent is appointed the necessary household articles will have to be purchased.

MR. SPENCE WILL TOUR COUNTY GIVING ADDRESS ON C. A. SOCIETY

As agent for the Children's Aid Society Mr. C. A. G. Spence has been arranging a tour of the villages and rural centres of Peterborough County, where he will deliver illustrated lectures on the Society's work. The first of the meetings he has scheduled will be held in Lakefield on November 23rd in the Town Hall, which Reeve Fitzgerald has placed at his disposal for the occasion. At yesterday's meeting of the Society it was decided to purchase for $12 a set of slides from Mr. J. J. Kelso, Toronto, depicting the activities of the Children's Aid Society in Ontario. Adjutant McElheney has promised to loan Mr. Spence his stereopticon machine to be used where electricity is available. The object of this tour is to elicit the support of rural districts toward the Society's work, support that is hoped will be material as well as moral.

CHILDREN KEPT AT SHELTER MUST BECOME WARDS OF THE SOCIETY

There are now only eight children at the Shelter, three of whom may be placed for adoption according to Mr. C. A. G. Spence's report as agent at yesterday's meeting of the Children's Aid Society. The other five are being more or less supported by relatives. Mr. Spence reported a condition which he felt should be discouraged and discontinued. One boy who had been received previous to the present administration had been at the Shelter 168 days costing the Society $57. His mother had recently married a farmer but had paid nothing for the boy's care and maintenance. Another boy had cost the Society $270. His mother had provided 40 cents for his upkeep. These boys had not been made wards of the Society.

The members agreed that these children should be returned to their mothers. If the latter cannot support them, the children should then be made wards. And it was held that this change should be carried out in all future cases.

Expenditure Lighter.

Only five pounds of butter were consumed at the Shelter last month. Chief Howard pointed out that the requisition system would afford a monthly statement of the quantity of goods purchased and used.

Mr. Spence explained the lower cost last month by the smaller number of children at the Shelter.

The crusty old bachelor, with the self-winding twenty-four hour grouch, settled down into one of the club armchairs.

"I've just spent an hour talking with some young married ladies," he growled, "and not once did their conversation deviate from the great feminine trilogy."

"What's that?" came from the depths of another armchair.

"Babies, servants and babies."

Iron makes pale faces rosy, and phosphorus restores nerves, making you 100 per cent stronger in a few days.

It is the desire of every man, woman and child to feel well, eat well, digest well, look well; but you must have plenty of iron in your blood to obtain this elev of happiness and youth. The moment that the blood gets thin or impure, your stomach is unable to digest your food and it passes into the bowels undigested, then your bowels are unable to take any nourishment from the undigested food and the poisons from the undigested food and the poisons from the undigested food enter the blood, thus destroying your body. Pimples, eczema, boils, catarrh, sallow complexion, sores, ulcers, rheumatism, etc., and your skin takes on a sickly color, your nerves shake, you become sallow, your nerves shake, you feel tired and all worn out, you take all sorts of medicine and yet you feel nothing does you any good. Now, what you need is iron to build up your blood and phosphorous to restore your nerves. First one should eat enough food, then go to your druggist and get some Bentzol Phosphorus with Iron, and in ten days you will find you will be 100 per cent. stronger. The moment that Bentzol Phosphorus with Iron is taken it is absorbed by the blood and nerves and you will notice a difference almost immediately. By uniting the iron with the phosphorus you form an entirely new form of iron that will not blacken the teeth, upset the stomach nor cause constipation.

Bentzol Phosphorus with iron as organic of here does not contain the atom of poisonous strychnine, nor any poison which has been found so harmful in almost every tonic, while it is a combination which makes you feel fine for a while, but instead it goes to the root of your trouble, builds up your blood, strengthens your nerves, giving power to digest your food and drives away all stomach, liver and kidney complaints. Bentzol Phosphorus with Iron is dispensed in this city only at P. C. Wilson's Drug Store, Charlotte street.

GRAPE-NUTS FLAVOR

Grape-Nuts food is probably the most appetizing form in which honest whole wheat is utilized as food.

But to whole wheat is added malted barley in making Grape-Nuts, and the sense of taste quickens at once when a spoonful of the food is eaten with cream. For the barley has a rich, individual taste which, blended with the sweetness of wheat creates a rare flavor recognized by the palate as unusually new and delicious.

Aside from its wonderfully vitalizing value as a food, Grape-Nuts has a flavor that has made it a favorite everywhere.

HAD INDIGESTION

COULD KEEP NOTHING ON STOMACH

Indigestion is one of the worst forms of stomach trouble. The stomach becomes upset and you have a raw, debilitated feeling in it.

After a meal you feel that you must get rid of that nasty, bilious, burning sensation; that souring and rising of the food which is so unpleasant and in many cases very painful.

It is not necessary for you to be troubled with indigestion when Burdock Blood Bitters may be so easily obtained. This old and well-known remedy, which is a combination of nature's best roots, herbs, barks and berries will cure indigestion and all stomach troubles.

Mr. Lasare Savoy, Pokemouche, N. B., writes: "About two years ago I was troubled with indigestion that bad I could keep nothing on my stomach. I was sorely disappointed in everything I tried to relieve me. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I took four bottles and can now eat anything that is set in front of me."

That grand old medicine, B.B.B., has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that it is the best cure for all stomach troubles.

FAVOUR SUPERVISED TREE PLANTING IN PETERBORO

The question of supervised tree planting was introduced at last night's meeting of the Peterborough Horticultural Society by Fire Chief Howard who suggested that the Society consider the matter with a view of co-operating with the City Council in the formation of a by-law covering the needs of this particular city. City Engineer Parsons who was present at the meeting said he would favour any suggestion that the Society would make and endeavour to embody them in a by-law which was in course of preparation.

Mr. Frank Wise, second vice president of the Society said that until some definite plan was arrived at and the matter taken entirely out of the hands of the City Council, supervised tree planting would be out of the question. He favoured the establishment of a Park Commission. This year the Society had to pay more for the help that was required to take care of the park yet the Council cut off the regular annual grant. "That's the kind of men we get in the Council" said Mr. Wise.

Some of the members favoured the elimination of the Manitoba maple as a recognized shade tree. The hard maple and the elm were spoken of as the two best trees for this particular district. The matter will be taken up at a meeting to be held at a later date.

408 PUPILS WITH DECAYED TEETH AND CAN'T PAY DENTIST

Condition Revealed by Miss E. P. Kennedy, Public School Nurse —Schools Free From Contagious Disease.

ROUTINE BUSINESS OF BOARD

Dr. Burnham presided in the absence of Mr. B. F. Ackerman at last night's regular meeting of the Board of Education.

A letter from Hugh Austin of the Collegiate Institute Athletic Association acknowledged the Board's grant of $30 for the annual field day prizes.

Gordon Deyell requested a rebate on his fees for the present Fall term. A non-resident of the city had paid $10 in Sept. but owing to a scarcity of farm help left the Collegiate Institute on October 5th.

Mr. Crane moved, seconded by Mr. Denne that he be allowed a proportionate rebate. Carried.

OPEN NEW ROOM AT QUEEN MARY SCHOOL AT XMAS

To Relieve Congestion in the King Edward and South Central Schools

The continued increase in attendance at the King Edward school was the subject of a letter from Inspector Mowat which Mr. Crane read at the Board of Education meeting last night in part as follows:

The 12 rooms are now all occupied, and there are 98 pupils in the two lower primary rooms with no further accommodation for new pupils.

The attendance at the South Central for October, including the Kindergarten was 446. There are but ten class-rooms in this building and all the classes are large. The present attendance in the two lower primary rooms is 92 which leaves no room for new pupils.

There are ten rooms occupied in the Queen Mary school with a present attendance of 424. There are 93 pupils enrolled in the two lower rooms and the seating capacity in these rooms is practically taken up.

There are, fortunately three unoccupied class rooms in the Queen Mary school and, if any new pupils are to be admitted at New Years, it would seem that it would be necessary to equip one of these rooms and engage another teacher.

An additional room at the Queen Mary should accommodate the new pupils in that district and relieve the overcrowding at the South Central, at least, to some extent.

One additional room should serve until midsummer. This would not be increasing the Public School staff as the staff of the Central was increased by one at midsummer.

Mr. Crane moved, seconded by Mr. Gordon that the equipment of a new room at the Queen Mary school be left with the Property Committee with power to act and the appointment of a teacher be left with the Supervision Committee.

SUGGEST A MEDAL FOR MISS THOMPSON

Citizens Think the Heroism of Mt. Julian Girl Should be Recognized

A movement is on foot to have the heroism of Miss Bessie Thompson of Mt. Julian, who saved the life of her father, Mr. Wm Thompson when their boat caught fire, recognized by the Royal Humane Society. Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie M.P.P., Mr. Goodwill, and other citizens are interesting themselves in the movement. Miss Thompson brought her father safely to shore after he became exhausted. After they had reached the rocks he grabbed at her and both fell back into the water, but the plucky girl succeeded in pulling him out safely. Citizens generally will hope that Miss Thompson's heroism will be recognized.

A Good Way To Prevent Baldness

Says This Recipe Will Often Grow New Hair in Two Weeks' Time.

Most men take baldness as something inevitable though why it passes understanding. There is no more reason why hair should cease to grow on the top of the head than on the sides of the face—and most men have to shave to the end of their days or wear a beard.

If your hair is growing gray or getting thin in patches and you find great quantities of it in your brush and comb, the following recipe for a good home made hair tonic can be strongly recommended. Get from any druggist 2 oz. of Lavona de Composee and 6 oz. of pure Bay Rum. Mix together, adding one-half drachm of Menthol Crystals and a little perfume if you desire it. This mixture should be allowed to stand over night, when it is ready for use.

This preparation will in almost every instance stop falling hair within two or three days and numerous instances have been reported in which it has been the cause of new hair growth after years of partial baldness. It is quite important in using the prescription to apply the tonic directly on the scalp, rubbing briskly into the pores with the finger tips so that the hair roots can absorb its full nourishment. While the preparation contains no coloring matter and will not make the hair greasy or sticky, it often will restore hair to its natural color by its revitalizing action on the hair roots.

The modish new Russian blouses are made in velvet and taffetas, as well as in such lighter materials as Georgette, but in every case there should be a little characteristic Russian embroidery, and a narrow belt is generally fastened very loosely round the waist.

INTERESTING CHAIN OF EVIDENCE IN TRACING THE DUMMER HIDES

Davis Hill Committed on Two Counts at Preliminary Hearing of Cattle Stealing Charges—Other Charges Are Being Heard

Davis Hill of Dummer was committed for trial by County Magistrate Langley this morning on two charges of cattle stealing, in one case the alleged theft being two heifers from James Matthews and, in the other, two head of cattle from E. A. Carveth, farmers in Dummer township. Other charges are being heard this afternoon.

The chain of evidence welded during the past weeks by Inspector Boyd, County Constable Moore and their assistants was revealed from the outset of this morning's proceedings.

Steven Collins, a farmer living 1 1-2 miles east of Trent Bridge told of a visit to his place early in October of a young man who gave his name as Mr. Davis and who was identified as Davis Hill. He left two heifers which James Matthews positively identified as his.

TRACED HIDES.

The presentation of the Carveth case was more involved. He lost several cattle about October 6th. They were marked by holes punched in their ears. Mr. Carveth identified their hides in a London tannery.

To Mr. Gordon witness admitted that there might have been other farmers in Dummer who marked their cattle with ear punches.

A sealed bundle of five hides was carried into court, proving a clumsy burden for Inspector Boyd, and County Constables Moore, Bullied and Clements. Opened and spread out the hides exuded the unmistakable odor of a tannery which soon pervaded the court room.

STEPHEN COLLINS.

Stephen Collins said that Davis Hill early in October came to his place with several cattle which he said

To Mr. Gordon witnessed admitted with Mr. Brown. They had been driven during the night. Hill said he was cold. Mr. Brown had gone on to Mr. McKelvie's who was supposed to buy them. Hill said he did not wish to drive the cattle farther. There were nine head in the herd.

Witness described the cattle but would not positively identify the hides produced in court as those of the cattle Hill had brought to his farm.

Richard McKelvie, a cattle dealer recalled buying nine head of cattle about October 7th from a man named Brown for $247.00. He had never seen him before. Brown drove into McKelvie's yard early in the morning saying he had cattle for sale. Witness first saw the cattle in Collins' yard. They were part of a shipment of thirty-five cattle. Mr. McKelvie forwarded on consignment to George Sparkall, Toronto.

To Mr. Gordon—Brown said he lived four miles from Roseneath. Some of the nine cattle had notches out of the ears.

Mr. Gordon—How many cattle with holes in their ears passed through your hands in 1916?

Mr. McKelvie—I can't say.

Mr. Gordon—Were there 25? Or would you say there were over 6?

Mr. McKelvie—I really can't say.

CONTINUING THE CHAIN.

William Bowman, 55 Catharines, said he was a farmer and cattle buyer. He remembered buying six head of cattle from George Sparkhall and sold them to his brother, Fred with a consignment of twenty-one cattle.

Witness described the appearance of the six head he had bought from Sparkhall.

Witness made a practice of marking cattle he purchased with a scissor cut on the flank or rump. He examined the five hides produced in court and readily discovered on four of them scissor cuts, similar and similarly located to those he used for identification purposes.

Mr. Bowman would not swear that these were the hides of the cattle bought from Sparkhall, but he did say that they closely resembled the hides of those cattle, in colour and spotting; they had similar scissor markings and had leather weight tags similar to those used by Mr. Thos. Scott of St. Catharines.

INSPECTOR BOYD.

Inspector Boyd who has been working up this case related his tracing the cattle that one Brown sold to Mr. McKelvie of Campbellford to George Sparkhall of Toronto who had sold six of them to Mr. Bowman. The Inspector further traced them to London and when identified in a tannery by three Dummer farmers, Inspector Boyd seized them, had them sealed and thus delivered to Peterborough.

Wm. Redden, a Seymour farmer, saw the cattle "Brown" and "Davis" delivered to Mr. McKelvie but could not identify any of the hides in court.

It is understood that "Brown" is Clarence Sampson whom the authorities have failed to capture.

ted States. The demand was terrific and the supply lasted but a few minutes.

Claim These States.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—At 12.45, Republican National Headquarters formally claimed California and Minnesota for Hughes. An impromptu celebration was started when these 25 votes were declared Republican.

These claims are not admitted by the Democratic committee. If correct, they give a Hughes total of 265, Wilson 262, doubtful 12

West Virginia Democratic.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Shortly after noon to-day, Chairman Morgenthau, of the Democratic Finance committee, announced that the Democrats had carried West Virginia by 10,000. Republicans still claim this state, however.

Frank B. Kellog, Republican State chairman of Minnesota, wired the Republican headquarters that Hughes will carry that state by 5,000. Kellog claimed his own election for United States senator by 50,000. Democrats do not admit this.

McCormick Confident.

At 1.30 p.m., Vance McCormick, National chairman of the Democratic party, reiterated his claim that President Wilson had been re-elected by an electoral vote of 288. "I still stand by my original claim of 288 electoral votes for President Wilson." He declared in his statement "The President has certainly and surely been re-elected." The rural or "back-woods" districts of Minnesota seem to be swinging that State towards the Democrats. Later reports from that State indicate that Wilson is gaining steadily there.

Dry Candidate In.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 8.—Rev. Sidney J. Catts, independent, running on a "dry" platform, apparently will have 10,000 majority over W. V. Knott, Democrat, for governor.

Is Playing Golf.

ASHBURY PARK, N.J., Nov. 8.—With the result of the election still in doubt, President Wilson this afternoon went out for a golf game. Mrs. Wilson, who throughout the morning had directed the packing of things preparatory to moving back to Washington this week, accompanied the President to the Links.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—11 a.m. Pacific time.—At this hour the returns from 3,313 out of 3,570 precincts in California, gave Wilson a plurality of slightly over 9,000 votes over the Republican candidate, Hughes.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—No one in President Wilson carries either Minnesota or California, he is re-elected President of the United States.

At two p.m. the standing in the Electoral College:

LONDON, Nov. 8.—This city was almost as much wrought up over the Presidential election as the United States to-day. An unusual unpopular interest was shown when the returns completely turned about over night. No American election has ever aroge such widespread interest as has this Hughes-Wilson finish. Wherever there were crowds, there was betting with the odds at even or slightly favouring President Wilson.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Official figures at 8 o'clock are,—Wilson 266, Hughes 259, doubtful 57, including California and Minnesota. At this [illegible] the re-election of President Wilson seems a foregone conclusion, but it is not an actual certainty until the returns are in.

North Monaghan Ratepayers Favour A Grant To British Red Cross

Col. J. W. Miller and Mr. E. R. Hall Addressed Largely Attended Meeting—One Mill on the Dollar is Favoured, a Resolution Being Unanimously Carried

A largely attended meeting of the ratepayers of the Township of North Monaghan was held last evening in May's school house.

Mr. John McIntosh, the Reeve, occupied the chair. He said that the meeting as called in the interests of the British Red Cross, with a view of obtaining some expression of opinion from the ratepayers of North Monaghan as to a grant to be made by the Township for this purpose. From the large number of ratepayers that he had spoken to he felt that the ratepayers of North Monaghan were prepared to do their share. They recognized that our soldiers who had gone to the front must be well cared for, and especially so when they are sick or wounded and that no greater service could be done by those who remain at home than to contribute liberally to the support of the Red Cross.

Col. J. W. Miller and Mr. E. R. Hall both addressed the meeting at length and emphasized the importance of the war and the necessity for the care of our sick and wounded, who are fighting the battles of freedom and liberty for us.

A number of those present also spoke in favour of the Township making a liberal grant to the Red Cross.

It was accordingly moved by Mr. H. G. Webber, and seconded by Mr. Wm. Grady, that the Council of the Township of North Monaghan be respectfully requested to pass the necessary by-law authorizing the Township to pay to the British Red Cross Society one mill on the dollar on the Township's total assessment.

This resolution was then put to the meeting and was carried unanimously

Strong Cast in Line For The "Geisha"

First of the Finishing Rehearsals Held Last Night—Ninth Series of Operatic Presentations Under Direction of Mr. Devey—Most of the Caste Have Relatives at the Front

Peterborough has a record for production of light opera and musical comedy unique in Canada and probably all over this continent, for a city of its size in that standard plays are being regularly presented by a musician resident in the city.

Mr. R. J. Devey is now engaged in the ninth series of operatic presentations since coming to Canada. One at Winchester, Ont., three in Toronto, and the presentation of the "Geisha" this month makes a total of five for Peterborough. All these productions have been prepared and conducted entirely by Mr. Devey, with the exception of the Toronto series last May, when the vocal work was prepared by Maestro Carboni of the Hambourg Conservatory, but as no person in Toronto was familiar with the staging, Mr. Devey was engaged to stage the work.

The first of the finishing rehearsals was held last night with Act. I of the "Geisha." Miss Horner, who sings the part of "O Mimosa San," will not be present until the two final rehearsals. The principals and chorus demonstrated last night that an exceptionally fine production is assured. Several of the principals are included in the cast who so finely performed in San Toy last season. Miss Lila Waterman takes "Molly"; Mr. Fred Hartshorn, "Lieut. Fairfax," having as brother naval officers, Messrs. Liddell, Devey, Marshall and Bunnells; Miss Annie Bickerateth, "O Juliette San," the French girl; Mr. Vernon Dredge is qualifying as "Wun He"; and Mr. W. H. Barry, also of San Toy fame, is to shine as the notable "Marquis Imari"; supported by Mr. C. A. G. Spence as "Takamini"; Miss Leila Smith as "Lady Constance" is chaperone of the English party including the Misses Evans and she four dainty Geisha girls with Miss Agnes Horsfield as "Nami," are Misses Shepherd, Rathbone, Melton and Pollard. There are twenty-six speaking parts, and as the whole work has to be memorized, the task is no light one for amateurs. A striking feature of this company is that most of the performers have relatives at the front, some indeed whose loved ones have made the supreme sacrifice, and as the proceeds of this series is to go to the funds of the Peterborough Progressive Club, who speedily work for our Canadian soldiers, they have an additional incentive to do their bit.

After the "Geisha," Gilbert and Sullivan's delightful opera, "Pinafore," will be put in practice, followed by another of Sydney Jones' works, "A Greek Slave."

Efforts are being made to procure scores and orchestra of the opera "Maritana" at reasonable rates for next season, charges at present from either London or New York being practically prohibitive, but there is a possibility of the whole work being loaned by the Operatic Society of Old Trinity, New York. It is more than likely that a grand opera will be staged in Peterborough in the near future.

Y.M.C.A. TO HOLD A MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

The local Y.M.C.A. is proposing to conduct a big membership rally to be held the last ten days of November and to culminate the members to get busy. The effort will take the form of contests.

There will be two teams of senior members, two teams of intermediate members and two teams of junior members. The section securing the largest number of new members or renewals will be awarded a novel giving a group picture of the workers in the winning section together with the list of members secured.

In addition to the contest between the three sections which as stated will be decided on the basis of names enrolled, there will be a contest between the two teams of each division which will be decided by a plan of points crediting each team with five points for each name enrolled and one point for each dollar paid in membership fees.

The winning team in each section will be served a banquet. Each worker having in five paid memberships or the equivalent of five paid memberships, will have his own membership dated one year in advance. Workers enrolling two members will be presented with a Y.M.C.A. button.

The line up of the teams will be announced in a few days.

GREAT INTEREST SHOWN

Never have Peterborough citizens taken so much interest in the United States presidential elections as they have shown in the present contest. From 5.30 last night until midnight and all day to-day the Examiner 'phones have been kept busy. The vast majority of inquirers seemed to care little for the results from individual States, but they did want to know who was President. The last returns received by the Examiner last night indicated that Charles E. Hughes had been elected and the result apparently pleased nearly all Peterborough people. This morning, however, saw the situation completely changed over night. A number of the American colony in Peterborough spent last evening at the Examiner office hearing the returns.

WEDDING BELLS

HERLIHY—HARRINGTON.

On Tuesday morning, at St. Luke's Church, Downeyville, Miss Ethel Harrington, daughter of Mr. Michael Harrington, was united in holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. William C. Herlihy, son of Mr. Edmund Herlihy of Emily.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Galvin, while the members of the choir, of which both the bride and groom are members, turned out in goodly numbers. During the Mass solos were sung by Patrick Harrington and Miss Pearl Herlihy, and at the signing of the register Mrs. Patrick Perdue, sister of the groom, sang an Ave Maria. The stately bride looked dainty in a gown of white silk crepe, with pearl trimming, a white hat, and carried a bouquet of roses and lily of the valley, while her sister, Miss Mary Harrington, who attended her, was gowned in pale blue crepe with touches of white, and she wore a black hat. Mr. Vincent Perdue, cousin of the groom, was best man.

At 9 o'clock the bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her uncle, Mr. Thos. Lucas, who gave her away, to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Mrs. Patrick Perdue.

After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. Thos. Lucas, where a reception was held, and where about seventy guests sat down to a dainty repast. The bride is a very popular young lady and will be greatly missed in musical circles.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful lavalliere, set with pearls, to the bridesmaid, a pearl ring, and to the groomsman, a watch fob. The presents were numerous, among them being a check of one thousand dollars from her father, a check for five hundred from her uncle, and a shower given by the ladies of the Sodality, of which the bride has been musical directress for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Herlihy took the evening train for Buffalo and other American points, the bride travelling in a Russian green suit, with small black hat.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Herlihy wish them a long life of wedded bliss.

DORAN—CARROL.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Martin's church, Emsmouth, on Tuesday, October 24th, when Miss Mary Loretta Carrol daughter of Mr. John Carroll, of Emily, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Austin Doran, also of Emily. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McGuire. Miss Scollard played a beautiful march and Miss Lottie O'Donoghue sang "Ave Maria".

The bride was attired in a very becoming suit of navy blue, with hat to match and carried a beautiful white prayer book and pearl prayer beads. She was attended by Miss Marie Kennedy of Chicago, who wore a pretty tailored suit of blue, with a black picture hat. Mr. A. C. Wolff of Peterborough supported the groom.

After mass the happy young couple motored to the home of the bride's father, where a delicious breakfast was served, and at four o'clock in the evening a magnificent dinner was set before the happy couple and their many friends, among whom were Rev. P. McGuire of Ennismore, and Rev. P. J. Gallivan of Downeyville. After dinner the bride changed her wedding attire to a beautiful black silk, trimmed with white crepe silk and point lace, while the bridesmaid, gowned herself in a very becoming plum coloured suit. The evening was now spent in games and dancing.

The young couple were the recipients of many costly and beautiful presents, showing the high esteem in which they were held by their many friends. The groom's gift to the bride was a magnificent diamond lavalliere and to Miss Kennedy a gold brooch set with peridots and pearls and to Mr. Wolff, a scarf pin set with pearls.

Mr. and Mrs. Doran will reside in Emily, on spring side, and begin their married life with the best wishes of their many friends

ANDERSON—DEAN

A wedding of great interest was solemnized this morning by the Rev. Canon Cornish, in St. John's church, when Hazel Grace Weller, daughter of Mrs. H. B. Dean, Charlotte street became the bride of Wm. Franklin Currie Anderson. The bride who was unattended entered the church on the arm of her brother, Mr. W. W. W. Dean to the strains of the "Bridal March" from Lohengrin, played by Mr. E. J. Davey. The bride was very charmingly attired in a traveling suit of hunters green trimmed with fox fur with hat to match and Isabella fox fans. She wore a beautiful bouquet of sunset roses. After the signing of the register, Mendelssohns wedding march from "mid summer's night dream" was played whilst the bridal party left the church. Mr. and Mrs. Wm Anderson motored to Port Hope en route for Toronto. They will reside in Hamilton.

OBITUARY

EDWARD EMMERSON.

The Alameda (Sask.) Despatch, contains the news of the death of a former resident of Otonabee, in the person of Mr. Edward Emmerson. The deceased was born in Otonabee, and lived there until twenty-four years ago, when he went west with his family, settling in the Alameda district. Four daughters and three sons survive him. The Alameda Despatch states that Mr. Emmerson was one of the oldest residents in Alameda, and that the name has become a household one in the district. He was seventy-nine years of age.

I. O. D. E. TEA AT THE EMPRESS

Was One of the Most Successful and Largely Attended Events of the Season

Yesterday afternoon the Peter Robinson Chapter of the I.O.D.E. were the hostesses of one of the most successful and largely attended social events of the season, in the grill room of the Empress Hotel. The grill room presented a most gala and attractive appearance, being tastefully decorated with flags of the allied nations. The tables, which were prettily decorated with smilax and tiny candles, shaded in red, were waited upon by some of Peterborough's most charming daughters. The hostesses of the afternoon were Miss Jessie Spence and Miss Georgie Stevenson. Those assisting were Mrs. Widdifield, the Misses Hatton, Helen Davidson, Marian Grieve, Amy Clementi, Muriel Sommerville, all of whom were charmingly attired in white dresses and red aprons.

Amongst those present were: Judge and Mrs. Huycke, Mrs. Dela Fosse, Mrs. Carruthers, Mrs. Archer, Mrs. Stevenson, Mrs. Harry Thompson, Mrs. McElderry, Mrs. MacBain, the Misses Hall, Miss Halliday, Mrs. Goodwill, Mrs. Spence, Mrs. Lech, Mrs. Coulthard, Mrs. Perry, Mr. J. and Miss Hanmer, Miss Ormond, Mrs. Gillman, Mr. Killaley, Mrs. Trebilcock, Capt. and Mrs. Eastwood, Mr. and Mrs. George Hatton, Miss English, Miss Rubidge Miss Hugel, Mrs. Walker, Miss Morrow, Mrs. Dearle, Mrs Denne, Miss Roberts, Miss Sullivan, Lieut. and Mrs. Gordon Grahame, Lieut. Huycke, Miss Reinhardt, Miss Elinor Collins, Capt. Thompson Lieut. Hayes, Miss Lundy, Mrs. Widdess, Mrs. and Miss Dennison, Mr. Dunsford, Mr. Wallace, Miss Ferguson, Miss Clementi, Mrs. Gingras, Mr. G. A. Smith, the Misses Jenkins, Mrs. Marr, Mrs. Turner, Miss Hooper, Mrs. John Birnie, Miss Ruth Robertson, Miss Poole and Miss Ollie Meyers.

Several private "teas" were held during the afternoon.

The chapter desire to thank the management of the Empress for their generosity in not alone placing the grill room at their disposal, but also for providing all the coffee, tea and ice cream used and the Victrola, which was much appreciated.

The receipts of the afternoon were most gratifying being over $26.00.

MILITARY NEWS.

Dear Mother and Father,—Just a few lines in answer to your most kind and welcome letter, which I got just now. Well, dear mother, I guess you will hear the sad news before you get this of poor Howard Curtis. He got killed the last time we were in. We are just out for a rest, and we sure enjoy it when it comes. But I feel pretty bad about poor Howard. He was my best pal. We stuck together like two brothers ever since poor Bert Carpenter got killed. We came out here again together and was on pass together in England, last winter. So it is pretty hard for me. I could stand pretty near anything; but I had to shed a tear or two. Then we buried him in a graveyard of the two seconds; and he has a nice resting place. I carved out a tombstone out of hard white chalk, and put it over his grave. I would write to his father and mother, but I don't know how to tell them; it is too hard for me to do it. So when you see them, you can tell them he died like a hero and his brave deeds will never be forgotten in the history of our good old Battalion, and the glory of the Peterborough boys. He was well liked and a special favorite among his comrades. But his duty is done for his God and his country. He now sleeps peacefully free from all harm and danger, and may God take my brave pal's soul in his beloved home of heaven above. Express the deep sympathy to his father and mother for me, and if they want to know anything just write and let me know.

Well, dear folks, I received your parcel, and this is some of Mary's writing pad; I got tobacco and all. The 93rd is out here. I saw a lot of here again together and were on pass wick, and the two Lemay boys, and Willie McNorton and Norman Hatton. But was not talking to him.

Well, I will write again. I must draw to a close for now. Good-bye, with love to all. I remain your loving son, Stanley.

Pte. Stanley Garrett, No. 7634, First B. B. G. Light Trench Mortar Battery, First Canadian Division, C. E. F., France.

A letter received to-day from Lieut. Jesse Ketchum of the 93rd Battalion, states that he is France with the 20th Battalion. Lieut. H. C. Gillham of the 93rd, is also with the 20th Battalion, while Lieuts. Jack Watt and Vincent Eastwood are with the 18th Battalion in the same brigade. Lieut. Ketchum states that many of the men of the Peterborough Battalion are with the 20th, some of them in his own platoon. Among those mentioned are Bryar Carpenter and Harold Freeman.

Mrs. A. McCallum, 43 Smith street, has received from Rev. Ivor Daniel, Catholic chaplain to the 39nd Battalion, 11th Brigade, the following letter: Just a line to tell you not to be surprised if you do not hear from your son, Joe Beaubeau, for a little while. The reason of this is that he has gone through to hospital with a wound in his left arm that will perhaps keep him from writing for a little while.

I had a pleasant talk with him while he was being dressed. He looked remarkably well and was in good spirits so don't worry about him. Pray for him and for all our brave wounded, who astonish us by their cheerful endurance.

Still Regulations by Ontario Board for Infantile Paralysis.

An order-in-council has been passed giving effect to new regulations of the Provincial Board of Health, respecting infantile paralysis.

Every case must be quarantined six weeks. All children who have been in contact with a case must be quarantined two weeks; adult members of the family who are wage-earners are allowed to go about their work subject to regulations of the board. Where there is an outbreak, gatherings of children at picnics, picture shows, and playgrounds is prohabited. Doors and windows must be screened in house where cases appear, and premises kept clean. Every mild case showing headache, rising of temperature, persistent vomiting with slight muscular weakness and absence of paralysis must be quarantined.

Children from infected house may be allowed out of doors, but kept away from other children. Complete isolation of patient ill of infantile paralysis must be maintained until terminated by medical health officer. A separate room must be provided for patient, and no one allowed to enter it except attending physician, nurse, clergyman, or officer of health.

DANDRUFF SOON RUINS THE HAIR

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

The Fighting On The Somme Battlefront

Military Expert of the New York "Times" Reviews the War Situation—Allies Make Considerable Gains During the Past Few Days.

Another major attack has been made in the battle of the Somme. The French struck the German lines between Les Boeufs and Sailly, pushing their lines well to the east of the Bethune highway. Further south, their activities were directed against the woods of St. Pierre Vaast, the western part of which was occupied.

The object here, as in so many of these attacks, seems to have been to drive past the village of Transloy until its defenders were flanked out and threatened with capture, so that it would be necessary for them to vacate the position.

Sunday night fell with the French in possession of all the ground which they had taken during the day. Early Monday morning, however, the Germans reacted. Just to what extent they recovered the last territor ydoes not appear. The French report gives them the eastern end of the village of Sailisel and the southwestern corner of the woods. The German report is not sufficiently clear as to details to say just what has happened. All that we can be sure of therefore is that in the counter-attack, which was delivered almost immediately, part at least of the lost ground was retaken and that the French were forced back toward their original positions.

This has been a most unusual action in the Somme fighting. The Germans have hitherto been very slow to react, and when they did, their attacks have lacked the force and persistence which have been so characteristic of their fighting since the war began. Just why this is no one knows. Several explanations might be advanced without any surety which is the full truth.

CONTRIBUTORY CAUSES.

The probabilities are that there were a number of contributory causes, all of which had influence. The explanation given by the Germans, is that a temporary shortage of shells, occasioned by the unexpected demand, prevented their artillery from being used with its customary efficiency in the first months of the fighting. The same source of information tells us that this defect has now been remedied.

Of all the possible causes this is probably the least likely to be true. Nations at war do not give out such details where, as in this case, they might be useful to their opponents. If, for instance, the Germans had weakened the western front to prosecute their plans in the east, either against the new enemy or against Russia, an explanation of this sort, if believed by the Allies, would most certainly lead them astray. This the Germans would naturally count upon. We may discard as improbable that information of such value and so pertinent to the general manufacturing situation in Germany would be given out officially so that the Allies might become aware of it.

The next point is the possibility that the Germans have recently strongly reinforced their front by withdrawals from other fields. This is not improbable. We have seen the ease with which the French wrested important positions from the Germans at Verdun, positions which, had they attempted to take them under the usual conditions prevailing in the west, would only have been taken at a cost equal to that which the Germans expended to get them. This certainly indicates a weakening of this section of the front to a remarkable degree. It is also noticeable that the success of the French attacks at Verdun was coincident in point of time with the increasing German resistance on the Somme. This may be only a coincidence, but it lends colour to this theory.

SITUATION BECOMING SERIOUS.

Whatever the reason may be, however, one thing seems fairly well demonstrated. The German attempts to discount the importance of the work of the Allies have not been altogether sincere. This again is good politics. To deprecate the efforts of one's opponents in public, while appreciating their true character in private, has a beneficial effect on one's friends, and is rather disheartening to the opponents if the statements are believed. This is a common practice which both sides, for good political reasons, indulge in frequently.

The Somme attack is a menace to the Germans. Their inability to cope with it successfully was a cause of worry and dissatisfaction at home, and was encouraging Germany's opponents. The Germans appreciated, in spite of their statements ridiculing the allied campaign, that the situation was becoming serious and saw the necessity of bringing the advance to a halt. They know, as does every student of the war, that while the village of Bapaume, for instance, bears as one place only a small relation to the war as a whole, yet at the same time it controls all that is left of the old Albert salient. They know that if by a sudden thrust the Allies should take Bapaume all the troops and guns in this salient would be in danger of capture before they could be withdrawn. This would mean the retirement of the German line, as it now exists, to a line due south of Arras, which, while it would mean little, as far as the entire war area was affected, would, nevertheless, create uncertainty at home and inspire courage in the camp of the Entente.

THE GERMAN LINE RECOILED.

There is an even more extended danger. If the steady creeping forward of the allied line should continue, the time would come sooner or later when some truly important line would be cut. There are such lines, as we know. When this came it would not be a question of vacating a small salient, but a considerable section of the front would be adversely affected. Such a thing is a long time off, but it was a contingency which the German Staff had to face. Out of this grew the importance of discouraging the allied advance and permitting it to go no further.

In the British part of the latest spurt, that part of the front between Gueudecourt and le Sars received the full force of the blow. As in the case of the French effort, the German line recoiled on Sunday, only to come back and recover part of the ground lost. The reasoning in the case of the British section of the line is ever more compelling than in the case of the French.

The general result of the British fighting has been to narrow the angle of the salient. At present it is a right angle, which is dangerous enough. But the danger would be increased, as the angle became sharper since with guns of a given range, the sharper the angle, the greater the length of the German line which could be taken in the rear. This would not only extend the area of fighting further across the Ancre, but in that fighting would put the German line at a disadvantage, due to the many angles at which it could be attacked. Therefore the sharper the angle, the harder the German task in preserving their position in the salient.

BERLIN PRESS HAS SORRY TASK REPORTING THE WAR

Even the Newspapers Have Been Put on the Defensive by the Battle of the Somme

LONDON, Nov. 9.—What the inspired Prussians are now trying to teach the people of Germany about the battle of the Somme is both interesting and instructive. For generations the Germans have grown up in the belief that Britain possessed no army that could be a factor in a European war, and that such as she did possess was composed of "mercenaries and hirelings' who could never be pitted against the finished product of Continental military systems. In the early days of the present war the Hamburger Fremdenblatt declared "the more of these gentry we can get in front of our Prussian bayonets the better pleased we shall be."

The Hamburg Journal and its contemporaries have travelled far since then. The bearing of these same "gentry" at Mons and Le Cateau compelled the admiration of the more thoughtful writers—soldiers themselves—but the general press paid it no tribute. And now this press is called upon to explain the phenomenon that, in what it admits to be the greatest battle of modern history, the Prussian legions are compelled to accept the defensive at the hands of the newly created and much contemned levies of the Islanders.

For the moment events in Southeastern Europe permit of attention being diverted somewhat from the Somme. In the first days of July, when the British offensive opened, it was complacently regarded as a spasmodic effort, foredoomed to failure like the previous efforts at Neuve Chapelle and Loos. Up to that period the press had amused itself—and, presumably, its readers—with scoffs at England's military inertia while France was slowly being shattered at Verdun.

WHAT THEY WANTED.

"Why do not the English come to the aid of the French?" wrote the Hamburger Fremdenblatt on June 17. "Where is the much talked of English offensive? We could wish nothing better than that it should quickly come so that we might drive it back with bloody heads. ("Blutige kopfe" is a figure of speech much in favour with German scribes) Only on June 30—the day before the attack was launched—the Kolniache Zeitung ironically asked the same question and asserted that the French were demanding "ever more loudly that the Britsih should contribute something to the decision."

One day later, the French—and the German press writers—had their desire gratified, and, for the tranquillisation of its readers the "Kolnische" fell back upon the old formula. "This nondescript British army, scraped together under all possible conditions, and officered by men who for the most part have no military experience, has to overthrow an army hardened by two years of war, and commanded by leaders whose skill is of the highest to be found on the continent."

In the judgment of the military expert of the Frankfurter Zeitung, as placed on record during the first week in July, the British offensive was merely a demonstation. "We can," he wrote, "repose the fullest confidence in our leaders and in our faithful troops and may calmly await events." Major Moraht, writing in the Berliner Tageblatt, was equally out of his calculation. "A sustained offensive," he predicted, was out of the question and the British would not be mad enough to try it. If they did there soon would be a neurad of the British army on the continent.

Such numbers that their total now exceeds that of the British captives in Germany, constitute an item upon which the German writer do now willingly dwell. Very rarely are they alluded to, although Sir Douglas Haig's daily reports, recounting their numbers continue to appear—if inconspicuously—in the German papers. It is attempted to minimise their loss and incidentally to assuage German amour proper by explaining that these prisoners were for the most part wounded men and therefore in any case no longer effectives. This plausible explanation is sufficiently disproved by the appearance of the prisoner convoys as shown in the English illustrated papers and battle films.

Meantime, the Berlin War Office has deemed it desirable to reinforce the Press. It has recently made a few new departure in the issue, through the official Wolff's Bureau, of communiques which go beyond the ordinary record of events, and enter into "explanations" which, two months ago, it would not have deigned to employ.

Journalistic "Hedging."

In these communiques one finds frequent references to Anglo-French initial "successes" which have led to no permanent or "material" result; to the fact that the Prussian armies still "control the situation," and that neither guns or troops have had to be removed from before Verdun; as well as glowing attributes to the heroic resistance of the Prussian "field-grays." Much stress, too, is laid upon the smallness of the allied territorial gain. In relation to the task which the Allies have set themselves—the deliverance of Belgium and the occupied French provinces—and comforting calculations are made regarding the time and sacrifice which, at its present rate of progress, the completion of this task will demand.

One fact of interest, however, is that in the argument, as on the battle field, the Teuton is now on the defence—a very different state of things from what one recalls in the first stages of the war. The significance of this fact has not escaped some of the journals. The essentially militarist Kruez Zeitung says: "England has developed a vigor and energy such as she has never shown before, not even in the Napoleonic wars.

"There are no grounds to warrant the belief that she is near the point of exhaustion either in men or material. Everything tends to show that she is resolved and able to continue the attack she launched with what is, for her such unexampled strength.

Colonel Godke, writing in the 'Vorwaerts, before its last suspension, said: "If we are to avoid boasting we must admit that the enemy has a preponderance in men and guns upon our western front which has created a serious situation." But he proceeds to offer consolation that the heroism of the defence has triumphed so far as to thwart the main purpose of breaking through the Prussian line. And, indeed, this would appear to be all the consolation the German reader is at present able to derive from his papers. All the old bombastic talk of the irresistable Teuton hosts 'hacking their way' through their crumbling opponents is silenced for the time.

United States Elections Are Still Undecided

MONTANA WOMAN ELECTED

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Both Hughes and Wilson claim the election, with the President leading in the returns. The Electoral College votes at midnight show Wilson 251, Hughes, 247. Doubtful, 33.

New York, Nov. 9.—The Presidential fight is still undecided. At 8 o'clock this morning neither President Wilson nor Charles E. Hughes had shown a sufficient number of electoral votes in the count of ballots so far made to insure election.

The United Press canvass at that hour showed the Democratic nominee slightly in the lead, with 251 against Hughes' 243. Thirty-seven electoral votes were still in doubt, representing the states of California and Minnesota, New Mexico, North Dakota and New Hampshire. Wilson needed fifteen votes for a majority; Hughes, 25. California or Minnesota, plus any one of the other doubtful states, would give the Presidency to Wilson, while Hughes if he did not carry both California and Minnesota, which together would give him more than his twenty-three votes needed, one of these with all the others, to obtain the necessary 266.

To Quickly Remove Ugly Hairs From Face

(Beauty Notes)

Beauty-destroying hairs are soon banished from the skin with the aid of a delatone paste, made by mixing some water with a little plain powdered delatone. This is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed to remove the remaining delatone. This simple treatment banishes every trace of hair and leaves the skin without a blemish. Caution: should be used to be certain that it is delatone you buy.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Begin right by starting to keep accurate account of your receipts and expenditures from the poultry branch.

Horns on cattle cause them to be more restless when together, hence they do not thrive so well as dehorned ones.

If a tool or implement is worth borrowing, it is worth taking home in just as good condition as it was when it was borrowed.

The monthly check from the creamery provides the mainstay in the household as against the precarious returns from yearly crops.

In the absence of sufficent succulent ration, a good substitute such as molasses, beet pulp or an extra supply of grain must be provided.

The calf should be housed a considerable distance from its dam when weaned, in order to reduce the worry of both to the minimum.

THE LITTLE FORTUNE

"He then went quietly into Reinhardt's room, and removing all his clothing, assumed that of Musset. As I say, I do not know whether Musset was dead at this time or not. I think personally that he was not.

"At any rate they exchanged clothing, Vernon assuming that of Musset, and dressing the latter in his own. In the operation Vernon's scarf pin fell on the floor, where it was recovered some days later.

"They also opened the package and took out the franc-piece for which they had gone to all this trouble. When I tell you that its value is not less than a million francs you will understand the object that they had in view."

"A million francs!" exclaimed Mr Germaine. His words were echoed by the others in the room.

"Exactly. But to continue. They had at first, so Vernon states in his confession, planned to throw the body overboard, but later had discarded this as too dangerous. The sound of the body striking the water would, they feared, be heard by some one on deck.

"After a great deal of thought they had decided, before leaving Havre, on another plan, and one which but for a curious and on their part unfortunate mistake, would have been entirely successful.

"They had decided to replace the package in Musset's pocket, substituting for the franc-piece another of the same period, and which would be for all any one could tell, precisely like it. They then proposed to throw the body into the forward hold, where it would not be discovered until the cargo was removed in New York.

"They knew that the body after lying in the hold for nearly a week, would be practically unrecognisable. They calculated on Vernon's clothes, papers, etc., as well as the package containing the coin and letter in the dead man's pocket, proving sufficient evidence that the body was that of Vernon himself. This would end all pursuit, Vernon dead, the package found, there would be no further cause for investigation.

"They realised that Mlle. Mercier would probably discover that the letter from her father was a forgery but they expected by this time to be safely out of the way.

"In order to carry out this plan they had to shave off Musset's black beard. Vernon, meanwhile, had assumed a false black beard and had built out his nose to disguise his features. There was no necessity for him to resemble Musset, except in a general way. No one had obtained a good look at Reinhardt's invalid companion since he came on board.

"Having completed their preparations, they walked with Musset either dead or under the influence of a drug, to the forward hatch, and threw him into the hold. Doubtless they also calculated that the force of the fall upon the heavy machinery with which the vessel was loaded, would render the body still further unrecognisable. The results proved that in this they were entirely correct.

"When the body was found no one suspected it of being other than Vernon's. The latter had even placed a finger ring he habitually wore upon the dead man's finger.

"I have said that but for one mistake the perpetrators of the crime would never have been captured I should say but for two. One of these consisted in overlooking a gold locket which hung about Musset's neck. The other, and the most unfortunate one, from their standpoint, consisted in the fact that they got the two franc-pieces, absolutely identical in outward appearances, mixed. They put the one belonging to Mlle. Mercier, into the dead man's pocket and retained the worthless one themselves.

"They made this discovery the following day, but they were then powerless. The forward hatch had been closed, not to be opened again until the vessel reached New York.

"Instead, therefore, of being able to at once make off with their plunder, Vernon and Reinhardt were obliged to go to the hotel Rochambeau, knowing that within a short time Mr. Morris would deliver to Mlle. Mercier the coin they were after.

"That very afternoon Vernon and Reinhardt got into a bitter quarrel concerning the latter's responsibility for retaining the wrong coin. Reinhardt had made the mistake, Vernon taunted him with it. Reinhardt attacked him, and Vernon killed him with his knife. The coin, the cause of the quarrel, Vernon had, in the violence of his anger, hurled at the other man's head. It was found on the floor. Reinhardt, dying, wrote on the wall with his blood, 'Hartmann int.' The missing word was 'Vernon.'

"When Vernon, who was on the watch for Mr. Morris, saw from his window that the latter was accompanied by himself and M. Duvall, he at once suspected trouble, and fled from the hotel while we were interviewing Mlle. Mercier.

"He made at once for his own apartment, of which he, of course, had the key, and as he could not appear as himself, he posed as Charles Vernon, his brother. At this stage of the proceedings, he tells me, he trimmed down the long black beard he had been wearing, so as to change his disguise and render him more youthful in appearance. At his apartment he again changed his clothes, putting on one of his own suits which he found there.

"He could undoubtedly have escaped in perfect safety at this time, but he had made up his mind to get the franc-piece from Mlle. Mercier, and he wrote her a letter, decoying her to his apartment, on the pretext of buying the coin from her for a thousand dollars. He also called to his assistance a woman of his acquaintance, a clever crook, whom he had known both in Paris and New York.

"I went to see Mlle. Mercier, disguised as a teacher of music, substituted the worthless franc for the real one, and accompanied her to Vernon's apartment.

"I very foolishly went on the assumption that he was alone, and for that mistake both Mlle. Mercier and myself came near paying with our lives. I also made the mistake of taking the real franc along with me. I prevented them from securing it, only to let it, unknown to them, again fall into their hands.

"I had, however, led Vernon to believe that I had placed the coin in the safe at the Hotel Rochambeau. Thinking that he had safely disposed of me he attempted to recover the coin by breaking open the safe at the hotel. Again he was disappointed.

"He and his companion now began to realise that they were in a dangerous predicament. All his plans had gone wrong. He was wanted in New York for the murder of Reinhardt, and so far as he knew for that of Mlle. Mercier and myself as well. He therefore hit upon a bold plan. He decided to go aboard the Richelieu in the early morning, as though he were a passenger, and by locking himself in the storeroom, in which he was afterward found, pretend that he had been there ever since the robbery of the safe a week before.

"In order to carry out this plan he was obliged to purchase, early the next morning, the demijohn or water-bottle, and the tins of food which were subsequently found in his room. He states that he did this about eight o'clock that day at a small store near the water front, and at the same time secured a can opener.

"He had the articles wrapped up in paper, went to a vacant lot near by, opened the tins of food, threw away the contents, and replaced the tins in the paper. Then he walked boldly on board of the steamer, unnoticed in the bustle of her approaching departure, descended to the storeroom of which had a key, entered, locked the door, and waited until the vessel should sail. The false beard which he wore until he entered the room he subsequently destroyed by burning it.

"His whole story about being imprisoned in the storeroom, as well as about his twin brother, was a lie. I have ascertained that he has no brother. He certainly conducted the affair cleverly, however, since his account was believed by everyone. I myself should, no doubt, have believed it, had it not been for the scar upon his forearm. The matter of his shaving immediately after his release, and of the way in which the meat-tins appeared to have been opened, were not sufficient in themselves to have discredited him. He had arranged for the woman to sail on the same vessel, but after their pursuit by the police he did not feel at all sure that she would be able to do so.

"When he found that she had, and later discovered that she had regained possession of the missing franc, he concluded that, after all, his luck had turned.

"You will doubtless know how Captain Bonnot refused to permit his arrest at Havre, and insisted upon placing me in confinement instead, but luckily I was able to get word to my assistants in time to have him followed to Paris.

"The woman stopped in Havre for several hours. I had her followed as well, and learned, through the sweetheart of Musset, the facts concerning his departure for America with Reinhardt. Vernon had sent his woman companion to her, to tell her that Musset was dead, and thus prevent her from instituting any inquiries, which might have proved embarrassing.

"It will probably not interest you greatly to hear how I subsequently secured the franc from Vernon in Paris, and had him placed under arrest. After all its adventures, during which two persons at least have paid with their lives, this franc of Mlle. Mercier's is now in my waistcoat pocket."

He slipped his fingers beneath his coat and drew out the long-sought coin. "It belongs to Mlle. Mercier," he said, "but perhaps you might all like to take a look at it."

He handed the coin to Mr. Germaine, who examined it, shook his head, and passed it to Mr. Morris. At length it reached the hands of Mlle. Mercier.

The girl gazed helplessly at it.

"It may be as valuable as you say, monsieur," she cried looking, timidly at Lefevre, "but unless you will tell me in what way, I fear that it will not be of much use to me."

Lefevre drew from his pocket a piece of paper. "You will remember, mademoiselle," he said, "that when we searched Mr. Vernon's apartment that terrible night we discovered a half burned piece of paper, which proved to be the letter which your father had sent you along with the coin."

Mlle. Mercier nodded, "I remember it very well," she replied. "What remained of the letter was quite unintelligible."

"Practically. And it would have remained so had not Vernon, who has made a complete and abject confession supplied us with the missing words. I have here a complete copy of the letter—the words to the right are those which were missing." He passed the letter to the young woman. "If you will read it now," he said, "you will perhaps understand."

Mlle. Mercier read the letter, which was as follows.

"My Beloved Daughter:

"I am sending—you a one-franc piece It is my legacy—for your future

When you get it take—a pin and press it into the eye—of Napoleon. A lever will then be thrown on—it at one side of the coin. Pull—this and you will understand why I have—sent it. It is a great fortune. I discovered the secret of the coin while cleaning it on my deathbed. It is the—famous franc of Napoleon. Use your fortune well my child, and do—not forget the poor. I embrace y—ou and send you my love and a thousand kisses.

"Your loving Father,
"ALPHONSE MERC—IER."

"I am afraid," remarked the girl helplessly, as she passed the letter to the others to read, "that I am as much in the dark as before."

Lefevre rose and stepped toward Mr Germaine's desk. "Will you be so good as to give me a pin?" he said.

The managing director took one from a bowl on the desk and handed it to the prefect, who then asked Mlle. Mercier for the franc-piece.

He held the coin in the palm of his left hand, while the others crowded about eagerly. Inserting the pin in the eye of the face of Napoleon which was stamped upon the coin he pressed it sharply. At once a tiny lever like those sometimes found on watches for setting them, sprang out from one side.

Mother-Made, Quick Acting Cough Syrup
Should be Kept Ready in Every Home—Easily Prepared and Costs Little.

Mothers, you'll never know what you are missing until you make up this inexpensive, quick-acting cough syrup and try it. Children love its pleasant taste and nothing else will loosen a cough or clear cold and heal the inflamed or swollen throat membranes with such ease and promptness. It's equally as good for grown-ups as for children.

This splendid cough syrup is made by pouring 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) into a 16-oz bottle and filling the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of much better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for $2.50—a clear saving of $2.

The moment it touches the inflamed, cold-congested membranes that line the throat and air passages, the healing begins, the phlegm loosens, soreness leaves, cough spasms lessen and soon disappear altogether, thus ending a cough quicker than you ever thought possible. Hoarseness and ordinary coughs are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Excellent for bronchitis, whooping cough, spasmodic croup, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is famous the world over, for its quick healing effect on the membranes.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

SAYS WE BECOME CRANKS ON HOT WATER DRINKING

Hopes Every Man and Woman Adopts Teis Splendid Morning Habit

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness?

If we all would practice inside-bathing, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clean the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone, its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The GYPSY'S CHARM

A Halloween Story

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Molly Ditson looked out from the farmhouse on the hill, shading her eyes with her hand. She saw a wagon lumbering along the road loaded with camp equipage and human beings.

"I do believe they're gypsies," said Molly.

She watched them till they turned off the road and encamped on the edge of the old field woods.

A man's figure was walking in the road. Molly watched him, too, and saw him stop and look at the gypsies unloading their camp furniture. He spoke a few words to them and passed on.

"Joe Morton," remarked Molly to herself. "I wonder what he said to them."

Molly descended the hill and, entering the wood, saw a gypsy woman approaching her.

The slender, dark eyed nomad carried a shawl wrapped bundle that proved to contain a sickly infant. The young mother's sad face brightened when she saw Molly's friendly smile.

"Lady," she pleaded, "my little baby so sick. I can get no good milk. He will die!"

"No, no!" protested Molly. "No baby shall starve for milk in Oldfield woods! Sit down here on the leaves, and I will go home and get some milk for you."

"You are very kind, beautiful lady," murmured the weary mother as she sank to the ground and laid the whimpering infant on the soft leaves.

"Peoples say: 'Not give to gypsies, they steal enough.' But, lady, my peoples no steal!"

Molly smiled as the woman's head nodded once or twice and then settled into repose beside that of the little child.

"I mustn't tell Hannah that the milk is for a gypsy," she thought as she turned into a steep path that led directly up to her father's orchard. "Hannah does detest the whole tribe, but that baby is starving for milk, and he shall have it. The very idea of refusing milk when Hannah feeds it to the pigs every night!"

In spite of her defiance of Hannah Mix, the elderly housekeeper, Molly was wary enough to approach the milk house by the back way. She opened the door and stepped within its cool shelter. A little stream trickled under the stone floor, and Hannah had her jars of milk and crocks of butter set in the water.

Molly lifted down a shining pail, filled it half full of rich morning's milk and escaped with her booty to the wood. As she approached the gypsy she noted that the woman was sitting up, wide awake, staring after the disappearing form of a broad shouldered man.

"Who was that?" asked Molly sharply.

"A prince," said the woman, displaying two silver half dollars in her brown palm.

"A prince!" mocked Molly. "That was only Joe Morton."

Fifteen minutes later Molly was bidding the gypsy woman and the smiling baby farewell. The woman carried the pail of milk, and her dark eyes were very grateful.

"...sit, lady!" she called suddenly. And, setting the pail on the ground, she fumbled in her gay calico pocket and finally brought out a little box. From the box she extracted a gold ring, whose sole ornament was an extended hand.

"Wear this ring, lady," said the gypsy solemnly. "Some day will come a handsome stranger who wears another ring like it, and the hands on the two rings will fit together in a clasp. It is a charm that never fails to work. The handsome stranger will be your husband."

Molly slipped the ring on her engagement finger, kissed the baby and then lifted mirthful eyes to the earnest face of the woman.

"I thank you for the beautiful ring," said Molly sweetly. "But I am never going to marry. What then?"

"You cannot help it, wearing the charm," the woman nodded wisely.

Molly tucked a silver coin in the brown fist of the baby, and, promising the woman that she would leave another pail of milk at the top of the path on the following morning, they parted.

At supper time the telephone rang, and a merry voice informed Molly Ditson that as this was All Hallowe'en it was proposed that the young people of the neighborhood should descend on the Ditson house for the evening.

"Good!" cried Molly as she hung up the receiver. "Hannah Mix, have you got anything in the house to feed fifty hungry folks?"

"Lord, help!" screeched Hannah, secure in the knowledge that she had a well filled larder. "If they can put up with crullers and cider and nuts and apples I don't care how many there be!"

By 8 o'clock the old house was ringing with laughter and music. Mr. Ditson was playing the violin, while a dozen couples danced in the long dining room. Molly was everywhere at once improvising games for the evening.

Mrs. Oliver Bunce nudged her nearest neighbor as Molly flew past. "It's a wonder Molly wouldn't take up with Joe Morton," she commented.

"Molly ain't never going to get married, so she says," cackled Miss Susan Libby.

"Humph! If I was a girl I wouldn't be putting on any airs about being a man hater, not when there was such a fine young man as Joe. Good evening, Molly. We were just wondering when you were going to settle down and get married," said Mrs. Bunce as Molly paused before them.

Molly wrinkled her pretty nose.

"You know I am going to become a dear, delightful little spinster like Susan Libby," she protested, dropping a light kiss on the offended Susan's ear.

"Dear, delightful little sauce box!" snapped Susan as Molly darted away.

Joe Morton came along, humming a tune under his breath. He smiled in his large, friendly way upon the two good gossips.

Mrs. Bunce put out a freckled hand.

"Joe," she said, with heavy humor, "Susan and I are wondering when you're going to get married and settle down in that new house you built last spring."

"So am I," was Joe's noncommittal reply, and his dazzling smile took the sting from his answer. He moved away, still smiling and his eyes dreamily fixed on Molly Ditson's white clad form in the distance.

"That's right; follow the butterfly!" muttered Mrs. Bunce darkly.

While the older people discussed neighborhood affairs youth was making merry in the rambling old place. In the kitchen some were bobbing for apples, while others tested fate with melted lead or roasting chestnuts.

Joe Morton followed the lead of his friends and entered into all the games with an amusing gravity. When his dark head emerged dripping with water from a tub, there was a great red apple held in his strong white teeth.

"Joe always gets what he goes after," said Oliver Bunce approvingly.

Joe Morton heard the words, frowned for an instant, then, shaking the drops from his head, smiled grimly.

"If that is the case," he muttered, "I might as well go and get what I want now. This Halloween tomfoolery isn't necessary."

He picked up a towel from the snowy pile Hannah Mix had provided, dried his hair and face and went out of the kitchen into the back porch.

He had noticed that Molly went out that way.

In the midst of the revelry Molly suddenly remembered the milk she had promised the gypsy.

"I shall be so sleepy in the morning I can never get up in time," she thought. "Suppose I slip out to the milk house now and take it to the path! I can be back in time for the mirror tricks. It's only a quarter to 12 now."

So Molly disappeared from the kitchen and tripped down the winding path that led through the kitchen garden to the milk house. The moon was shining brightly, and the pumpkins were glistening with frost. The little stream murmured its way among the stones.

The moon shone directly through the uncurtained window of the little stone dairy room, and the children's pails and pans gave back subdued reflections.

Molly reached for a pail and dislodged a great new milk pan. It fell into her outstretched hands, and its shining surface reflected her charming face.

At that very moment a church clock in the village struck the hour of midnight, the magic hour of the entire year for all believers in charms. And who is young that does not believe?

And in that witching instant a shadow stole across the milk pan mirror, and Molly noted with freezing blood that another face was reflected beside her own. A warm breath mingled with hers; there was the not unpleasant fragrance of tobacco; a pair of strong arms encircled her shoulders and two hands clasped hers so that the pan fell clattering to the ground.

Molly stared down at the hands. They were strong and brown and well shaped, and on the little finger of one hand gleamed a small gold ring on which was a tiny left hand—extended as if to clasp another.

And the other ring and tiny hand was on Molly's engagement finger!

What about the gypsy's prophecy and the gypsy's charm?

"Oh-h-h!" breathed Molly suddenly.

"Molly, darling!" murmured Joe Morton's voice.

"Joe!" she cried faintly, and it is significant that she did not withdraw from his embrace. "Where did you get—that?"

She touched the little ring on his hand.

Then he saw the one on her finger and marveled.

"The gypsy woman gave it to me," he admitted. "I gave her a little silver for the kid, it looked so sick, and she—er—said my future wife would wear the mate to it—and is—she Molly?"

"I am sure she is, Joe!"

And Molly, the man hater, nodded shyly.

So Joe, still reaching long arms through the window of the milk house, drew the ring from his finger and slipped it on Molly's left hand. It settled down close to the other ring, and the two hands fitted together and clasped firmly.

And so the gypsy's charm became Molly's betrothal ring. When Molly wanted to return to the house and complete the evening's games Joe held her back for one last kiss.

"I'm going to carry the milk down to the orchard path," he said. "I'm not going to try any more stunts tonight, sweetheart. Fate cannot offer us anything better than we now have, and I couldn't be any happier!"

Molly waved her hand as he strode up the path with the pail of milk, and the moonlight gleamed on the little ring which the gypsy had called a love charm.

FULTZ HITS RIGHT BACK

Players' Fraternity Proposes to Fully Protect Its Members.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7. — That the Baseball Players' Fraternity is determined to carry its demand for a revision of the "injury clause" in certain of the players' contracts to a finish is indicated in a statement made public by President David L. Fultz of the Fraternity. The statement in part is as follows:

"Mr. Johnson is reported to have said in a recent interview that the Fraternity petition accused certain American League clubs of suspending injured players without pay. Either Mr. Johnson has been misquoted or he is evading the issue. We made no such accusation. In our brief we stated that certain contracts gave the owners the right to so misuse players if they see fit, and asked that such clause be removed.

"Mr. Johnson made a somewhat heated denial of the supposed accusation, and said he had demanded of us the names of players so suspended. He has made no such demand. Mr. Herrmann, however, did wire for copies of contracts containing the objectionable clause, which is an entirely different request. We replied that contracts should not be forwarded without the consent of the players, but that Mr. Johnson would find the provision in section four of some of the Washington and New York contracts. As copies of all contracts are already lodged in his office, our compliance seemed unnecessary."

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if you feel Backachy or have Bladder trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness and ageneral decay of gue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless, and makes a delightful effervescent lithiawater drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

Swedish scientists are producing a new fertilizer by treating feldspart or another mineral base of potassium with a suitable amount of carbon and iron in an electric furnace.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bastard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

BACK WITH ONE LEG.

Major Hamilton Galt Will Rejoin His Regiment.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Major Hamilton Galt, who, it is said, will shortly return to France to rejoin Princess Patricia's Regiment, which he raised and equipped at his own expense, has been wounded on four occasions. His latest experience involved no fewer than forty shrapnel wounds and the loss of a leg. Notwithstanding his injuries, he is full of energy and eager to have another go at the Germans.

He has acquired a whole battery of false limbs, with which he is experimenting so as to choose the one best adapted for active service. The regiment has a glorious record, but its losses in officers and men have been severe. Four of the officers by whom it has been commanded from time to time have been killed in action.

The chairman drew the attention of the Board to the fact that the janitor had experienced some trouble with the boiler in the Public School. The Board discussed the matter at some length after which the janitor, Mr. Rorabeck, was called and interviewed to ascertain the cause of the trouble.

The Board adjourned to meet on Friday night at 7:30.

Any Woman's Struggle For Good Health Quickly Rewarded

A Simple Home Treatment Now Advocated that Gives Fine Results.

When a woman's face grows haggard and pale, when she is tired all day and ready to cry when night comes, she ought to know something is wrong.

Putting off only makes matters worse. The best advice we can give any sickly woman is to test out the following treatment.

At the close of every meal, with a sip or two of water, take two chocolate-coated Ferrosone Tablets. This seems to be the best thing going for folks that are tired out, run-down, and in need of a strengthening, building-up medicine.

Ferrosone's action aids the three principal functions of the body—digestion, assimilation, elimination.

By strengthening digestion it forms an abundance of rich, red blood—this gives good colour.

By perfecting assimilation, Ferrosone supplies nutrition—this gives strength, vim, stability.

THE BRAVE ADVENTURER.

Who knows not fear is master of his fate;
All that life has to offer may be his;
So that he is
But swift to act—not prone to hesitate,
Swayed by the doubts that shackle weaker men—
All his desires may see fulfilment then.

True, for each boon some payment must be made.
That is—alas!—what makes us cowards all!
We hear the call,
And fain would follow, but we are afraid;
We want the prise, but all our puny fears
Shrink from the price, which may be pain or tears!

Who early learns to play the splendid game
Of life unflinchingly, may come to know
And taste of woe;
He may, then, reap a larger share of blame,
But, in proportion, shall his joys be great,
Beyond the dreams of those who stand and wait!

All things belong to him who dares contrive
To take, and count the having worth the cost.
And never lost
Is happiness, while memories survive!
Through all life's varied fortunes —good or bad.
Nothing can rob him of the joy he's had!

FINDS NEW METHOD OF HEALING BURNS

French Physician Proves That "Ambrine" Revivifies Tissues and Prevents Scars.

LONDON, Nov. 16.— Testimony is accumulating as to the notable results obtained in case of wounds by burning from the treatment invented by Dr. Barthe de Sandfort, says the Chronicle's Paris correspondent. For some years before the war he had struggled to establish his method against professional skepticism; but the use of flame projectors and incendiary shells as well as the old munitions gave a new urgency to cases of burning, and Dr. de Sandfort has been able to demonstrate his process fully at the St. Nicholas Hospital, Issy-les-Moulineaux, near Paris.

A retired naval doctor, it was in taking a "cure" at the mud baths at Dax that the idea came to Mr. Barthe de Sandfort of applying an analogous remedy in a larger class of maladies. He made a mixture of paraffin and rosins, which, melted, he kept at a certain temperature around the injured place. He called the product ambrine. It was tried with great success upon the victims of some village fires in Yunnan, the pain being immediately relieved and the healing of the burns greatly aided. It is claimed that, unlike other antiseptic treatments which kill the living elements of the tissue, ambrine revives the apparently lost activity of the injured cellules, and that a natural skin at length appears, in which it is hard to find any marks of what would have been a disfiguring wound.

Was Completely Laid Up With Severe Case of Piles

Sworn Statement From a Man Who Has Unbounded Confidence in Dr. Chase's Ointment

There is no longer any debate as to the best treatment for itching, bleeding or protruding piles But since about one person in every four suffers more or less from this annoying ailment it is necessary to keep on telling the people about Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Wm. Shaw, Island Brook, Que., writes: "I am writing this to let you know the benefit that I have derived from your Ointment. I have suffered more or less for years with protruding piles and last winter I got so bad I was completely laid up with them. I went to our local storekeeper and asked him if he had anything that was good for piles and he recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment, I purchased a box and took it home and used it according to the directions and for over one year I have not been troubled with piles. I had tried other remedies before but they only gave me temporary relief and that one box of your Ointment did more for me than all the others, as I have not been troubled since last winter. I consider it to be the best remedy for piles I have ever used and shall always carry a box with me, although I don't think I will need it for piles. We have used it for other purposes in the family, such as burns, and cuts and scratches, etc., and my wife says it is one of the best remedies for such purposes we have ever had in the house. Although you only charge sixty cents a box for it it is well worth $5.00 a box for anyone who is afflicted with piles. Now you can use this letter if you wish or refer anyone to me who wants to know about it for piles. I might say that in my business I am known all over the English portion of Quebec, and am having this statement sworn to before a Justice of the Peace."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

BOY'S SUIT.

By Anabel Worthington.

7971

This is an excellent design in a suit for kindergarten or for play. It is very easily made—a point that is ever the first inducement to mothers who feel that all the clothes for the children should be made under rigid sanitary conditions and who will not "take a chance" with ready makes.

The blouse is finished at the neck with a very broad collar that is trimmed with one inch bands of contrasting goods, cut bias; the sleeve is finished to match and the novel closing outline is similarly favored. A separate belt confines the fulness at a lowered waistline and completes a very attractive blouse.

The trousers, attached to an underwaist, may be in either straight or bloomer style, and in the matter of sleeves there is also choice—the pattern providing for the long sleeve with wrist band cuff if you prefer it.

If wash fabrics are more to your liking for this type of suit, choose linen, galatea, Indian head or like material. There are many novelty weaves in splendid colorings to interest and delight the boy and his mother, if a wool mixture is desired.

The suit pattern No. 7971 is cut in sizes 2 to 4 and 6 years. To make in the medium size will require 2¼ yards 36 inch material with ⅝ yard contrasting goods to trim and ⅝ yard 36 inch lining for the underwaist.

To obtain the pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

If Stomach Hurts Drink Hot Water

A Physician's Advice.

"If dyspeptics, sufferers from gas, wind or flatulence, stomach acidity or sourness, gastric catarrh, heartburn, etc., would take a teaspoonful of pure bisurated magnesia in half a glass of hot water immediately after eating, they would soon forget they were ever afflicted with stomach trouble, and doctors would have to look elsewhere for patients." In explanation of these words a well known New York physician stated that most forms of stomach trouble are due to stomach acidity and fermentation of the food contents of the stomach combined with an insufficient blood supply to the stomach. Hot water increases the blood supply and bisurated magnesia instantly neutralizes the excessive stomach acid and stops food fermentation, the combination of the two, therefore, being marvelously successful and decidedly preferable to the use of artificial digestents, stimulants or medicines for indigestion.

Market Marking Time This Week

The cheese season closed locally with a mighty big price of 22 cents a pound, and there will likely be a few odds and ends of November make to be sold. Or the milk may go into butter which around 35c should be attractive enough.

Late rains have improved the pasturage and there should be an improvement in the milk flow for the rest of the month.

Hogs are selling locally at $12.25 this week.

On the whole, prices have been marking time during the past week after a steady progression to nearly every line.

BUTTER AT LOCAL POINTS

Butter was selling retail at outside points last Saturday all the way from 36c to 47c, Brantford furnishing the high spot. The general run was about 40c to 46c.

EGGS AT LOCAL POINTS.

Eggs at local points are still going as high as 50c retail, this figure having been reached both at Hamilton and Kingston. The general range is from 40c to 45c, although as low as 36c is quoted in some cases.

LOCAL CHEESE BOARDS.

While the last week of October generally sees the close of the local cheese boards this year the make is holding up wonderfully well, and the prices are working stronger and stronger as the season advances, with a top of 22 9-16c for this week at Vankleek Hill.

The abnormal cheese make may be partially responsible for the shortage of milk and butter noted at important centres, and doubtless is small dairies in Toronto have had great difficulty in getting enough milk to meet the demands of their regular customers who have been compelled to resort in emergency to the canned, condensed varieties.

The well maintained cheese make in the face of a decreasing milk flow can only be attributed to the high prices being realized and it is not to be wondered that cheese factories hang on as long as possible. There is money in it for them.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

Montreal, November 8.—The receipts of butter yesterday were 1,899 packages, as compared with 1,465 for the same day last week, and 1,240 for the corresponding date a year ago. SOLDIERS GOT RELIEF FROM SORENESS

Boys on the Border Relieved Their Pains and Aches With Sloan's Liniment

Once upon a time Norman Jones, serving in the National Guard at El Paso, returned to camp after a strenuous 15 mile hike foot-sore and leg-weary. He had not been long in active service and his shoulders, back and limbs felt the after-effects of marching.

Remembering Sloan's Liniment, Jones applied it to the sore spots and went to bed. He writes: "I arose the next morning, feeling fine, in fact I had entirely forgotten about the hike and went out for a four-hour drill in the sun as spry as ever."

Private Jones passed the experience along, and many a boy on the border relieved the agony of sprains, strains, bruises, insect bites, cramped muscles, rheumatic twinges, etc., by the use of Sloan's Liniment.

Easily applied without rubbing. At all druggists, 25c, 50c, and $1.00.

Russo-Roumanian Forces Have Scored Several New Successes

Border Town of Harsova is Re-occupied and Germans Have Been Pushed Back in Transylvania East of Buzen Valley--German Attacks on Newly Won French Positions Were Beaten Off in Hand-to-Hand Fighting, the French War Office Announces.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PETROGRAD, November 9.—Fighting continues in Belbor region, south of Dornavatra. The official statement said the Germans have been pushed back in Transylvania east of Buzen Valley, where one hundred prisoners and some machine guns were taken. "In Jiul Valley," says the announcement, "the enemy attacks were repelled, and after driving back the enemy's advanced detachments, we progressed southwards to the Village of Ginovo, which had been fired at several points."

THE GERMAN INFANTRY RUSH IS BROKEN UP

PARIS (French Official), November 9.—A German infantry rush on the French forces at Saillisel on the Somme front last night was broken up after sharp hand-to-hand fighting, according to the statement of the French War Office to-day. Artillery action was continued and heavy through the night. The Germans betrayed nervousness in their curtain firing.

BUCHAREST, November 9.—Roumanian forces have reoccupied the border town of Harsova, the War Office announced to-day.

AUSTRALIAN COAL STRIKE VERY SREIOUS

MELBOURNE, Australia, November 9.—The coal strike to-day assumed alarming proportions. Paralysis of all industries here are threatened. Many big factories are closing down, and the railway workers are supporting the striking miners. It has been suggested that the Commonwealth take over the mines.

The Enemy Is Retiring Along The Entire Front

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Nov. 9.—Bulgarians are retiring along the whole Dobrudja front. Wireless despatches from Bucharest this afternoon said that the forces are burning villages through which they are falling back. Before retiring from Hirsova the Bulgare burned the town.

MAJOR DAVIDSON'S SPLENDID WORK

Nurse in Ontario Military Hospital Writes of His Sermons

A nurse of the Ontario Military Hospital Orpington, Kent, England, now in Canada for a short time on transport duty sends in a letter the following about Canon Davidson, which will be of interest to his many Peterborough friends: "Major Davidson is doing splendid work in our hospital. He is in the wards late and early never tired doing good. He is a great favourite with our sick boys—always something very interesting to tell them. He is a boy with the boys. I wanted to tell you what a comfort he is to us all."

The Canon also writes his Warden, Mr. W. F. Johnston, that he would be very pleased to be of any service he can to Peterborough people in the way of making inquiries about relatives and friends in the country's service about whom they may desire him to try and obtain information and doing what he can for them in any time he may have to spare from his own duties.

LAKEFIELD ROAD NEEDS GRAVEL SAY MOTORISTS

The Lakefield road from the city's limit northward past the pumping station has been recently graded, and several men who claim to be connoisseurs of bad roads, claim that this work is almost in a class by itself. Evidently the township recognized that they should repair the road. Graders turned the loose earth that settled in the ditch on either side back on to the crown, but the road was completed without a gravel treatment, which in all justice to the pathmaster, it is reported he had requested. But one of the gentlemen suggested that there might be no gravel pits in Smith. But seriously, he felt that to make this road worth while there should be gravel on it. Just now it is deep in mud and will continue to be a mire until the frost comes, with a repetition of that condition—next spring and deep dust later in the summer.

IMPRESSIONS OF THE CONGRESS

Adjutant McElhiney, returned from the 37th Annual Congress of the Salvation Army in Canada last evening Mr. McElhiney remained for a council with Mr. Commissioner Richards on the social work of the Salvation Army and will return to-night.

The Congress was marked with many special features, and was attended by a number of local people as well as by the officers from Peterborough.

Sunday afternoon Premier Hearst paid some very glowing compliments to the Salvation Army both for Canada and their work during the war.

Six hundred corps have been opened in Salvation Army circles, notwithstanding the awful ravage of the war.

Twelve hundred new officers have been added to the roll of workers in the Salvation Army. China has been invaded and a splendid work is in progress. Russia also has been invaded and many developments are taking place there in connection with the war. Spain and Greece have both been crying out for the Salvation Army, but on account of the heavy enlistment of officers and perspective officers the work cannot be developed as fast as the leaders would like.

Three hundred and fifty Salvation Army officers are at work in military circles, one hundred homes and hospitals are open day and night to assist all those who need it, and so the Salvation Army is endeavoring to assist in every way; all kind and conditions of men.

The Chief of the staff, Commissioner Howard who conducted the Congress has gone on to Winnipeg to conduct the Western Congress and many good wishes of the officers and friends of the Salvation Army to Canada east.

FACTORIES TO BE BUSY

Imperial Munitions Board Announces Canadian Concerns Making Munitions Will Be Kept at Work on Present Basis Until June 30

MATERIALS AT HAND

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Nov. 9.—According to a statement made by the Imperial Munitions Board, the Canadian manufacturing concerns who are work on munitions, will be kept busy on the basis of the present orders in hand until June thirtieth next. Some orders expire on December 31 and others on March 31. The firms which make the best record in the matter of deliveries are likely to receive the biggest share of renewed orders. All necessary raw materials to maintain the deliveries are contracted for well ahead, and the Board is in a good position in regard to the necessary supply of steel. The board states that Canadian manufacturers are doing their best to carry out the manufacture of shells with the greatest possible expedition.

ONE PETERBORO' SOLDIER MISSING ANOTHER WOUNDED

Two East City Homes Receive Bad News—Pte. James Jackson, Mark Street is Missing and Pte. Thos Reid Maria Street Wounded

LATTER WENT WITH 93rd

Two East City homes are in receipt of bad news as a result of the recent fighting in France.

Mrs. Mary Jackson, Mark street, has received official word from Ottawa that Pte. James Jackson, Canadian Infantry is officially reported admitting since October 8th. No further details are yet available. Pte. Jackson enlisted outside of the city.

Mrs. Mary E. Reid, 149 Maria street has been notified that her husband, Pte. Thos. P. Reid, Canadian Infantry is officisll yreported admitted to No. 3 General Hospital, Boulogne on October 31st, wounded in the right arm and the left thigh. Pte. Reid enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion and after going overseas with Col. Johnston's unit was drafted to another Canadian Battalion at the front. He is the twenty-fifth member of the 93rd Battalion reported hit.

"SEPTEMBER MORN" SPARKLING SHOW

One of the Brightest, Cleverest, Wittiest and Prettiest Entertainments Ever Seen on Any Stage

"September Morn," the wonderful girl and song show coming to the Grand Opera House, Monday night, Nov. 13, is one of the brightest, cleverest, wittiest, prettiest entertainments ever seen on any stage. It sparkles. It has humour, melody, colour, spirit, and a score that holds the auditor with its swinging, lilting airs. The book by Arthur Gillespie, is the kind of fooling that encourages worried people to forget their troubles. It is not like stale soda water. The fizz is there. At the same time there is nothing to offend the most fastidious. It all gets over the footlights because it is very much alive. You never have time to sit back and rest, so contagious is the humour, and so persistent is the merry revelling. One of the striking features of "September Morn" is the remarkable chorus, these clever gals work in perfect harmony, a revelation to the theatregoer. The cast is composed of members who have been seen in some of our best musical successes and the production readily accounts for the marvelous success the piece has achieved. Seats will be on sale to-morrow (Friday) morning at the Box Office.

BIG JUMP IN COTTON.

Adverse Crop Reports From Egypt Are Responsible.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 9.—A sensational advance in Egyptian cotton has occurred because of the adverse crop reports. There has been an almost daily appreciation in prices for months, new records being constantly made, but the market went wild and closed at an increase averaging one hundred and forty points. The advance in the last eight days amounts to fully two pence three farthings per pound.

COMMITTEE WILL COLLECT RAGS

The playgrounds committee will collect rubbers and rags on Thursday and Friday of this week. The school children are asked to take contributions of rags and rubbers to the schools as follows: To-day, at the King Edward, South Central and Queen Mary schools, and on Friday, at the King George, Central and Queen Alexandra schools. Parcels that are too large to be taken to the schools will be called for if word is sent to Mrs. J. Mowat, whose telephone number is 1583. Householders who have no means of getting their rags and rubbers to the schools are asked to notify Mrs. Mowat and they will be called for.

DESERTERS WILL BE SENT OVERSEAS

Deserters from this time on to the end of the war will not be arrested and taken before a civil magistrate and punished, but will be arrested and sent overseas to rejoin their units, either in England or at the front.

There are ten deserters now ready for embarkation, and in a few days five more will be ready, and the fifteen will be sent over in short order.

It is felt that this is better than putting the government to the cost of maintaining these men in prison, and it will serve a better end to make these men go to the front and fight, which is the purpose for which they have been trained at government expense.

EAST CITY MEN HAD ENJOYABLE SOCIAL

The social evening held by the men of the Church of the Immaculate Conception in their parish hall on Tuesday night attracted a fairly large crowd for whom a pleasant evening was provided. Progressive euchre followed by a programme including banjo selection by Mr. Frank Clarke, step-dancing by Mr. David Quinlan, and songs by Leonard Brothers, were the features. Mr. Murphy, traveller for the Phillip Morris Tobacco Co., presented five hundred of the Phillip Morris new Navy Cut Virginia cigarettes, which were greatly appreciated

THE MOEHER' CLUB RED CROSS SOCIETY AND THE I.O.D.E.

The Mothers Club will be pleased to receive through the Examiner any practical recipes for the use of rice as a diet and substitute for other foods.

IN NEW QUARTERS.

The Otonabee Chapter I.O.D.E., have moved to their new rooms over Mr. J. J. Lynch's drug store, and will open them on Monday to make supplies for the Red Cross and boys in the trenches.

RED CROSS.

The Red Cross Society would call attention to the excellent and useful manner which can be made from sider-down cloth, finished, for the edges with the blanket stitch. The scissors are used for cutting material in the convalescent homes and are worn under the tunics.

Both Candidates Are Still In Running For The Presidency

President Wilson is Within Ten Electoral Votes of Re-election—Charles Hughes Must Gain Twenty-three If He Is to Obtain a Majority.

THE OFFICIAL STANDING

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—President Wilson is within ten electoral votes of re-election. Charles E. Hughes must gain 23 if he is to obtain a majority. This was the standing feature of the progress of the vote count to-day at noon. With 256 votes in the Electoral College indicated for the Democratic candidate in the United Press returns, California alone, or Minnesota, alone, would be sufficient to make Wilson the twenty-ninth President of the United States.

As if further to drag out the agony of apprehension among politicians, California exhibited a strong Wilson tendency, and Minnesota a strong Hughes drink.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9 -8 p.m. Bulletin: Definite Presidential standing—Wilson, 256; Hughes, 243; doubtful, 32. Wilsons lead in California and Hughes' lead in Minnesota are both decreasing.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—Philadelphia North American, one of the strongest Republican papers in the State, posted a bulletin this afternoon conceding the election of President Wilson.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 9.—Based on the announcement that President Wilson had been defeated in his race for re-election, the German papers attribute the result to the German-American vote.

Advance For Wilson.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9 - President Wilson advanced five votes in the race for the majority in electoral college to-day when a Wilson returned from North Dakota established that he had carried that State. The President now has 256 electoral votes, and needs just ten more to insure his election. Hughes has 243, requiring 23.

Says Tammany Is Dead.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Tammany is dead again according to the New York World. It says: "That is the true significance of the election returns from New York city."

New Hampshire For Hughes.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—New Hampshire has gone to Hughes with four votes. Democrats will protest the election in the courts however.

"Thirteen" Hoodoo Had No Effect On Local Boy

"If I come through this day I will consider myself lucky," writes Gunner Robert Thompson from "Somewhere in France," to a friend in Peterborough. He wrote, on Friday the thirteenth day of October. There were thirteen men in his gun crew, and he was number thirteen. On the morning of the thirteenth the crew had been up to the line and had fired thirteen rounds. He was going up to the gun at eight o'clock the evening of the thirteenth, and before going wrote some letters. However, in spite of the "hoodoo" number he came through his turn on that day O.K., as is intimated in a letter written by Gunner Sydney Armstrong the day following. Gunners Armstrong and Thompson are on the same gun, having enlisted together last Spring, and been transferred together to the 165th Canadian Siege Battery, in France since September 25th.

Peterboro' Officer is Now at the Head of New Battalion—Recruiting Campaign Will Be Arranged in the City and District—Capt. O'Flynn a Visitor at the Armouries—To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Lt.-Col. Chas. H. Ackerman to-day took over the command of the 247th Battalion. His appointment was unofficially announced last week and is now officially announced in Divisional Orders from Kingston Nov. 7th, as follows:

It is published for the information of all concerned that the resignation of Lieut.-Col. W. D. Johnston, and the appointment of Major C. H. Ackerman to the 257th Battalion, Peterborough, with the temporary rank of Lt.-Col., in the Canadian Militia, is affecter from Nov. 6, 1916.

Colonel Ackerman is now in charge at the Armouries. In discussing plans for recruiting he stated that one proposition would be the dividing of the city into five districts with an officer in charge of each. These officers will arrange to secure the services of a number of men not fit for military service, preferably the fathers of sons at the front, to asist them in securing information as to the available men. In this way a complete census of the men who should enlist will be secured.

Arrangements are being made to have the Armouries opened each day from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., with an officer constantly on duty to give any necessary information.

Pte Geo. Barrell of Peterborough, who went overseas with the 59th Battalion and was transferred to the 4th, and who was reported wounded a short time ago, is now in hospital in the Military Hospital, Edmonton, London W. His wife, at 718 Harvey street, has received a letter from him in which he says, in part: "I am pleased to say that I am going on well I am still in bed, but feeling fine. They certainly treat you well here. They almost kill you with kindness. We do not want for anything. You must not worry about me. Instead, you must rejoice to think that I am out of all danger and in a safe place. I think God has answered all your prayers; do you not think so? It will not be many months now before I see you all. We are having some lovely weather here, now. As I am writing this letter the sun is shining through the windows. It is just after 9 o'clock in the morning. We have breakfast at 6, and then about 10 we have dinner, at 12, tea, at 4, and supper at 7.30; so you see we do dont go short of meals. I guess I shall not get that parcel from St. John's, now. Still it will gladden some of the hearts of the boys out there. They deserve all they can get. Nothing is too good for them. They are putting up a great fight and winning. Canada should be proud of her men, and I think she is."

In an earlier letter Pte. Barrell writes: "Just a few lines to let you know that I have arrived safely in England. We got here last night. I had the piece of shell taken from my leg last Monday at Boulogne. The leg is going on all right. I have got the piece of shell they took out. We are in a nice place. I am feeling fine, myself. I have a chum lying in the next bed to me. He got hit by the same shell. He got it in the left leg and I, in the right."

Mrs. R. Graham, 673 Stewart street has received the following letter from her son Driver G. D. Graham, 33rd Battery in France:

France, Oct. 20.

Dear Mother.—Just a line from Gerald to let you know I am still alive and well, hoping you are the same. I received a letter from you the first in a long time. Mother I hope you will forgive me for not writing as I was so busy I had not time. I would like to tell you what I was doing, but you can guess. Well mother it is very wet and muddy over here. How is old Peterborough. I would like to be there. Well mother the water here is very bad, it has to be purified before we can drink it, and for mud, it is about one foot thick. I nearly got killed last night, by a horse he backed around and got sideways, with the pieqrit line and my chin was over his withers and my tongue was sticking out, when I came to, oh I was nearly gone. I have changed my address. Say please send me some undercharts and socks, we are scarce of them. I received Dollie's box and one from you, thanks. The boys are all happy. I did not see uncle Harry this last two weeks. Well dear mother this will be all. Give Maggie my love. I remain, your loving son.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Deck have received a letter from their son, Pte. Bert Deck, in which he asks them to thank the "Ladies' Auxiliary of Ashburnham" for the socks which he received from them. Pte. Deck went overseas with the 93rd Battalion but since then has been transferred to the 39th Battalion and is now in France.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 8.—Word has been received in the city from military headquarters that the new county battalion for Hastings and Prince Edward has been authorized. The number of this new military organization will be the 254th and will be commanded by Major A. P. Allen of this city, who, with a staff of officers, will immediately commence recruiting.

TORONTO, Nov. 8.—Mr. Wm. Ince has received a cable from his brother, Mr. James Ince, 60 Dunregan road, who is in London, advising him that Mr. James Ince's only son, Capt. Hugh McCarthy Ince, 23 years of age was killed in action on the 4th inst. Captain Ince was in England when the war broke out, and immediately applied for a commission in the Royal Field Artillery of the Imperial Service. He went over to France in November, 1914, and has been on the fighting line, with the exception of a short interval, ever since. He advanced very quickly in the service, and at the time of his death had received his captaincy and was commanding a regular battery. He was educated at Trinity College School, Port Hope, and the Royal Military College, Kingston.

From the battle front on the Somme comes the story of how Major Gordon Southam, O. C. of the 39th Sportsmen's Battery, and his sergeant-major, Norman Harvie, son of Dr. Alex. Harvie, of Orillia, met their death. Major Southam and Sergt.-Major Harvie were killed together. Their death was instantaneous, but they met their fate. Their battery were moving safety of their gun crews and men of the battery. Driver P. G. Kirkpatrick, of the battery, in a letter tells how these two well-known sportsmen met their fate. Their battery was moving their guns forward to take part in the big drive on October 18th around Courcelette, and were returning to their old gun pits to make sure that all their men had been able to vacate their position (that of their old dug-out), when some German batteries which had been sweeping the sector hereabouts the old rendezvous, and shells

MAY REPEAL GROCERS EARLY CLOSING BY-LAW

A movement is on foot to repeal the grocers early closing by-law. This can be accomplished through the medium of a petition representing not less than one-third of the grocers of the city. It required three-fourths of the grocers to pass the by-law. Late this afternoon the petition contained several names of grocers who are in favour of having the by-law repealed.

SHOCK AND BLEEDING SAP CONSTITUTION

Albert Leitch of Harwich Dies as Result of Leg Being Mangled.

CHATHAM Nov. 9.—Loss of blood and severe shock proved fatal to Albert Leitch concession 5, Harwich Township, who had his left leg terribly crushed and mangled in a bean threshing machine here. He died in the Public General Hospital last night.

Leitch was assisting in the threshing on the farm of Mr. Nash, corner of concession 5, Harwich and Howard town line. In attempting to clean the blower of the threshing machine, which had become plugged, he caught his foot in the machinery before the engine could be stopped his leg was drawn in and mangled to the thigh.

The unfortunate man was 26 years of age, and married. The funeral took place to-day (Thursday) at 2 o'clock.

A QUESTION OF PRECEDENCE.

From letters printed in this issue it is apparent that there is a feeling of dissatisfaction with the position assigned yesterday in the funeral cortege to the soldiers returned from the front. We cannot too highly recognize the services of the soldiers who have so splendidly done their share in the fighting of Canadian troops. It is to be hoped, as is probable, that the matter complained of is purely accidental and may have arisen from the necessarily hurried nature of the arrangements. It may be assumed that the returned soldiers, themselves, are not complaining. Habits of discipline and habits of service have trained them to accept the place, and meet the discharge of, the duty assigned them.

The question of precedence is a large, and, in the sentimental sense, an unimportant one, though by some it is given great importance. We have seen solemn Church courts solemnly debate the question of precedence at court and government functions. This is a trifling matter compared with the precedence in the matter of recognizing the services of returned soldiers. With the church dignitaries it is a mere matter of vanity of personal or ecclesiastical pride. Whether one church denomination or other is given the chief seat in the synagogue is a trivial matter. But worthy and substantial recognition—a giving precedence to the soldiers, who have fought and suffered for us—is a supremely important matter. They have, themselves practiced the most splendid precedence; they have taken precedence in enlisting; they have taken precedence in discharge of all the duties of good soldiers in preparing for service, and they have taken precedence in the red blaze of battle and are deserving of a place of first consideration, in substantial government and popular recognition or any other honour that can be paid them.

We are not quite possessed of the rule of precedence in military processions, though it is known that in actual warfare the rear-guard holds a place of responsibility and importance. In ecclesiastical processions the place of honour is at the rear, and we see all church processions closed by the higher clergy, bishops and archbishops coming the very last—literally making the first, in importance and dignity, the last.

But the matter of precedence in processions, except in the matter of spirit shown, is a comparatively small thing to the returned soldier. He wants the larger, the practical recognition that consists in giving him precedence in employment, and preference of opportunity to take as prominent place in the battles of peace, as he has taken in the real game of fighting.

PEAT AND OTHER RESOURCES.

The Examiner has received the quarterly journal of the Canadian Peat Society, which contains a great amount of interesting matter. This does not lend itself to detailed reference; but it throws a strong light upon the fact of the immense natural resources of this country. It is probable that there is not a square mile of the three million square miles of Canada's land area that does not contain some form of potential wealth worth exploiting; and the Journal points many great economic uses can be made of the peat fields of Canada. Investigation of fifty of the peat bogs of Canada within reasonable reach of navigable shipping facilities, has shown that in about 140,000 acres there is an estimated amount of 115 million tons of fuel. Several bogs within easy shipping distance of Toronto are capable of producing 25 1-3 million tons of peat fuel, and seven bogs in the vicinity of Montreal can be made to yield 33 1-3 million tons. This may be regarded as a speculative information. We have not had great success in Peterborough district with peat production. But we have not yet hit upon the right way, but inventive genius will find it, as it, indeed, has found it.

As a matter of practical fact, the credit of bringing peat to commercial feasibility, belongs to a Peterborough boy. Mr. E. V. Moore, C.E., invented and patented a process, for producing peat fuel that was applied at the Alfred peat beds, Prescott county, and produced peat in commercial quantities. The fuel was so good that after a visit to the works, the Duke of Connaught procured a supply, and it was burned one winter with great satisfaction in the open grates at Rideau Hall. But the war put an end to operations. The William Hamilton Company, Peterborough, as the largest creditors, put the concern into liquidation, and the property came under the custody of Judge Huycke, local Master of the Supreme Court, with Messrs. Moore & Wearing solicitors, who offered it for sale, and it has, it is understood, been purchased by Mr. Charles McFarlane, another Peterborough boy, son of Mr. Andrew McFarlane, long connected with the William Hamilton Company. When better times come, it is probable that Mr. Moore's process will come into large employment and be applied to utilizing in a large commercial way, the new waste, peat bogs of Canada, for a useful article of fuel.

It may be recalled that not so many years since electricity was only a laboratory toy; now it is a big daily and indispensible part of our domestic and industrial life. There are many other things that enter into our daily life and the world's activities that a few years ago seemed much more impracticable than the commercially successful production of peat fuel. This problem becomes a more important conside ration when we see the other sources of feul becoming yearly reduced towards the point of exhaustion. Coal and wood fuel are even now becoming scarce and dear.

But our peat bogs are not only fuel sources of wealth. Experiments have shown that they can be made fruit plantations. They are well adapted to the culture of the blueberry or huckleberry, and can be made commercially profitable. The report also gives a table showing what nineteen Ontario and Quebec bogs would yield if entirely used to produce ammonium sulphate, a commercial commodity worth $65 per ton. The total potential yield amounts to 208 million dollars of ammonium sulphate.

These things may be regarded as the dreams of enthusiastic theorists, but they are no more a dream than aviation now a virtually perfected art, was three or four years ago. These are things we cannot afford to neglect. When this war is over the production of many things will be delayed in Europe and this will throw new burdens upon this continent. Canada can't grow, with its present scale of productiveness and realization of its virtually boundless natural resources. If we are to advance, development of these must also advance. The wisest statesmanship is that which foresees, and foreseeing, acts; and the same applies to ndustrial and commercial enterprise.

CONSCRIPTION.

Conscription has a harsh sound in the ears of Canadians and seems contrary to the spirit of Canadian democracy. While one many not advocate conscription in military matters, yet it seems, academically regarded at least, to be right in principle. A Labour man speaking at a naval recruiting meeting in Toronto, declared himself a conscriptionist. He is reported as saying in regard to conscription,

"It is in accord with the sound fundamental principles of democracy that men should share, and share alike. It is in accord with the principles of trade unionism that men should all share in the service and obligations of their craft. No printer can come to Toronto without having enlisted in the union and taken out his union card."

Not only in trade unionism is conscription—compulsory service—practised, but the principle applies in all aspects of government, national and civic. Compulsory service of the state, in the form of enforced payment of taxation obtains. If taxation were as new to us as enlistment, we should find a larger proportionate number shirking the payment of taxes, if it were left to voluntary action, than we find of these neglecting enlistment. All of us every day are subject to some form of conscription, meaning compulsory service. Our moral obligations are met in a great measure by the compulsion of a sense of duty, conscience or the opinions of our friends or public opinion.

If conscription—compulsory service—is defensible, and not only universally practised in regard to the general duties of citizenship—in the every day routine of life, why should not conscription — compulsory service—constitute an appeal at a time of crisis, the greatest crisis in the history of the world, in the history of the empire, in the history of Canada, in the history of our homes and our individual lives? All that we value and enjoy of liberty, personal right, of the best conditions of comfortable and happy life, are at stake. This war concerns everybody, and everybody that is anybody is helping in some way or other—men, women and children—who cannot enter the fighting ranks, but are doing their bit according to their ability. They are under conscription—compulsory service. They are compelled to it by their sense of duty, by their sense of loyalty to our soldiers on the fighting line.

There are however, others who are taking no share in helping in the war, and refuse to consider the duty of enlistment, of backing their school fellows, their social chums, their fellow citizens who are serving the colours on the field of war. These men who fight shy of fighting may, from their selfish point of view, consider themselves fortunate that conscription is not in force. We do not advocate conscription in Canada; it sounds harsh and smacks of the militaristic spirit that has brought on this war, and that means that we must eligible young men refusing to do a plain duty, the temptation to resort to compulsory service measures is exceedingly strong. We must win this war, but when we see thousands of take the necessary steps to maintain an adequate supply of soldiers in the fighting lines. If we have the men who will, by their voluntary action, meet this condition, all will go well; but if they won't do it, what is to be done? If we ever have conscription, it is the slacker that will bring it about.

FUTILITY OF PROPHESYING WITHOUT KNOWING THE FACTS

A prophecy is always interesting, even to the most cynical sceptic. Therefore it is but natural that people should be interested in the new prophecy of Mr. H. G. Wells that peace will be declared by next June. Mr. Wells has exemplified in his own career the wisdom of the old saying that "Prophecy is the most superfluous form of folly." He prophesied, when the war broke out, that the tricolour would be floating over the Rhine in three months. His loss of prestige as a prophet over this unfortunate venture was later regained by the marvellous realization of many of the dreams he had indulged in in his prophetic fiction. A few months ago he began prophesying again, and this time he drew ridicule on himself by prophesying that the war would only be brought to an end not by any military victory on either side, but b the mutual exhaustion of all the combatants.

This latter prophecy was made before Mr. Wells had visited the various fronts. It was a good stroke of the British War Office to send this prolific writer off to the various fronts to see the situation with the physical eye instead of the mystic's optic. Mr. Wells naturally got a good deal of first-hand information that considerably changed his outlook. Bein gthe most pragnosticating prognosticator that ever prognosticated a prognostication, Mr. Wells is prognosticating once more, and this time he is in a very cheerful mood. From what he has seen—he has no doubt whatever that the German defence is crumbling. Putting two and two together, and summing it all up, and adding also that his opinion has authority behind it, he prophesies that Germany will make a bid for peace before the end of the year, probably this month, and that the Allies will get the peace they want by June."

This time Mr. Wells has something to go on, and he is in a far better position to judge than the average man. As far as we can judge from the character of the news up to the present there are no particular signs that November will see a formal bid for peace by Germany. But then Mr. Wells says there will not be any such signs. His idea is that Germany will make her bid before a rupture of her eastern front taes place, and will try to stay the impending blow by a show of sham reasonableness in regard to France and Belgium. It is almost certain that German overtures will come without any other warnings than we are now getting through such things as Prof. Munsterberg's peace activities in the United States, and thei amazing denouement of the Verdun campaign. Whether the German overtures come this November or next November, what we have to do is to be on our guard against compromise, and to remember, when such overtures come, that they are but the expected prelude to the absolute overthrow of German militarism by the Allies.—Montreal Herald.

THE CLIMATE LESS SEVERE

Dr. Charles D. Walcott, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and Mrs. Walcott have just returned to Washington after several months' field work in Canada. Accompanied by only a packer and cook, they spent most of the summer and early fall on the continental divide, which forms the boundary line between Alberta and British Columbia, south of the Canadian Pacific Railway, studying the cambrian rocks, containing the fossil remains of the earliest animal life.

Owing to the heavy snowfall of the previous winter, and the fact that most of the geological formations which they wished to examine were in the deep snow about the timber line, little progress was made in July. In August, however, sections were examined and measured in the Mount Assiniboine region, and from there northwest to the celebrated Kicking Horse pass, where the Canadian Pacific Railway has bored a double loop through the mountain in order to obtain a feasible grade on the western side of the pass.

Some years ago Dr. Walcott found a remarkable fossil fauna in boulders which had been carried into Kicking Horse canyon by glaciers that have long since disappeared. This season he located the source of these boulders high up in the mountain cirque, where a portion of what must have been a great hanging glacier is still active.

Mrs. Walcott, formerly Miss Mary Vaux, of Philadelphia, who has studied glaciers for several years, and is well known as an Alpinist, visited Glacier, British Columbia, where she measured the position of two large glaciers, and determined that the front ice foot in each case had retreated at the rate of 100 feet a year during the past two years. Steel plates were placed on the ice on the present surveyed boundary lines. The plates will be buried beneath the winter's snows, but, since their positions are relatively low as to altitude, the snow will be melted off next summer, and their locations then will indicate the amount of forward flow of ice during the year. Mrs. Walcott's studies prove that the ice has been steadily retreating during the past six years. Her measurements agree with observations made in Alaska, and indicate that the climate is not as severe as on the Pacific side of the continent as it was a decade ago.

During the field work a large number of photographs were taken, including a dozen or more panoramic views, exposures being made on continuous films eight feet in length. Besides being of great scenic interest, these photographs form valuable pictorial records showing the general localities visited and definite locations of certain strata and fossil beds.

The party broke camp at Banff, Alberta, September 30, which proved a fortunate move, as the next day a heavy fall of snow covered the entire region.

A PRESS APPRECIATION OF LIBERAL LEADER ROWELL

Montreal on three consecutive days has heard inspiring addresses by Mr. Rowell—at the Reform Club, at St. James' Church and at the Canadian Club. Leader of a political party though he may be, he is much more than that—he is a great Canadian. Even at the Reform Club, he refuses to take advantage of the opportunity to talk politics, and not a phrase that he uttered could be turned into political capital. Mr. Rowell is more than a politician; he is a Canadian statesman. His vision extends beyond the end of the war and beyond the next provincial or federal election. He sees that the immediate duty of every Canadian worthy of the name is to help win this war for the sake of Canadians yet born. His message is that the war is not by any means over—and this is no mere pessimistic message, for he never doubts for a moment the ultimate victory—and that in this war we cannot stand on a limited liability basis. "Men, more men, and then, more men!" is the ringing message he brings us from the trenches, and with it many a tale of the heroism of our own Canadian boys of English, Scotch, Irish and of French descent. Are we going to let the flag fall from their grasp? There is only one answer. Mr. Rowell's visit to Montreal, tending as it does to bind still more closely together the people of Ontario and Quebec, will be a factor in the emphasis with which that answer is given. A man of high ideals, he is able, to an unusual extent, to refuse much of his own noble courage and enthusiasm into the hearts and minds of his hearers. He is devoting his fine abilities to the high cause of civilization and justice and human liberty.—Montreal Herald.

We Want a Business Man

A business man who has selling ability. The man we want may be in the automobile business now; he may be in some other business; he may be a farmer; he may be retired.

Whoever he is or whatever may be his occupation, we want him if he can fulfill the conditions of our proposal.

We are in search of a real, live, wide-awake man, who has had business training, who has some capital, who can sell Maxwell Motor Cars.

We are represented in the leading cities and towns of Canada, and our dealers are prosperous and happy.

They should be, and will continue to be, for the Maxwell Car is the unquestioned leader of its class.

It is a car for which there is a nation-wide and growing demand—because it represents more real value, dollar for dollar, than any other car in the world.

We have no dealer in this locality. We want one immediately. Our representative will call and explain the details of a very attractive proposition.

Anyone interested should inquire at once.

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP

YOU SHOULD USE
MILBURN'S
HEART and NERVE PILLS

Sleeplessness is caused by the nervous system becoming deranged.

Perhaps too much worry has gotten on your nerves, perhaps you have overworked yourself, or have been excessive in your use of tobacco, but whatever the cause, the nervous system must be built up again before restful sleep can be assured.

Those whose rest is broken into by frightful dreams, nightmares, sinking and smothering sensations, who wake up in the morning as tired as they went to bed can have their old, peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep back again by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. John Sloan, Haley Station, Ont., writes: "Over a year ago I was very nervous. I could not sleep at night, and I would faint at the slightest fright. I tried several doctors, but they did me practically no good. I noticed your advertisement, and immediately tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am proud to say they cured me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box or three for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Thought Artist Was German Spy

New York, November 8.—Rockwell Kent, American painter, was ordered off leave Newfoundland last summer on suspicion that he was a German spy, it became known here recently. Mr. Kent is now living at West New Brighton, Station Island. He has been trying to institute a suit against the Newfoundland government for having evicted him, but he has received word from Secretary of State Lansing yesterday that there seems to be no grounds for action.

Mr. Kent had taken an old house in Brigus, Newfoundland, under the spell of the rocky scenery. He had fixed the house up and moved his family there. He said yesterday that at first he got along very well with the villagers, especially after he had tuned the parson's piano and painted a sign for the bank.

Then one day while discussing the war he told a villager that it would be a long time before the British arrived in Berlin. Not long after he wrote to a German friend in the United States, part of the letter being in German, thus attracting the attention of the censor who directed the local authorities to keep watch on him.

Villiers soon began to spread tales about him, he said. When he put in tons of coal in his house there was much talk about his plans to supply the German U-boats; when he went for a sail he was spying; his workshop where he painted, became the subject of much suspicion, so much so that Mr. Kent put up a sign on it: "Bob shop, wireless plant, chart room."

The police officials had been visiting him frequently, and one day he was told to leave within 24 hours. He appealed to the American consul, and a lawyer, but was told nothing could be done about it. So he left, although his children had the whooping cough.

BEN LINDSAY HAS TO FIGHT AGAIN

Detroit, November 8. — Must the man who fights for the public welfare be prepared to suffer slander, unhappiness and the grinding poverty that eats at the very heart of courage?

Out in Denver Ben Lindsey is standing again for re-election as the judge of the juvenile court. It is the twelfth campaign that he has been through in 15 years, for by dint of petty legal technicalities his enemies have been able to make him battle in each county and municipal elections.

TWELVE DESPERATE STRUGGLES.

Twelve desperate struggles, each one taking a little more of his strength, each one driving him deeper into debt. For campaigns are expensive things, and Ben Lindsey has no secret sources to furnish him with a slush fund. In addition to the usual and ordinary drain, he is called upon at every election, and between elections, to defend himself and his work against the mud batteries of the opposition.

No charge has been too infamous to hurl at him. He has been accused of everything from petty larceny to degeneracy, and what has been too vile in print has been dropped into the sewers of gossip for circulation. Not only have they attacked the man in every relation of life but they have lied persistently with regard to the aims and the achievements of the juvenile court and the meaning of laws passed and proposed.

It is also the case that numerous other demands are made upon his thin purse. To the poor and the wretched that stream through his court he is the never-failing friend, and hundreds owe happiness, education and opportunity to this man whose hand is ever ready to reach into his pocket. Equally it is true that the whole world looks to Ben Lindsey as the fount of information for everything relating to children.

AN INSPIRATION TO THE WORLD.

Practically every juvenile court owes its inspiration to him. European nations have sent royal commissions to Denver to learn his methods and Japan was so impressed with the wonder of him that the commissioners even took photographs of the court room, so that they might be copied down. Like another Francis of Assisi, his voice has been heard around the world, preaching a new tenderness to the mothers and children of the earth.

Meat or fish intended to be fried should first be wiped as dry as possible, and it should not be very cold before dipping into the fat.

Famous Restaurateur Loses Partner Who Made His Fortune

London.—The death in London, at the age of 85 years, of Mme. Celestine de Nicols, of Regent House, Surbiton, recalls the interesting history of the Cafe Royal, Regent street.

Mme. Nicols was the widow of Mr. Daniel de Nicols, the founder of that popular institution. He was born at Champion, in Burgundy, in 1833, and his name then was Nicolas Daniel Thevenon. His parents were poor, and he started life as a cookmaker. He had no property when he married, in 1854, Celestine, a young French woman, two years his senior, who had a small plot of land, a dowry of $200 and savings of $300.

They started business in Paris but were not successful. In 1863 they came to London and started a small cafe in Glasshouse street, which they called the Cafe Royal. There are many such tiny restaurants in Soho, but they do not possess such skilful managers as Mr. Thevenon and his wife. Their first cafe was immediately behind the site of the existing Cafe Royal, but they did so well that in two years they were able to take over the Regent street premises and join the two. Mr. Thevenon changed his name to Daniel Nicholas de Nicols, in which name he was naturalised.

During the Franco-Prussian war many French people took refuge in London, and their number was swollen later by Communist exiles. The Cafe Royal became the head-quarters of Frenchmen in the metropolis, and at this period the influx was so great that in order to get a dinner at the cafe it was necessary to order it beforehand.

The business flourished so that Mr Nicols was able to rebuild and enlarge his premises, and to make them the resort of fashion and frivolity. He was the first to teach Londoners the "restaurant habit."

Mr. Nicols said he was the possessor of the best wine cellar in the world, not only in regard to quality but quantity, and when stock was taken on a few years prior to his death its value was variously estimated at between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000. He purchase the freehold of the Empire theatre, Leicester square, which in his hands developed into one of the principal variety theatres in London. He died in 1897, leaving more than $5,000,000. He had no son, but left one daughter, Mme. Emma Pilet, who lived at Vine House, Park Road, Surbiton Hill, and died in 1912.

Mr. de Nicols will bequeathed a life interest in half his estate to his wife and mother, a life interest in a quarter of his estate to his daughter and a life interest in the remaining quarter to her children. Mme. Pilet's interest in a quarter of the estate produced about $30,000 a year. The will led to litigation, which was taken to the House of Lords, but it was decided in favor of the widow.

In 1905, the Cafe Royal was turned into a limited company in which the late Mme. Celestine de Nicols, Mme. Pilet and four officials were the only shareholders. Mr. Pilet, the daughter's husband, had a position at the Cafe worth about $9,000 a year, but he quarrelled with his vigorous mother-in-law, who dismissed him from his position, and his wife cut him out of her will by a codicil. There was a further litigation in 1913, Mr. Henri E. Pilet, the son-in-law, seeking to establish that the codicil was obtained by the undue influence of Mme. Celestine de Nicols, but the jury stopped the case and returned a verdict in favor of the mother-in-law.

Mme. de Nicols owned the largest estate in Surbiton, driving up to London each morning and returning at night in her brougham, always exercising personal control over the management of the Cafe Royal.

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP

YOU SHOULD USE
MILBURN'S
HEART and NERVE PILLS

Sleeplessness is caused by the nervous system becoming deranged.

Perhaps too much worry has gotten on your nerves, perhaps you have overworked yourself, or have been excessive in your use of tobacco, but whatever the cause, the nervous system must be built up again before restful sleep can be assured.

Those whose rest is broken into by frightful dreams, nightmares, sinking and smothering sensations, who wake up in the morning as tired as they went to bed can have their old, peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep back again by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. John Sloan, Haley Station, Ont., writes: "Over a year ago I was very nervous. I could not sleep at night, and I would faint at the slightest fright. I tried several doctors, but they did me practically no good. I noticed your advertisement, and immediately tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am proud to say they cured me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box or three for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Thought Artist Was German Spy

New York, November 8.—Rockwell Kent, American painter, was ordered to leave Newfoundland last summer on suspicion that he was a German spy, it became known here recently. Mr. Kent is now living at West New Brighton, Staten Island. He has been trying to institute a suit against the Newfoundland government for having evicted him, but he has received word from Secretary of State Lansing yesterday that there seems to be no grounds for action.

Mr. Kent had taken an old house at Brigus, Newfoundland, under the spell of the rocky scenery. He had fixed the house up and moved his family there. He said yesterday that at first he got along very well with the villagers, especially after he had tuned the parson's piano and painted a sign for the bank.

Then one day while discussing the war he told a villager that it would be a long time before the British army reached Berlin. Not long after he wrote to a German friend in the United States, part of the letter being in German, thus attracting the attention of the censor who directed the local authorities to keep watch on him.

Villagers soon began to spread tales about him, he said. When he put eight tons of coal in his house there was much talk about his plans to supply the German U-boats; when he went for a sail he was spying; his workshop, where he painted, became the subject of much suspicion, so much so that Mr. Kent put up a sign on it: "Bomb shop, wireless plant, chart room."

The police officials had been visiting him regularly, and one day he was told to leave within 24 hours. He appealed to the American consul, and a lawyer, but was told nothing could be done about it. So he left, although his children had the whooping cough.

BEN LINDSAY HAS TO FIGHT AGAIN

Detroit, November 8. — Must the man who fights for the public welfare be prepared to suffer slander, unhappiness and the grinding poverty that eats at the very heart of courage?

Out in Denver Ben Lindsey is standing again for re-election as the judge of the juvenile court. It is the twelfth campaign that he has been through in 15 years, for by dint of petty legal technicalities his enemies have been able to make him battle in both county and municipal elections.

TWELVE DESPERATE STRUGGLES.

Twelve desperate struggles, each one taking a little more of his strength, each one driving him deeper into debt. For campaigns are expensive things, and Ben Lindsey has no secret sources to furnish him with a slush fund. In addition to the usual and ordinary drain, he is called upon at every election, and between elections, to defend himself and his work against the mud batteries of the opposition.

No charge has been too infamous to hurl at him. He has been accused of everything from petty larceny to degeneracy, and what has been too vile to paint has been dropped into the sewers of gossip for circulation. Not only have they attacked the man in every relation of life but they have lied persistently with regard to the aims and the achievements of the juvenile court and the meaning of laws passed and proposed.

It is also the case that numerous other demands are made upon his thin purse. To the poor and the wretched that stream through his court he is the never-failing friend, and hundreds owe happiness, education and opportunity to this man whose hand is ever ready to reach into his pocket. Equally it is true that the whole world looks to Ben Lindsey as the fount of information for everything relating to children.

AN INSPIRATION TO THE WORLD.

Practically every juvenile court owes its inspiration to him. European nations have sent royal commissions to Denver to learn his methods and Japan was so impressed with the wonder of him that the commissioners even took photographs of the court room, so that they might be copied down. Like another Francis of Assisi, his voice has been heard around the world, preaching a new tenderness to the mothers and children of the earth.

Meat or fish intended to be fried should first be wiped as dry as possible, and it should not be very cold before dipping into the fat.

Famous Restaurateur Loses Partner Who Made His Fortune

London.—The death in London, at the age of 85 years, of Mme. Celestine de Nicols, of Regent House, Surbiton, recalls the interesting history of the Cafe Royal, Regent street.

Mme. Nicols was the widow of Mr. Daniel de Nicols, the founder of that popular institution. He was born at Champiet, in Burgundy, in 1833, and his name then was Nicolas Daniel Theronon. His parents were poor, and he started life as a coachmaker. He had no property when he married, in 1854, Celestine, a young French woman, two years his senior, who had a small plot of land, a dowry of $200 and savings of $300.

They started business in Paris but were not successful. In 1863 they came to London and started a small cafe in Glasshouse street, which they called the Cafe Royal. There are many such tiny restaurants in Soho, but they do not possess such skilful managers as Mr. Theronon and his wife. Their first cafe was immediately behind the site of the existing Cafe Royal, but they did so well that in two years they were able to take over the Regent street premises and join the two. Mr. Theronon changed his name to Daniel Nicholas de Nicols, in which name he was naturalized.

During the Franco-Prussian war many French people took refuge in London, and their number was swollen later by Communist exiles. The Cafe Royal became the headquarters of Frenchmen in the metropolis, and at this period the influx was so great that in order to get a dinner at the cafe it was necessary to order it beforehand.

The business flourished so that Mr. Nicols was able to rebuild and enlarge his premises, and to make them the resort of fashion and frivolity. He was the first to teach Londoners the "restaurant habit."

Mr. Nicols said he was the possessor of the best wine cellar in the world, not only in regard to quality but quantity, and when stock was taken a few years prior to his death its value was variously estimated at between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000. He purchase the freehold of the Empire theatre Leicester square, which in his hands developed into one of the principal variety theatres in London. He died in 1897, leaving more than $5,000,000. He had no son, but left one daughter, Mme. Emma Pilet, who lived at Vine House, Park Road, Surbiton Hill, and died in 1912.

Mr. de Nicols will bequeathed a life interest in half his estate to his wife and mother, a life interest in a quarter of his estate to his daughter and a life interest in the remaining quarter to her children. Mme. Pilet's interest in a quarter of the estate produced about $20,000 a year. The will led to litigation, which was taken to the House of Lords, but it was decided in favor of the widow.

In 1905, the Cafe Royal was turned into a limited company in which the late Mme. Celestine de Nicols, Mme Pilet and four officials were the only shareholders. Mr. Pilet, the daughter's husband, had a position at the Cafe worth about $5,000 a year, but he quarrelled with his vigorous mother-in-law, who dismissed him from his position, and his wife cut him out of her will by a codicil. There was a further litigation in 1913, Mr. Henri E. Pilet, the son-in-law, seeking to establish that the codicil was obtained by the undue influence of Mme. Celestine de Nicols, but the jury stopped the case and returned a verdict in favor of the mother-in-law.

Mme de Nicols owned the largest estate in Surbiton, driving up to London each morning and returning at night in her brougham, always exercising personal control over the management of the Cafe Royal.

BRITAIN CONTROLS THE RUBBER SITUATION

Started in 1893 to Get Control and Now is Able to Keep It Away From the Hands of the Germans

Unconsciously Great Britain prepared for the present war with Germany and spent almost as many years in preparing as did the enemy, but her preparation was along a commercial rather than a martial plane. And, further, it was directed along one line, but that line has developed with the past few years into one of extreme importance.

When one stops to consider, it is quickly appreciated that rubber is to-day one of the most important of all staple articles and without it mechanically, surgically, commercially, a nation is at the greatest disadvantage. Yet, to-day, Germany is practically without the possibility of obtaining rubber or a substitute, as no synthetic substance has ever been found to replace it commercially.

Great Britain controls the rubber production of the world to-day. In 1893 she laid the foundation for it by encouraging rubber plantations in Ceylon, Sumatra, the Malay States and Java. Brazil then produced the world's supply, but to-day, Britain's fostered plantations dominate the output and the British Government says when and where rubber shall go. Thus, Germany is prevented from obtaining any, as none can enter neutral countries, except with the consent of the British Consul in that country.

Incidentally, Great Britain's control of the rubber market has reduced the price from three dollars a pound to about 67 cents, and rubber has been placed within the grasp of all. This is a blessing to the man who buys rubbers and overshoes to protect and preserve his now highly expensive shoes.

Every pain in the back signifies a trouble that should not be there. If it repeats there is some trouble that should be immediately looked into. Don't allow yourself to become an invalid through kidney trouble, backache or rheumatism. The setting in of cold weather will aggravate this disease, and for your future good health you should give every symptom that shows itself thorough attention. To those who realize the seriousness of these diseases and wish to secure a remedy that will cure them, they will find if they use Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills that they will not only be benefitted, but cured. If they fail in any one case we will, on application, return the amount paid for the pills. Guaranteed and sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter street, Peterborough. stf-tf

POLIOMYELITIS IS MISNOMER, HE SAYS

Dr. Simon Flexner, recognized as an authority on infantile paralysis, said at the Academy of Medicine recently that if the pathology of the disease had been first worked out on animals it would not now be called poliomyelitis or infantile paralysis. The term, he said, was a misnomer.

Dr. Flexner was discussing a paper by Dr. Robert W. Lovett, professor of orthopædic surgery at Harvard, at the academy's first meeting of the year, at which the topic for consideration was the recent epidemic in its various phases, with particular reference to the "after" care of the patients. Dr. Lovett had experience in the Vermont epidemic of 1914 and his paper had to do with the management of poliomyelitis "with a view to minimising the ultimate disability."

The paper was discussed by Dr. Charlton Wallace of Cornell; Dr. F. C. Rosenow, Dr. Frederick Tilney, Dr. G. R. Pisek and Dr. F. Kennedy. Dr. Lovett began with the announcement that he had no new discoveries and no new theories, but that New York with its several thousand children suffering from the effects of the disease, warranted grave attention from the medical fraternity. "From my point of view," he said, "the most gratifying thing is that we are warranted in holding out more hope to patients than his hitherto been possible."

Dr. Lovett gave figures obtained from close attention to many cases in Vermont, indicating that treatments by braces, by massage and muscular exercises, when properly applied, had reduced a large percentage of paralysis of the chronic character.

Depreciating his own skill in the study of pathology, Dr. Flexner said he thought Dr. Lovett's paper indicated that its practice was properly founded. His own view, he said, is that poliomyelitis is not to be regarded as a paralytic disease. The germ, he said, does not attack the substance of the spinal cord at all, but the gray matter in the cord, and through abrasions follows the lymphatics and when extension takes place, acts through the infiltration of cells in the muscular tissues.

GOOD NEWS TO TEA DRINKERS

A boat load of teas direct from China, of this season's 1916 crop, arrived a short time ago, and a consignment has reached Peterborough. It seems these teas had a safe voyage from the distant land of their growth, and came through without any mishap. The stock was quickly bought up on account of the very favourable prices at which it was held. The Peterborough Grocery Co., Simcoe street, are now offering these teas below the regular market prices, in single pounds and ten pound packages. Read their advertisement in another column. This will be good news for tea drinkers.

GIVE PEOPLE CHANCE

Premier Martin Thinks They Will Vote Them Out by Large Majority.

REGINA Sask., Nov. 7.— The dispensaries in Saskatchewan will not be closed until the people have declared their will at the coming referendum, Premier Martin declared yesterday.

"I believe the liquor stores will be voted out by a large majority," said the Premier, "but I am not in favour of closing them until the people have expressed their perference. I know that a large number of people in this Province are opposed to the Government being in the liquor business, but after the study I have been able to make of the conduct of the system I believe that properly closed stores afford the most desirable means of dealing with this remnant of the traffic."

Premier Martin said further, when asked if the Government would introduce a direct prohibition bill this session, that the question of further legislation had not been decided. There would have to be some liquor sold for medicinal purposes, he said, and whether this would be sold by druggists, under the control of a central Government authority, had not been decided.

ROBBERS TRAVEL IN AUTO.

Invite Foreigners at Brantford, Ont., for Ride and Rob Them.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 9.—Two foreigners employed at the Canada Glue Works here were taken out in an auto by four fellow-countrymen, apparently from Windsor, robbed, and beaten up and thrown out of the car. One reported by 'phone to the police and the other has not turned up yet.

The police found that four foreigners had ridden here from Windsor, and immediately all the cities between here and London were put on their guard. Word was received from London thhat they had been arrested there, and Detective Chapman and Constable Shuter immediately left for that city.

Wednesday was pay day with the employees of the glue works, so that apparently the thieves had the scheme laid out in advance.

POLICE AND I.W.W. IN REVOLVER FIGHT

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 7.—Six men are dead and fifty are suffering to-day from bullet wounds as the result of a battle at Everett, Washington, thirty miles north of Seattle, when 250 members of the Industrial Workers of the World, attempted to land in that city from the steamer Verona, which had carried them from Seattle. The boat was met by Sheriff McRae, of Snohomish county, who, with a posse, forbade the men to land. A shot fired from the Verona, according to the boat's officers, was followed immediately by firing from both sides. The steamer hastened back to Seattle with the dead and wounded. The Seattle police took the dead to the morgue, the wounded to the city hospital and the unwounded to the city jail. One member of the Everett citizens' posse, C. O. Curtis, formerly second lieutenant in the Washington National Guard, was killed and nineteen others wounded.

Including the wounded there are 204 men and three women under arrest here. Forty-one men were taken from a second steamer which failed to reach Everett. The women were taken from a motor bus which had conveyed them from the northern boundary of Seattle, where they had disembarked from an Everett interurban car.

ENDS LONG DISPUTE.

The fight was a result of a long dispute between the Industrial Work-ers and the citizens of Everett over the right to hold street meetings in that city.

The National Guard and Naval Militia at Everett and in Seattle are under orders to-day to meet any emergency. Sheriff McRae, who is suffering from two gun shot wounds in the leg, asserted that the first shot was fired by a man in front of the pilot house of the steamer Verona.

Eye-witnesses asserted that some men jumped into the water from the boat and that a number were drowned, but searchers to-day were unable to find any bodies and it was believed that this report was incorrect.

Four of the wounded members of the citizens' posse are in a critical condition to-day.

HARRY LAUDER'S SALARY.

What a Scotch comedian can accomplish in Scotland is shown by the results of Mr. Harry Lauder's engagement at the Glasgow Alhambra during a recent week. There the gross receipts amounted to £3,400, of which one-half, £1,700, fell to Mr. Lauder's share.

This beats even his former appearance at that house, for although the amount then taken was slightly larger it included an additional matinee. Such an achievement might well arouse the envy of a Caruso.

UP TO THE ELECTORAL COLLEGE SELECTION OF U. S. PRESIDENT

Complicated Machinery Employed in Choosing Executive Head of the Nation

One Presidential elector for every 211,877 inhabitants of the United states gives a popular representative of a Presidential elector in the Electoral College of.....435
One Presidential elector for every Senator in Congress gives a State representation in the Electoral College, each of the 48 States having two Senators, irrespective whether the State's population is 100,000 or 10,000,000, of 96
Total votes in the Electoral College.....531

United States system of choosing a President has its foundation disclosed in the above hasty approximation to the exact facts the fathers of the American Republic feared to trust the people with the choice of a President. The original unit of representation in the House of Representatives was one Congressman for every thirty thousand population. Thus the original thirteen States had two Presidential electors for each State, plus a Presidential elector for each unit of 30,000 people in such State.

Unit of Representation.

The unit of representation in Congress increased to the present figure of 211,877. The revolutionary forefathers imagined that the Presidential electors would be large-minded men, who would choose a President like the cardinals choose a Pope. These exalted patriots were to take their mandate from the people and elect the best men they could discover as President and Vice-President of the United States. The Presidential electors were soon stripped of all semblance of original jurisdiction. These electors became the automatic recorders of the people's wish that certain men should be elected to the Presidency and Vice-Presidency of the United States.

The United States Constitution fixes the basis of representation in the Electoral College. The Constitution does not impair the sovereignity of the States by fixing a method of choosing electors. The States could choose their quota of Presidential electors by a vote of the State Legislature, just as the States choose two Senators by vote of these Legislatures in such States as do not elect United States Senators by popular vote.

531 Electoral Votes.

The President and Vice-President of the United States are now elected by a majority of the 531 votes in the Electoral College. These electors include two electors for each state as a state and one elector for each 211,877 people in that state. These lines are followed by a more detailed description of the American method of electing a President. Canadians must first lay hold of the truth that Americans do not vote for the President and Vice-President. Each party represented in the race for the Presidency nominates a full set of Presidential electors in each state. The supporters of C. E. Hughes nominated by Republicans to stand as Presidential electors. The supporters of Woodrow Wilson nominated Democrats. The supporters of Hanley nominated Prohibitionists.

Votes the Ticket.

Each elector in New York State, for example, votes a ticket that carries the names of 45 Presidential electors, the representation of New York State in the Electoral College. A cross marked at the head of the ticket will express the voter's approval of the whole 45 electors on the ticket. These electors are nominated by the party organization, and are usually men of note in their own localities. The electors on the ticket that polls a majority of the votes in New York State will cast the 45 votes of New York State for the Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates named on the ticket. Provision is made for the service or alternate electors in case the electors chosen are precluded from service by death or illness. The method of choice is indirect. The electors chosen are automatic recorders of the people's will. The system of choice also enables a minority of the people to elect a President and constitute an executive government for the United States against the will of the majority. A majority of the votes might be polled in a minority of the States. The candidate who carries a majority of the States would be President and Vice-President if their opponents polled a majority of 1,000,000 of the popular vote throughout the Union.

History and Procedure.

A short history of the Electoral College and the methods followed in selecting a President is as follows:

The Electoral College.

The best method of electing the president was a question which perplexed the constitutional convention as much as any other. To submit the election of an officer so exalted to the popular vote was regarded with general distrust. At one time the convention decided to have the president elected by Congress, but there was a grave objection to this; it would be likely to destroy his independence and make him the mere creature of Congress. At last the plan of an electoral college was devised. Each state is entitled to a number of its representatives and senators together; and the electors choose the president and vice-president, meeting at their state capitals for that purpose, and sending separate certificates of their choice of president and vice-president to the presiding officer of the Senate at Washington. No federal senator or representative, or any person holding civil office under the United States, can serve as an elector. Each state may appoint or choose its electors in such a manner as it sees fit; at first, they were more often than otherwise chosen by the legislatures; now they are always elected by the people. The day of election must be the same in all the states. By act of Congress the electors are to be chosen on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

Powers of Electors.

"It was the original intention that the electors should be left free to make their own choice, and there are instances in early years of electors of one party voting for personal friends of the opposite party. At first the electoral college did not state whether the candidates named in them were candidates for the presidency or vice-presidency. Each elector, for simply wrote down two names, only one of which could be the name of a citizen of his own state. In the official count, the candidate who had the highest number of votes, provided that was a majority of the whole number, was declared president, and the next highest became vice-president. The natural result of this was seen in the first contested election in 1796, which gave the presidency to John Adams, while his antagonist, Thomas Jefferson, became vice-president. In 1800, Jefferson and his colleague Burr received exactly the same number of electoral votes. This threw the election into the House of Representatives, and such intrigues followed for the purpose of defeating Jefferson that the country was threatened with civil war. This necessitated a change in the method of election. In 1804, the twelfth amendment was adopted. The method by this amendment was changed so that the electors make separate ballots for president and vice-persident. In the official count the votes for the president are first counted. If no candidate has a majority, then the House of Representatives must immediately choose the president from the three names highest on the list. In this choice the House votes by states, each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose must consist of at least one member from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states is necessary for a choice. Then if no candidate for the vice-presidency has a majority, then the House of Representatives choose from the two names highest on the list. A quorum for the purpose consists of two-thirds of the whole number of senators, and a majority of the whole number is necessary to a choice."

Had Severe Cold

PAIN IN CHEST

SPASMODIC COUGHING

Many people when they contract a cold do not pay any attention to it, thinking perhaps it will pass away in a day or two. This is a mistake for before they know it, it has settled on the lungs.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that on the first sign of a cough or cold it must be gotten rid of immediately, otherwise it may cause years of suffering from some serious lung trouble.

Mr. A. George, 30 Blevin's Place, Toronto, Ont., writes: "Having greatly benefitted from your remedy, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I take the liberty to write you a few words about the effect of that wonderful syrup. Two years ago I caught a severe cold followed by a spasmodic cough and pain in my chest. I was treated by many doctors but without any benefit, and also took many proprietory medicines which all failed to cure. One of my friends recommended Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after using three bottles I was completely cured. I recommend it to anyone as a God-sent remedy."

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c and 50c.

FIRE CLAIM IS ADJUSTED

SENTENCE OF DEATH ON MIKE TANCREDO

FATAL SHOOTING FOLLOWED A DRUNKEN BRAWL—McINTYRE GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER.

London, Ont., Nov. 8.—A sentence of death was passed by Mr. Justice Lennox on Mike Tancredo for the murder of his fellow-countryman Raffaelo Barbado. He will be hanged on Jan. 23rd unless the sentence is commuted. The fatal shooting followed a drunken brawl last fall. Since his conviction the prisoner has slept and eaten very little and the officials believe he at last realizes the seriousness of his position.

The criminal docket of the Assizes Court was concluded with the jury's verdict in the McIntyre case. John L. McIntyre of Glencoe, rural mail driver, whose epileptic daughter died in childbirth, was charged with manslaughter on the ground of alleged neglect. The jury found him guilty only on the second count, that of neglect, impairing her health. As the Judge granted a stated case to the defence, sentence was deferred. In the meantime McIntyre must remain in jail.

FOUR-YEAR SENTENCE

AIDED IN GETTING A FALSE STATEMENT ON OIL WELL PUBLISHED

Calgary, Alta., Nov. 8. George Edward Buck was found guilty by Judge Winter in the District Court, on the charge of assisting in securing the publication of a false statement in connection with the well of the Black Diamond Oil Fields, Limited, and was sentenced to serve four years in Edmonton Penitentiary.

A. A. McGillivray, counsel for Buck, asked for a stay of sentence to be intimated to make an appeal. The judge, however, refused the stay, and sentenced Buck accordingly.

HIGH COST OF LIVING IS DISCUSSED BY THE MOTHERS' CLUB

Mrs. Jas. Kendry, After Investigating Local Conditions, Gives an Admirable Paper on the Situation--Women Will Petition the Goverament in Regard to Several Matters

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Jas. Kendry addressed the Mothers' Club in the committee room of the Y.M.C.A., the subject of the address being the high cost of living. Mrs. Kendry, who has gone into this subject thoroughly with both the middle man and producer, put the facts very plainly before the club. She stated that in the outset she was inclined to blame the farmers for the increased price of farm products, but on interviewing a great many found that they were not so greatly to blame as the increased cost of production and transportation and shortage of food supply. Mrs. Kendry found that the rise in price of butter and milk might also be due to the fact that the creameries and cheese factories had been bought up by Toronto firms. In an interview with Mr. Gillespie, Mrs. Kendry found that the report that Mr. Gillespie was holding a large supply of butter to raise the prices, was without foundation. On Saturday, Oct. 28, Mr. Gillespie had exactly ten pounds of butter on hand. Mr. Gillespie said that it was impossible during the summer to put butter into cold storage on account of the demand being greater than the supply. He was compelled to obtain his butter from outside sources at 41 cents per pound, which price, combined, with the cost of freight carriage, cutting and wrapping brought the price up.

Mrs. Kendry then dealt with the bacon situation. She had interviewed Mr. Matthews concerning the report that bacon was sold at a lower price in Toronto than in Peterborough. Mr. Matthews was indignant at this report and stated that people did not know that there were grades of bacon, and that the firm has a uniform price for each. Mr. Matthews, asked his opinion in the increased price of bacon, said that there are now 45,000,000 in the consumers' class who had been in that of the industrial. This alone was enough to create a world-wide revolution.

At the Quaker Oats Mr Kendry found that the price of Quaker oats had not advanced materially, but might at any time. The cost of wheat is now $1.93, compared with 86c. of a little over a year ago.

The coal problem was then dealt with by Mrs. Kendry. Statistics show that of the twenty-one billion tons of coal in Pennsylvania, two and one half tons have been used and two and one-half wasted, leaving sixteen billion, and there are eight railroads to carry the coal. The causes of the high prices are the shortage of labour and scarcity of freight cars. Four hundred thousand cars should have been built to meet the increased demand. The local rise of 25c. a ton is due to the increased cost of labour. Experts asked if there were any possibility of a lowered price, stated there was none.

Remedies for the high cost of living were then discussed. Beef will be lowered considerably and thereby a valuable substitute for butter made from beef tallow could be made. Here again we are hampered as the government forbids the manufacture of any substitute for butter. Again it forbids skim milk, cheese, which is most nutritious.

Mrs. Kendry suggested that a deputation of women should petition the government to place a standard price for wheat and thus prevent the farmers from storing by their supply to wait for a rise in the market. She would also ask the government to allow the manufacture of substitutes for butter.

Mrs. Scadding made a valuable suggestion for lowering the cost of home-made bread, which can be done by the addition of whole wheat flour.

A committee of three, with Mrs. Morrison as convenor, will wait upon the Women's Council to suggest petitioning the government.

TRIBUTES TO LIEUT. ARTHUR ACKERMAN

And so they brought him home: the hero son,
Who at the call of duty donned his arms,
And, as the gallant knights of years agone,
Went forth to face grim foes, and wars alarms.

There, on the hard fought fields of perilled France,
Facing the hordes of Germany he fell,
Valiently doing his bit: taking his chance,
Let his foes speak,—if he did it ill, or well.

Who shall take up his sword, who carry on?
Close up the ranks, and forward! the command.
The fight is yet to win: it must be won,
Let clarion sound that note through this fair land.

Rise! Sons of Canada: the cry insistent comes,
The cause of freedom falters, shall it fall?
While you stand idly by your fathers sons,
Will answer as your fathers did,—the call.

Long may the flag that stands for freedom wave
As the free winds of heaven, o'er the land,
Long in our hearts will we retain our brave,
And memory speak of Matthews and of Ackerman.

A. M.

Another correspondent encloses the following quotation as a tribute to Lieut. Ackerman:

"Who is the happy warrior? Who is he
That every man in arms should wish to be?
It is the generous spirit, who—
Come when it will, is equal to the need—
Who, with a toward or untoward lot,
Prosperous or adverse, to his wish or not—
Plays, in the many games of life, that one
Where what he most doth value must be won,
Whom neither shape of danger can dismay,
Nor thought of tender happiness betray."

REV. BYRON STAUFFER GAVE AN ADDRESS IN MILLBROOK

Proceeds of Fowl Supper Amounted to $225—November Meeting of the Ministerial Association—Epworth League Activities

MILLBROOK, Nov. 9.—The fowl supper and entertainment held on Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church, of which Miss May Needham is the president, proved a big success.

From 5 to 8 in the evening an excellent supper was served by a large number of willing helpers. At 8 o'clock the entertainment commenced. The Port Hope Male Quartette rendered several selections in their usual inimitable style, Miss Walker being their efficient accompanist. The mandolin and guitar numbers were highly appreciated, as were also the organ solos given by Master Pipher, of Port Hope. Miss Belle Maunder, of Lindsay, sang a solo in excellent voice, and was enthusiastically applauded.

Rev. Byron Stauffer, the world-famed lecturer, kept the audience interested for over an hour. His lecture, "The Folks Next Door," is one of his best, but he has one in store for a Millbrook audience at a future date that is even more humorous. The orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. Burnham, added greatly to the enjoyment of the audience by their sweet music. Miss Ella Elson was the capable accompanist for Miss Maunder and the orchestra. Rev. Mr. Higgs was chairman.

The singing of the National Anthem and the pronouncing of the benediction fittingly closed the successful event.

The proceeds amounted to $225

November Meeting.

The November meeting of the Ministerial Association was held in the Manse on Monday afternoon, and was largely attended. Rev. W. Higgs read a paper on the subject, "Old and New Conceptions of Some Bible Truths." A very interesting and profitable discussion followed. The next monthly meeting will be held in the Methodist Church.

Epworth League.

"Recruiting for Christ"—This is the watchword of the Epworth League Rally, to be held next Monday evening at 7.45. Bright music and interesting addresses, combined with a certain amount of dramatic effect, make this rally programme a most promising one.

Obituaries.

In Cavan, on Thursday, Nov. 2, 1916, Jane Armstrong, beloved wife of William Dixon, aged 71 years.

In Millbrook, on Monday, Nov. 6, 1916, Elizabeth Matilda Todd, relict of Samuel Stratton, aged 63 years.

Mission Band.

A union meeting of the Mission Band and Senior League will be held in the League Room of the Methodist Church at 8 o'clock on Friday evening.

Personals.

Mr. Thos. Lang was in Toronto this week on business.

Lang and Gardiner shipped three car loads of cattle to Toronto this week.

Sergt. Cole spent Sunday in Peterborough.

Miss Esther Mitchell, Fenelon Falls, is visiting Millbrook friends.

Mr. Sam. Murphy, of Bethany, was in town on Monday.

Mrs. Murray, Miss Lillian Murray, Miss Belle Maunder, and Mrs. Ed. McConnell, of Lindsay, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Nattrass this week.

Mr. G. Walker Green, of Peterborough, was in town on Monday.

Miss F. C. Hawken, of the Methodist Training School, Toronto, was the guest of Millbrook friends over Sunday.

Mrs. John McCullough, Newtonville, was a guest of Mrs. Wm. Mullen on Sunday.

Master Basil Richards was a visitor to Peterborough on Monday.

The Misses Dorothy Doak, Kathleen Thorndyke, and Marjory Smith, Peterborough, were home over Sunday.

Mrs. H. Melville, of Peterborough, and grandson, Master Blewitt, of Regina, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Dungan.

Lieut. H. Leach was a visitor to Peterborough on Saturday.

Normal School Literary Society

The Normal School Literary Society held its regular meeting on Monday afternoon, in the Assembly Hall, the First Vice-President occupying the chair. The programme consisted of:

Opening chorus, "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," by whole school.
Piano solo by Miss Arkile.
Readings by Miss Connor, Miss Petrie, Mr. Lathrope.
Remarks by critic, Mr. Gullett.
The meeting then closed with the National Anthem.

Boys At Front Like the Papers

Mrs. Grant, Chemong Road, has received the following interesting letter from Pte. Reginald Rouse, a Peterborough boy who went to Bermuda and then overseas with the Royal Canadian Regiment. He is now in France with the Anzacs:

Dear Mrs. Grant,—Just a few lines to let you know that I am still enjoying good health. I received your welcome letter and many thanks for the same. A letter is the most looked for thing out here. It reminds one of civilisation a little. The harvest is about finished now out here and things are beginning to look like the fall. It brings back memories of God's country. I have met some of the boys that were in the 93rd Peterborough Regiment last week. They are all looking fine and well and we are all waiting to get a smack at the Germans.

I suppose they are still busy recruiting in Peterborough. You can bet that we shall need all that can be sent, for we haven't finished this job yet. I should like to have gone to the Toronto Exhibition. It sure must have been good, but I am hoping to be home for the next one.

Well, I am afraid I shall have to quit now for there is nothing to write about only war news and that will all be old by the time you receive it. I have not received the papers yet. I hope they don't get lost, for they are a real comfort to a man. There is nothing like the good old Examiner.

Hoping this will find you all enjoying the best of health, and kind regards to all, I remain,

Sincerely yours,
Reg. Rouse.

WARRANTS ON MONDAY IF FINES ARE UNPAID

PORT CREDIT, Nov. 9.—Mr. G. W. Gordon, J.P., in his court drew attention to the manner in which motorists were returning the courtesy of his court, and stated that those who had not paid fines imposed by himself would learn that on Monday warrants had been issued for their arrest if the fines were not remitted in the meantime.

Many motorists have failed to appear at his court and have been fined in their absence. They have failed to pay these fines.

DAVIS HILL COMMITTED ON 4 CHARGES OF STEALING CATTLE

Charges Against His Brother and Sisters Lacked Evidence--Will Be Dismissed or Discharged--Clever Work By Police Detailed to This Case.

Davis Hill was committed for trial by County Magistrate Langley yesterday afternoon on two more charges of cattle stealing. This makes an aggregate of four cases upon which he is sent on for trial, the cattle owners, it is alleged, being James Matthews, A. E. Carveth, Stuart Clydesdale and John Deen. In the afternoon hearing the latter two cases were dealt with, Hill being charged with the theft of two cattle from Mr. Clydesdale and one two-year-old steer from Mr. Deen.

In the other charges against Russell Hill, Katharine Hill and Mrs. Clarence Sampson, Crown Attorney Hatton stated that there was no evidence to offer in these cases and recommended the discharge of the persons concerned. Mr. Gordon argued that they should be dismissed, and Magistrate Langley decided to consider the several contentions and give his judgment on this point on Saturday morning. A discharge would permit the rearrest of Russell Hill and his two sisters if the Crown desired to make this step at any time.

THE CASE AS PREPARED

The evidence presented in the Davis Hill charges conveyed the idea that Inspector Boyd, who had borne the major part of the investigations of these cases assisted by County Constables Moore, Bullied, Clements, and Detectives Newhall and Meagher all co-operating in one way or another, had skilfully woven an apparently strong case about Davis Hill. The herd of nine cattle that were driven past Stephen Collins' farm east of Trent Bridge on one of the first days of October seem to have been traced to Campbellford, thence to Toronto, on to St. Catharines where they changed hands, and their hides forwarded to a London tannery, where Inspector Boyd had them examined by Dummer farmers, and on the strength of their identification of the hides seized them.

Mr. Baskin Gets Half His Claim From Dummer For Road Building

Yesterday the case of Baskin vs. the Township of Dummer came before Judge Huycke at Norwood. The plaintiff was suing for the balance due him for building a road on the 10th line of Dummer. The Township disputed the claim on the ground that they had no right to enter into such a contract without a by-law, and that the road built was not of a sufficient height. The plaintiff, through their counsel, Mr. H. R. Armstrong, of Gordon and Widdifield, contended that there had been performance of the contract with acquiescence on the part of the Township so that they were stopped from repudiating the contract after obtaining the benefit of it, and further that no levels were delivered to Baskin, so that in building the road to meet the level of the adjacent road he completed his contract. The case was settled, the township paying half of the claim and their own costs. Mr. F. D. Kerr acted for the Township.

FIRST PROHIBITION ACT

SAXON KING EDGAR ORDERED PEOPLE TO BOARD THE WATER WAGGON

The first prohibitive measure was that of the Saxon King Edgar, who nearly a thousand years ago, on the advice of Dunstan, put down many ale-houses, only allowing one to exist in any village or small town, and at the same time limiting draughts of the drinkers. The common drinking cup of that day held about two quarts, and Edgar had eight pegs placed at stated intervals in each cup, heavy penalties being imposed on those who drank from one peg to another at each time. Neither the working nor the result of the act encouraged Edgar's successors to further action, and the next prohibitive legislation on the sale of liquor is due to Henry VII., who by an act against vagabonds and beggars in the year 1496, gave power to any two Justices of the Peace to stop the common selling of strong ale in towns and any other places they thought necessary.

Confusion Caused By Over-Addressing

Unnecessary Names on Parcels Give Postal Authorities Much Trouble.

Special care should be given to the addressing of parcels to soldiers overseas, as sometimes unnecessary names of places or ranks lead to confusion and give the military postal authorities no end of trouble. For instance, unnecessary mention of higher formations, such as brigades, divisions, etc., should be avoided, and, in fact, is forbidden. It causes much delay.

The following is the correct method of addressing mail to soldiers.

(a) Regimental number.
(b) Rank.
(c) Name.
(d) Squadron battery or company.
(e) Battalion regiment (or other unit), staff appointment or department.
(f) Canadian contingent.
(g) British Expeditionary Force.
(h) Army Post Office, London, England.

This Election Bet A Cause of Worry

Frank Priestland, the manager of the Royal Alexander Players, the company which is playing at the Grand this week, is losing a lot of much needed sleep over an election bet which was made by two members of his company and who insisted that he be the stakeholder.

Walter Clauton, who is well known to Peterborough, and Frank Hooper, another member of the company, became excited the other day while discussing the coming election and bet ten cents apiece on the candidates. The race is so close and so long in doubt that Frank is worrying for fear that both gamblers will be expecting interest on the money he is holding.

ROBBER IS SENTENCED

TWO COMPANIONS, DESERTERS, PLEADED GUILTY, BUT WANT TO RE-ENLIST.

Belleville, Nov. 8.—Isaac Sallych of this city was sentenced by Judge Deroche to three years in the penitentiary for breaking into and robbing Fitzgerald's general store at Malone, and stealing a horse, buggy and harness. He and two others, Thomas Smith and Isaac Wright, pleaded guilty to three charges. This was Sallych's second appearance before the judge. His companions are deserters from the 155th Battalion, now overseas, and were remanded until Nov. 16th in order to see if some battalion going overseas within a short time, will have them. Both desire to re-enlist. The trio were captured in a shanty in the woods near Marmora by Constables Soule and Barnes, after other constables excused themselves. It had been reported that the men were armed. No weapons were found on them.

CZAR WORKS HARDER THAN MILLIONAIRE; LIVES SIMPLE LIFE

Special Cable by William Philip Simms.

Imperial Headquarters, Russian Army, Nov. 8.—Czar Nicholas, ruler of Russia's millions and Commander-in-Chief of her armies, works harder than any millionaire in Wall street. He puts in more hours a day than American trade unions allow by just about as much again. And he lies down to sleep at night on a folding camp bed, hard and springless, made of canvas.

The Emperor was on his way to work walking through the rain when I saw him. He looks like his pictures except that he is quite brown from living much in the open.

He walks with an athletic swing. Life at the front seems to agree with him.

Every soldier within view stood at rigid salute as he approached in the doorway of the rather modest two-storey house where he had his quarters. The Czar responded. Stepping forward a few paces he shook hands with one of his officers and despite the drizzle stood in the open for about half a minute talking. He wore neither overcoat nor waterproof, being dressed simply in the regulation khaki and black boots.

He hurried on through the rain to the offices of the General Staff, a hundred yards away, followed by two aides-de-camp, and Joy, the Crown Prince's mongrel, which, not being interested in his master's English lesson going on inside, had come out to share honours with the Imperial suite.

In a minute, the Czar, in a room on the second floor of the Staff Headquarters, had settled down to work. Gen. Michel Alexieff, Chief of Staff, was making his daily report and getting his orders.

Nicholas II. rises shortly after 6 o'clock. At 9 he sits down to eggs, rolls and coffee. At 10 o'clock he goes to Staff Headquarters, and receives Gen. Alexieff's report, illustrated by maps and charts. By 12.30 p.m., the report is finished and the Emperor's orders for generals along the entire front are sent out by telegraph from an adjoining room.

THE CZAR'S LUNCHEON

Czar eats lunch at his own quarters A taste of hors d-oeuvres, an omelette, meat, dessert and coffee form his usual meal at this time of day, with a cigarette after the coffee. He does not smoke cigars. At lunch are the Crown Prince, two aides, the Governor of the Palace, a court functionary, the Imperial physician and usually a few guests, visiting Allied generals, Russian generals, at Headquarters, for the day, a Minister from Petrograd, perhaps, and rarely, Gen. Alexieff. This busy man does not feel he can spare an hour and a half a day over lunch.

BACK AT 6 O'CLOCK.

At about 3 o'clock the Czar motors to the country with the Crown Prince, the Crown Prince's dog, and usually two youngsters, pals of the future Emperor of Russia, chosen by himself from among the ordinary boys living near headquarters.

Once the town is left behind the Emperor gets out and walks, doing about five miles at a brisk pace. Sometimes he gets into an ordinary rowboat and pulls the oars himself. As Deo Derevenco, a giant sailor friend of the heir to the throne, is not infrequently a member of the party, it sometimes happens that an ordinary jack tar has the experience of being rowed by the Czar.

Spading sand along the river bank is another form of exercise sometimes enjoyed by the Emperor.

Six o'clock finds the Imperial Commander-in-Chief back at headquarters. He has had his exercise and now goes back to work. Generals from the front make their reports at this time of day and if there is to be a general military council, it is now that it takes place.

Ministers from Petrograd also report and receive instructions.

Dinner at eight. About the same people present. There is soup, fish, two meat dishes, salad, dessert and coffee. There is no vodka.

After dinner the Emperor retires to his private apartment. The Crown Prince goes to bed, where he never fails to get his goodnight kiss from his Emperor father. The Czar then sits in his study, going over the Ministerial reports which arrive daily from Petrograd. He stays at his desk until long after midnight, only stopping at about 11 o'clock for a glass or two of tea.

SLEEPS IN PLAIN ROOM

Nothing could be plainer than the Czar's bed chamber, where he and his son sleep. Between the two beds, against the wall, is a small night table and upon this are small frames, holding photographs of various members of the Imperial family. On the wall, over the table, are two or three more photographs and a couple of ikons.

A few arm-chairs, a small curtained book case and a musical instrument, half mandolin, half guitar, the property of the Crown Prince, are the other furnishings.

The floor is carpeted. In cold weather the room is heated by a fireplace with the great white-tiled box-like stove arrangement built in Russian style about it.

The lighting is done by electricity. The Emperor lives in the house of the District Governor, but he has only two rooms to himself; his study and the bed room which he shares with his heir.

Since assuming command of the army the Czar has visited and reviewed every corps from one end of the front to the other.

He goes to church every holiday and since there are more than 100 holidays in the Russian year he is at church at least once every three days.

Vincent Corkery Comes Home Before

Entering Upon "Life on the Ocean Wave: a Home on the Rolling Deep"

Mr. Vincent Corkery, who recently took service in the Royal Navy, is home for a visit. He will leave Peterborough for Halifax on Monday, and on Tuesday a.m. sail overseas and enter the first stage of "life on the ocean wave." He will take with him the warmest good wishes of the entire community, where he has spent the days of his boyhood.

At Parry Sound he was given a great "send off" previous to leaving for Peterborough. The parish of St. Peter, in charge of another Peterborough boy, Rev. Father P. J. Kelly; presented Mr. Corkery with a beautiful wrist watch, a purse of $25 in gold, and a complete kit of socks, handkerchiefs, etc., enough to last him, with care, till he becomes an admiral. Everybody gives him Godspeed and hopes he will reflect as high credit upon Canadian manhood, in the naval service, as he has done in the capacities of citizen and bank official.

ed a heavy shelling. Several shells burst overhead directly above Major Southam and Harvie, and they were instantly killed. It is safe to say that these two soldiers would have rather met their death manning the guns, but in their anxiety for the safety of their men both paid the supreme sacrifice. It is significant that Major Southam's death was reported nearly a month ago, while Norman Harvie's death was only recorded last Friday.

Among the returned soldiers who have reached Quebec are Pte. Harvey Tuckery and Pte. Harvey Borland, both members of the 93rd Battalion.

A cablegram has been received from Gunner Les Copp, announcing his safe arrival in England. Gunner Copp was a member of the 76th Battery.

Says He's Feeling Well And Falls Over Dead

Woodstock Man Expires When Preparing for Work

WOODSTOCK, Nov. 9 — Death came suddenly to Harry Elstone of this city Tuesday morning. About 5.30 o'clock, as he as about to get out of bed, his wife asked him how he felt. He replied: "Pretty good," and with this remark fell over on the bed and expired immediately. He was 46 years of age. He had complained lately of not feeling well, but had been able to attend to his work. He leaves a widow and five small children.

THIS TANK KILLED THREE HUNDRED HUNS

Huns Even Clambered on Steel Roof But Could Find No Opening.

"It seems impossible for Germany to place those British 'tanks' on a prohibitiou basis," remarks an American newspaper. And the military correspondent of The Manchester Guardian describes another of those astounding struggles between "treench dreadnoughts" and machine guns and men. We read:

"Tanks" loom up so large in many important battle adventures that their exploits deserve detailed description. At T ——— a tank stormed the chateau, the heart and centre of the fortified position; a second established itself in the centre of the ruins not far from the pond and became a stationery redoubt of immense value.

But the greatest tank story of the day concerns the capture of Gueudecourt—and it is so unusual that I give it precedence over the exploits at other points. For this tank killed 300 Germans who tried to storm it. The "land-ship" had assisted in "cleaning-up" Gueudecourt. Infantry followed its wake through the village, cheering mightily. The shallow cellar shelters held some 400 men who gladly gave themselves up. The business of Gueudecourt being finished the tank started on a tour of its own in the direction of a hostile trench beyond the town. Its egress was the sequel for other German refugees lurking in craters to signal their submission to the advancing monster. Majestically the "tank" wallowed forward amid the fluttering of none-too white handkerchiefs that dotted the field of shell holes and hastily scooped out one-man hiding places. For these isolated would-be prisoners the "tank" had neither time nor accommodation. Bigger game lurked in the ground ahead.

The Engine Stopped.

It ambled on its lonely advance toward a deep, broad fissure in the tumbled earth, which was the obvious lodging-place of many armed men. The "tank's" intention was to sit astride this trench and play its machine guns freely. But suddenly it halted, the engine stopped. Instantly the Germans swarmed out of the earth. They buzzed around the "tank" like bees. One must give them credit for unusual courage. Although the hidden batteries rained bullets at them they made a desperate attempt to storm the trawling fort, to pierce its hide with rifle fire, and to kill the crew within.

They might as well have attacked a battleship with spades. The machine guns whirred incessantly, and the pile of dead Germans grew steadily around the "tank", but still there were rushes by these foolish men. They clambered on the steel roof, they hoisted each other up in the hope of finding loop-holes or joints in the armor of the beast, some of them carried dead men on their shoulders before they themselves were killed by the hidden gunners. It was a fearful and indescribable sight, this futile combat of men with machinery. The "tank" fought stolidly. Inside the crew were filled with astonishment. Never in their wildest dreams had they conceived the possibility of Germans crowding forward to be killed. Never did gunners work their pieces more frantically. All they asked for was more Germans.

Didn't Need Rescuing.

The strange tumult drew the attention of infantry engaged in "cleaning up" odd corners in Gueudecourt. They ran to the rescue. Now the tank will tell you that it did not need rescuing. It was quite happy. But the infantry took a hand and beat the Germans off — rather what was left of them — and seized a few discouraged prisoners. The field of battle was thick with corpses. At least 300 Germans lay dead around the "tank." And the "tank" itself? The passing indisposition of the monster was attended to and its went its way. The crew came back to marvel at this inexplicable occurrence. We shall never know what sudden blind enthusiasm sent these Prussians mad, and caused them to fling away their lives as recklessly as any fanatics that ever lay down before the Juggernaut.

The Call is For Socks And Still More Socks

The following interesting letter from Capt. J. H. Burnham will have an appealing interest to the ladies who can knit socks. The only kind of "cold feet" Canadian soldiers might complain of would be caused by wintery weather in the trenches. Our ladies will doubtless see to it that this does not occur, as we all can do better and more effective work with warm feet than with cold.

West Sandling, Nov. 1, 1916.

Dear Mrs. Mowat,—The boys at the front need socks. The socks knitted by you people wear well. The government issue is warm, but they do not last nearly so long. See to it that the men of the 93rd are well provided for, and see to it that no one man gets all the good things from any source. It is a desperate business, because it would be impossible to displace the officers above the rank of Lieutenant at the front, with experience, such officers are left behind to do other work. It is reinforcements and junior officers that are needed. All the wounded from the front that I have met said: "Give us socks. We need several pairs so that we can keep our feet dry and avoid 'trench feet,' i.e., mortified and ruined feet.

With kind regards to the League,

Yours truly,
J. H. Burnham,

Wm. Hamilton Co. A Creditor to The Canadian Peat Co.

The Alfred peat plant and land in Prescott county, which has been in liquidation, with Mr. George Gladman, of the Wm. Hamilton Co. as liquidator, was sold on Saturday last to the following employees of the Ross Rifle Co., Quebec: Chas. D. MacFarlane, Walter A. Conner, Gordon Lee, Chas. N. Dawson, and Wm. Thoburn for $4,250.00. The plant originally cost about $40,000.00. The sale was made through Judge Hughes, Local Master of the Supreme Court of Ontario. The Wm. Hamilton Co. had been a $4,000 creditor of the Canadian Peat Company, Ltd., which previous to the war was making encouraging progress with their plant and process. Mr. Jos. Wearing acted as counsel for the liquidator.

Gunner Dick O'Brien Pays Tribute To Red Cross Workers

In a letter to a Peterborough friend Gunner Richard V. O'Brien, Ward 6, University College Hospital, London, pays a fine tribute to the work of the Red Cross as follows:

I am getting along fine here and expect to be sent to a convalescent home in a few days. This is my third day to be up and walking around with a cane. I used two canes until this morning when I gave one away as I can get along nearly as well with one, and don't appear such a helpless invalid as with two. I don't say by any means that it is a pleasant experience to get hit over there, but it doesn't do a fellow any harm to go through it if there are no serious results as it gives one a good idea of the way the Red Cross operates.

It was the night of the 25th of September and we knew that our infantry were going to take Thiepval early next morning. About thirty of us from the 5th Brigade were up a mile ahead of the guns preparing observation posts from which our fire could be directed after the enemy were forced to retire. We were just behind our front line and a lively artillery scrap was in progress. An occasional shell was dropping too close to be comfortable, but we were getting on with our work fairly well when one of our crowd was hit in the back with a piece of shell casing. We bandaged him up and made him comfortable as we could in a shell hole but he started to cough which told us that his lung was punctured. We put him on a piece of corrugated iron and started out with him for a dressing station. We hadn't gone far before a 5.9 exploded right beside us and got five of us. Although it was dark they must have known they had a target as they kept shelling us as hard as they could. We all got into a shell hole. I couldn't walk, of course, but I could creep without much trouble. Two of the fellows who weren't hurt went for help and stretchers and the rest of us dressed one another's wounds and smoked cigarettes till the Huns switched their fire and help got back to us. About two hours had passed. Then we were carried to the first field dressing station where a doctor gave us the once over and renewed our dressings. We were carried about a quarter of a mile and placed in an ambulance and driven about three miles to a second field ambulance where we were all again examined, had our wounds redressed, and were inoculated against lockjaw, blood poisoning, etc. As soon as a man is put on the operating table they decide whether or not he needs to be operated on immediately. If he does, they go at it. If not they dress the wounds again. I didn't need the operation so I was loaded into another ambulance along with three others and away we went on a sixteen mile cruise to the casualty clearing station. One of the fellows died in the ambulance, another would have died en route but they dropped him off at an emergency hospital where he died next morning so two of us completed the trip. It was just daylight in the morning when we got to the clearing station. I don't know what they did with the other fellow there, but I was dressed again and put to bed between real white sheets, the first I had seen since I left England. I slept for a couple of hours and was loaded on a Red Cross train for Boulogne. There they gave me an X-ray examination and removed the shrapnel. I stayed there three days and was put on an hospital ship for Dover. At Dover another hospital train for London and another ambulance from Charing Cross to the hospital. Once a chap gets to the first field dressing station his troubles are all over. There is always somebody else to take care of his troubles for him, and the Red Cross, beginning right with the stretcher bearers to the nurses in the hospitals certainly know how to take care of a fellow. No matter how tired a nurse or doctor may be as soon as a new patient is brought in you would think he was their own brother, the way they look after him.

PLAY BASEBALL IN AUSTRALIA

Baseball as she is spoken across the Pacific, while crude, conveys to America the fact that the national game of the United States is growing in popularity among the Australians.

A copy of the Sydney Argus, received a few days ago, has half a column of its space devoted to baseball games, the details of several contests being included.

If one is to take the word of the Argus writer for it, professional baseball in America and the amateur brand in Australia are widely separated.

"The Collingswood-Hawthorn game was a splendid fight for five innings," the Argus reporter writes and continues: "But Hawthorn's sixth brought five runs, and they won by ten runs to 6. Martin, the Hawthorn's pitcher, struck out fourteen batters and did some good hitting."

Speaking of another game, he says: "Richmond turned the tables on South Melbourne and won by 23 runs to 6. Anderson, the southern pitcher, ing affected his pitching. Brereton, head against the base and the shaking affected his pitching. Brereton, who had played a magnificent game at shortstop, took up the attack, but could not hold the Richmond batsmen, who accounted for twenty-three base hits, to which Eastman contributed four."

They have a league in Australia, for the Argus writer speaks of it in recounting a game between the Northcotes and the Y. M. C. A. He compares this contest with a cricket match. "Forty-three hits were made by one of the teams, forty-three runs made and thirty-six bases stolen. The opposing team failed to get a runner past second base, something of a tribute to the advance of the game.

Six Runs for Williamstown.

"Williamstown hit up six runs in their first inning," the Argus expert remarks of another contest. "The M. C. C. pitcher held the seasides comparatively quiet thereafter, as he struck out seven batsmen."

SENTIMENT IN GERMANY IS STRONGLY OPPOSED TO WILSON

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Herbert Bayard Swope, who recently returned from Germany, writes as follows in the World:

Throughout Germany to-day the hatred for America is bitter and deep. All the resentment, all the blind fury Germany once reserved for England alone has been expanded to include us.

The Germans have an outlet for their feelings against England—they express themselves on the battlefields and through the Zeppelins and submarines; but against America they lack a method of registering their enmity.

The chagrin and humiliation of their failure to end the war before now through victory are visited upon America. The failure gave birth to hatred. Throughout the length and breadth of Germany the belief is certain and unqualified that had it not been for American moral and physical help to the Allies the war would have been long since over. With magnificent disregard of the checks and reverses, both military and economic, Germany has suffered at the hands of the Allies, her sons, from top to bottom, say that only America is to blame for the fact that the war is now well into its third year, and the more pertinent fact that as time goes on the German chances are bound to grow less.

It is a common thing to hear in Germany that America has a secret alliance with England, under which she is operating now; it is even more of a commonplace to be told that America is deliberately seeking to prolong the war and circumvent peace for the "blood money" she is making out of the struggle.

SIX REASONS.

"Hate may have no boundaries, but it has beginnings, and it is not hard to classify the grounds from which the German hatred of America springs. There are five, possibly six. They are, as the Germans put them:

First—The supply of munitions to the Allies.

Second—The illegal blockade, for which we are responsible since we have not stopped it.

Third—The interference with neutral mails.

Fourth—The Allies' world-wide commercial blockade.

Fifth—The submarine doctrine we have compelled Germany to accept.

And the sixth may be one that is not so frequently expressed, but which is nevertheless a considerable factor—that America is out of the war and prospering; for what is more usual than for envy to breed hate?

Von Jagow, Chief Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and Zimmermann, the Chief Under Secretary, in discussing the American attitude, phrased the sentiments of their country when they said to me:

"The American neutrality toward Germany is one of the head; toward the Allies it is one of the heart. What America does for the Allies she does voluntarily and gladly—what she does for Germany she does because she must."

WOULD DEFY U. S.

There is a widespread and highly [illegible] agitation for the resumption of the Ruckschnitzen (ruthless) [illegible] type of warfare. throughout Germany to-day by [illegible] is bringing out how long he can re[illegible] can say. I left Ger[illegible] only peace [illegible] sumption. And [illegible] held by every [illegible] spoke, and I [illegible] Ambassador Gerard [illegible] so misjudging that it formed the principal cause of the Ambassador's return at this time so that he might report to Washington.

If it be impossible to indict a nation, it appears to be equally difficult to hate a whole nation without centering the hatred upon some one point or man. In the case of Germany, President Wilson personifies America, and so the German hatred is centred on Wilson.

It is a difficult thing for a neutral to be neutral in Germany to-day. The best friends of Germany must admit that her demands on one's sentiments are rather harsh. In Berlin anyone who is not outspokenly an advocate of German supremacy is gazed upon with coldness and suspicion.

WANTS AN ARMISTICE.

I can say on highest authority that Germany has been eager to have the President take some steps toward arranging, if nothing else, an armistice. But she has not yet shown a willingness to authorize such a proceeding officially. She wants the peace proposals brought to her; she will not go after them, not even to the extent of requesting the preliminary good offices of America. It is safe to say that no matter what indirect efforts she may employ in this connection, Washington will do nothing until a formal request has been made.

America's failure to have effected a peace before now has been more of a crime in German eyes than her own failure to have forced one through military conquests. That is another count in the indictment lodged against Wilson. That is another reason why Wilson's defeat on election day would be regarded as a gigantic German triumph. Every one I spoke to in Germany believes this.

It would be treated as a victory, not because the Germans feel there is a certainty that Hughes is the man the Germans want, but because there is a certainty that Wilson is the man the Germans don't want.

One distinguished member of the Foreign Office in Wilhelmstrasse, who is himself rather favourably disposed toward America and the Administration, interpreted the feeling of his nation in these words:

"If Germany was certain Hughes would be her enemy, still would she seek Wilson's destruction. 'Let us smash Wilson now,' the people say, 'and then if Hughes proves another Wilson we will smash him too in another four years.'"

WILL RESIDE IN PETERBOROUGH

MILLBROOK, Nov. 9.—The removal to Peterborough of Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Deyell was made the subject of a presentation that was held in Grace Church, Millbrook. The event took place in the Church on Thursday night last, when an address was read by Dr. Lee who also acted as chairman. Reeve Doak made the presentation of a suit case to Dr. Deyell, and a leather rocker to Mrs. Deyell. The former made a suitable reply. A pleasing programme was given of solos by Misses Laura Hunter, Jean Thorndyke and Kathleen Lancashire, the latter being encored. Rev. Dr. Lee also gave a reading, and speeches by Reeve Doak and Dr. Jemison and the chairman were also made, and altogether the departing guests were afforded a felicitous farewell. The address was couched in appreciative lines and the wish of their many friends here is that they may have many happy days in store in their future home in Peterborough.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—On behalf of some of the returned soldiers who took part in the funeral yesterday I would like to draw the attention of the party responsible for placing the returned soldiers, who were not in the firing party, behind the Collegiate Cadets in the procession. The boys felt their position very keenly, as I consider the returned soldiers' place was as near the casket as convenient, and not at the tail end of a lot of school boys. Any amount of people have expressed their views to me on the subject and I consider that it should be made public, and whoever is responsible for placing school boys before soldiers in a military funeral should feel ashamed of themselves.

Thanking you, Sir, for your kindness to the returned soldiers, which they appreciate very much, indeed, I remain,

Yours truly,
C. W. Stenson,
Secretary
Peterborough Returned Soldiers' Club
206 Wescott Street.

Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—I wish to make a few statements about our young men around this city. Why shouldn't our young men enlist is the question, because they are too careful of their precious selves. All they seem to think about are girls, shows, or pool rooms, or any kind of a hiding place. Maybe if every girl was to turn a few of the fellows down they would enlist. This is an example. A couple of young girls were walking down our main street the other night, and a bunch of fellows stood on a corner of Charlotte Street. These fellows passed a few remarks about these girls. Well, when the girls were on their way home they waited until the girls were on the side street, and then stepped up to them and said: "Good-night girls, wish for any company?" The girls turned around and said: "No, thanks. If you were in khaki and fighting for your King and country we might take you, but if we are not good enough to fight for we are not good enough to walk with." The fellows didn't know what to say; they just stood looking at them. Now, if every girl would do the same as these girls did, maybe we would get the 247th Battalion filled. Some fellows would rather be dressed in any other coloured suit but the right colour. They can get the best made suit in Canada for nothing. But, no, they would rather see their pals go and fight for them and get shot and wounded while they are jumping into their positions.

Boys, if you have any heart at all, get out and show your pluck if you have any, and protect your mother, father, and sweethearts. They will think more of you after than before. Take, for instance, those boys that are dressed in evening suits and spotted vests and those dressed in khaki, spotted with mud. Which will get most honour after the war? Well, boys, don't worry about your sweethearts; they will think more of you after the war, at least if they are anything of girls. You will think this is put in by a soldier, but it is not. This is made up by girls who have fathers, brothers, and sweethearts at the front, and would turn down every slacker that stepped up to us. Well, we would rather see our friends die as heroes than living cowards. There are men that go and try but get rejected. These men did their part.

Well, we only wish [illegible] except a few of us girls. I bet there would be more girls than fellows that would go and enlist. Let everybody go that is old enough and get this 247th Battalion ready by spring.

"Four Girls."

P.S.—Would you kindly put this in the Examiner.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Please give me a space in your valuable paper, as I wish to say a few words. I noticed at Lieut. Ackerman's funeral, that the returned soldiers were at the last of the parade. That is to say the cadets were ahead of them.

Why is it so? Are they better than the returned soldiers, who have shed their blood for us? Why should Peterborough soldiers be treated like this? It is enough to stop men from enlisting. There were many who noticed this also.

Yours truly,

Carrigan Refuses to Lead Red Sox Again

NO AMOUNT OF PERSUASION WILL INDUCE HIM TO RE-ENTER BASEBALL.

Lewiston, Me., November 6.—Bill Carrigan, last year's Red Sox Captain, declared that he will not yield to the appeal of the Boston American League Club's new owners — Harry Frazee and Hugh Ward—to manage the team next season.

"I'm through with baseball forever," he said. "I announced before the close of the American League season that I would retire after the world's series, and what I said goes. I am satisfied down here in the Pine tree state where I have many things to look after. If I was again in charge of the Red Sox these important matters would be neglected so I prefer to stay right where I am at present."

Carrigan is interested in one of the Lewiston banks and real estate.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

To prove the Merits of this great Food Cure full size 50 cent Boxes will be given away from the office of this paper on the date mentioned below.

This will be the most generous distribution of Dr. Chase's medicines that was ever made, for in addition to the full size box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, each caller will be presented with a sample box of Dr. Chase's Ointment and a paper covered copy of Dr. Chase's Recipes, containing 1000 recipes selected from the large Receipt Book.

Not a Cent will be Expected.

We have such confidence in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a means of forming new rich blood and building up the system that we have decided to give everybody an opportunity to test it at our expense. For men, women and children who are pale, weak, nervous and run down, there is nothing like this great restorative to put new energy and vigor into the system and overcome headaches, sleeplessness and all the symptoms accompanying nervous breakdown.

This liberal offer will not be repeated, however, so you will please make note of the time and place. Positively no medicines will be given to children.

Call at the Examiner Office To-morrow, Friday, November 10th, and ask for Mr. S. S. Holmes, representing the Company.

WEDDING BELLS

ARCHER—MAYBEE.

Last evening in the Parsonage of George Street Methodist Church, Mrs. Nettie Winnifred Maybee of Campbell ford was united in marriage to Mr. Joshua Archer of the Township of Seymour. The couple, who were unattended, will reside in Seymour Township. Rev. R. G. Peever performed the ceremony.

KEELAN—WALSH.

The Manitoba Free Press says:

A quiet wedding was solemnized this morning at 6.30 o'clock, at St Mary's church, when Miss Helen Walsh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Walsh, of Indian River, Ontario, became the wife of Mr. Wm. H. Keelan, manager of the Northern Crown Bank at Pipestone, Man., and son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Keelan, of Mildmay, Ont. The nuptial mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father O'Donnell. The bride, entering the church on the arm of her brother, Mr. T. Walsh, of Kenora, to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Alice M. Doyle, looked charming in a travelling suit of plum coloured broadcloth, the coat trimmed with sable and opening on a dainty blouse of white georgette crepe. She wore a black picture hat with top of silver cloth. Her corsage bouquet was of pink roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Miss Lena Wedge acted as bridesmaid, while the groom was supported by his brother, Mr. John Keelan.

After the wedding ceremony the happy couple left on an extended trip to Chicago and other points south.

HEFFERNAN—BURNS.

St. Mary's church, Grafton was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Tuesday, November 7th, when Miss Julia A Burns, daughter of John Burns of Haldimand was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Thomas J. Heffernan, of Otonabee. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Scanlon. The bride looked very pretty in her tailored suit of navy blue Gabardine whip cord with hat to match. The bride was assisted by her sister, Margaret who was similarly attired. The groom was ably supported by his brother, James after the ceremony, a dainty wedding break fast was served at the home of the bride's father.

In the evening the bride and groom motored to their new home in Otonabee in which a large circle of friends join in wishing them a long and happy wedded life. They received many beautiful and costly presents, showing the high esteem in which they are held among them being one hundred dollars from the bride's father.

McCRAE—DAVIS.

The wedding took place in Swift Current, Sask., on Friday, Nov. 3, of Miss Lottie Anne Davis, daughter of Mr. Robert E. Davis, 234 Murray street, Peterborough, to Mr. George McCrae, druggist, of Swift Current. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. Speller of the Swift Current Baptist church. Mr. and Mrs. McCrae will reside in Swift Current.

OBITUARY

RICHARD LILLICO.

This morning, death claimed one of the oldest and highly respected residents of North Monaghan, in the person of Richard Lillico, following an illness extending over one week. The late Mr. Lillico was seventy-six years of age. He was born in North Monaghan and was an agriculturalist by occupation. Death took place on the homestead which is situated on the Twelfth Concession of North Monaghan.

Besides a sorrowing wife, five sons and two daughters survive, namely, Archibald, Torrance and Norman of North Monaghan, William of Toronto, and J. E. Lillico, the well-known grocer, of Peterborough. The daughters are Isabel Lillico of Cleveland, and Mrs. B. L. Tully of Smith Township. Two brothers and three sisters also survive, namely, Donald of Toronto, and Archibald of Chesley, Ont. The sisters are, Mrs. Joseph Foster and Mrs. William Fowler of Peterborough, also Mrs. A. McGregor of Manitoba.

The late Mr. Lillico was a member of Trinity Methodist Church.

The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at two-thirty o'clock from the family residence, Lot 4, Concession 13, North Monaghan, to Little Lake cemetery.

USED CROSS-CUT SAW TO DISPOSE OF BODY

Foreigner in Herkimer County Confesses to Brutal Crime—Pleads Extenuating Circumstances.

LITTLE FALLS, N.Y., Nov. 9.—According to the police and County Prosecutor Ward, Mike Masco and his wife confessed to one of the most brutal murders ever committed in Herkimer County. A few days ago the body of Rosolino Ciprotti was found horribly cut up and mutilated in a local swamp. Identification was quickly made. Late yesterday afternoon suspicion pointed to Masco at whose home Rosolino formerly boarded. It was reported that Mike accused Rosolino of being unduly familiar with his wife. A saw five feet long covered with blood and several butcher knives were found when the police searched the house. Elizabeth Masco, their daughter, identified the trunk. The rope around it was the same kind as some found in a coil at the Masco home. These facts presented this morning to the wife led to a confession. When she confronted her husband he also admitted his part in the crime. Masco told officials, in presence of the district attorney, that he found Ciprotti and his wife together last Thursday and shot the man. Then he dragged the body into the cellar and with a cross-cut saw, his wife holding one end they cut the victim up. He then wheeled the body to the dump in a wheelbarrow.

A charge of murder will be made against the couple. The wife claims her husband threatened her with death unless she helped cut up Ciprotti.

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, Nov. 9.—This Government will not recede one iota from its position as recorded in recent temperance legislation, now effective all over the Province. If anything certain, clauses of bill may be made stronger. This assurance was given by Premier Hearst to-day to a deputation of Reeves from the vicinity of Hamilton, who waited upon him with a congratulatory resolution on the workings of prohibition in Ontario.

Belmont Domestic is Heiress to Large Estate

Miss Haynes Receives Word of Uncle's Death and Her Legacy.

BELMONT, Nov. 9.—Miss Elizabeth M. Haynes, who is at present employed by Daniel McLarty, of this village, is only waiting until she comes of age on April 10th next, to lay claim to a half share of a large estate left by her uncle, William Haynes, in Australia.

Miss Haynes came to Canada from Wensbury, England, two years ago, and was employed by Mr. McLarty. She had at that time an idea that she might profit financially in the death of this uncle, but was not certain. Recently the uncle died and Miss Haynes and her sister in England are the sole heiresses to what is said to be a very large estate. In actual cash there is only about £400, or $2,000, but there is much real estate and there are also three residences. This property will all be sold, and the proceeds divided between the two girls.

Miss Haynes has not fully decided as to her future movements, but may go back to England after the war ends.

Serious Charge

Converting Bank Shares Into Cash With Loan Against Them.

GALT, Nov. 9.— Magistrate Blake sent H. W. D. Brown up for trial before the session at Kitchener on the serious charge of having converted 28 shares of Union Bank stock into cash, on which he had already received a loan from Benjamin Hobson, a farmer of Beverly Township, and who was the complainant in the case.

Only sufficient evidence for a committal was given. The accused was defended by M. A. Secord, K.C., of this city, while J. H. Hancock, also of Galt, conducted the case for the crown.

BERNSTORFF MAY NOW BE REMOVED FROM WASHINGTON

CRISIS IS IMMINENT

Prussians Decide to Ignore Laws and Rules and Renew Their "Frightful" Sea War—No More Notes Will Be Sent to Germany No Matter What May Be the Outcome

WILL DISMISS BERNSTORFF

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10—Bernstorff's Departure in the Near Future is the Belief Here.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—With the elections over, it seems probable that the American nation in a few days will awaken to the fact that the submarine issue with Germany has reached its most acute and perhaps its final stage. Two important facts stand out prominently to-night, namely:

The State Department has received information indicating that the Prussians have inaugurated a change in their submarine policy and have decided to adhere no longer to the rules of international warfare in the conduct of their submarines, regardless of promises to the United States.

From a high authority it is learned that President Wilson has made up his mind not to send any more notes to Germany on the submarine issue, and that, if it should develop that recent cases, such as the torpedoing of the Arabia without warning, are in violation of the laws of cruiser warfare and of the Prussian promise to this country, the next step will be the dismissal from Washington of Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, and the formal recall of Mr. Gerard, American Ambassador to Berlin.

President Wilson informed Congress in the midst of the last submarine crisis that unless the Prussian submarines conformed to the laws of the nations of the nations and of humanity he would feel compelled to sever diplomatic relations with the German government entirely. The Herald is informed that Mr. Wilson never for a minute has lost sight of this possibility and that his mind is fully made up to act in this regard if unlawful submarine warfare is renewed.

The President to be Firm.

There is a feeling among democrats close to the White House that Mr. Wilson will act with less hesitation in dealing with Germany or any other foreign Power if he is re-elected to office, as now seems likely. They say he will regard re-election by the people as an indorsement not only of his efforts to keep this country honourably at peace, but also of his firm stand toward Germany as expressed in his numerous notes, and in his memorable message to Congress in which he threatened an open break with the Prussians.

The State Department to-day declined to discuss for publication any phase of the international issues now facing the United States. It is known,

THE NEW XMAS WAISTS

If you wear a separate skirt or suit, a separate waist is absolutely essential—and not only essential but much desired, for the new Christmas Waists are particularly smart and attractive.

The waists are of Georgette Crepe, Crepe de Chine, Ninon, and all the other new Fall materials.

The waists of Georgette Crepe — no matter how simple the design—lend a note of dressiness to any woman's attire, while those of silk and other materials, have many new style touches that appeal at once.

Prices range from 98c for white Batiste to $10.00 for waists of superior of Georgette Crepe, in the most elaborate designs combined with handwork.

Dressy Waists at $2.95 and $3.75

Dozens of them. In the best styles of the season, notwithstanding the scarcity of materials. We can show you beautiful Fall blouses, in the newer styles, at these prices.

Exceptional values.

STOCKINGS

There is Satisfaction and Safety in Buying Stockings at This Store

The great demand for goods of all kinds in every part of the country and the scarcity of raw materials have not only forced prices up, but in some cases, have been the means of forcing qualities down. We want to emphasize very, very forcibly—that every pair of stockings in this store is of dependable quality, dyed with the best dyes, and are of such qualities that will give absolutely satisfactory service. In every instance, prices are low, and in many cases lower than you will usually see them. Just this week we are running off a case of 1,150 pairs of ladies' cashmere stockings. These are sold almost everywhere for 75c. Our price this week is just 59c.

900 pairs of heavy silk fleeced hose. Ladies' sizes, for 19c.

And too, we want to add one more dominating feature in our underwear stock. You will find a full and complete range of qualities and sizes. The woman desiring to purchase underwear, that will give satisfactory service to herself and children, will find it advisable to make a list of her needs and allow our salespeople to show her just the kind of underwear wanted, in the very quality desired, and at the price she expects to pay.

We have forty-three different kinds of underwear. You would be wearied were we to list them all.

But here are two or three startlers.

Winter weight ladies' vests and drawers, either in white or grey, at 25c. Special quality at 29c.

500 vests and drawers in warm soft grey yarns, usually sold for 69c. Special this week for 50c each, or per suit 90c.

Women in Search of a NEW WINTER HAT

Can Purchase Now at a Decided Saving

The mere announcement that we've lowered prices on our millinery stock, will be sufficient reason for a woman in search of an attractive becoming Fall model to visit the store at once.

The hats are the styles which have been in demand all season.

We are simply following our usual custom of disposing of our millinery at this season at considerably less than the regular prices. Inasmuch as this reduction affects so many styles, among them are the fine velvets, fur-trimmed, etc., etc.

If you are in search of a hat at any price, you will find it to your advantage to visit our store early and make a selection at once. You can now purchase a hat at less than the trimming would cost.

Our Stock of Knitting Yarns is Splendidly Assorted

We have the real old good qualities at less prices than you will usually see. Because we ordered them long ago. . Lady Betty Fleecy Wool, Ivorine Wool, Saxony Wool, Scotch Fingering Wool. We still have a stock of the real Beehive Fingering Wools, in black, white and shades.

We are prepared to quote special prices on quantities of Scotch Fingering Wools.

We have forty-seven different kinds of wools and many hundreds of shades. Don't you think that with all these wools we can serve your wants.

You Are Invited to Inspect These Skirts of Superior Value at $2.75 to $10.00

We've centered our efforts largely to provide superior skirts at these prices, because we are determined that this store shall continue to be known as offering to women the best qualities and most up-to-date styles in separate dress skirts. We have all sizes for slender, medium and plump figures.

Drop in next time you are down town and see what real good skirts can be purchased here at this cost.

The Art Needle Work Section Offers So Many Suggestions for Pretty Things for Xmas Gifts

You should visit it every time you are in the store. Already we are having calls for fancy work for Christmas gifts. The woman who loves to make something odd and pretty for a Christmas gift has learned, from past experiences, that she cannot begin this work too early. Beginning now means you will have ample time to make up any piece desired and without giving you any uneasiness as to whether it will be finished in time for Christmas.

Fresh Shipment of Fall Coats at $24.50

The styles are absolutely new, individual and are copies of the most expensive models. The important feature of the new coats is that they all have the big, new collars. They are lined and interlined.

Splendid Coats for Utility Wear at $18.50

Made of strong-wearing tweeds and mixtures. Just the kind of materials that wear several seasons if necessary. The style is a full-flaring model that one can slip on quickly and always look dressed in. Quite a number of styles to choose from. Some are lined.

In Our Infants Department We Have Everything an Infant Wears.

Don't worry about the little people's wardrobe. We can supply all the baby's needs. Little wool coats, barrow-coats, skirts, cashmere robes, dainty headwear, shawls, carriage robes, stockings in all shades, little mittens, bootees, bibs, Stork pants, rubber sheeting, cumfie waists, dolls.

We have everything a baby needs.

Our Children's Dress Stock Was Never Better Assorted

Serge dress goods as we all know has gone soaring in price. You will wonder at it, but we have pretty up-to-date dresses, just hot from the manufacturers' presses at lower prices than ever.

The style is A1, and the material all-wool nicely trimmed with silk. We have these smart little dresses to fit girls from 4 years to 14 years at $3.45.

And we have a lot of real swell dresses running a little higher in price.

LEAD IS INCREASED

President Wilson's Election is Practically Assured—Carried California and Had Three Votes to Spare May Be a Recount in Four States

THE SENATE VOTE

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Wilson carried California and is re-elected with three votes to spare. Total electoral vote, Wilson 280, Hughes 243. There is likely to be a recount in four States. California's entire vote had not been counted up to 8 o'clock today, but Wilson's lead is so commanding that it appeared that no matter what the result in the few remaining precincts, he would have a clear plurality over Hughes.

There remained the possibility of a division of the States with an electoral vote of thirteen. Republican headquarters still held out to-day without conceding Wilson's election. National Chairman Willcox announced his determination to press for a recount in four of the doubtful States —California, New Hampshire, New Mexico and North Dakota. Minnesota may be added later to this list. The same incomplete returns which apparently showed election of the national democratic ticket also indicated to-day that President Wilson will have a safe majority in the Senate, but an exceedingly close one in the House.

The prefect took this between his fingers and gave a gentle pull. Immediately a section of the milled edge of the coin turned outward, revealing a tiny flat cavity within, of no greater thickness than the blade of a knife. In this cavity lay what appeared to be a bit of soiled paper.

With trembling fingers Lefevre drew out the scrap of paper and unfolded it. It was extremely thin, and when unfolded formed a sheet about the size of an ordinary five-franc note.

The prefect glanced at the engraving which covered its surface, smiled, then handed it to the young French girl. "Here is your fortune, mademoiselle," he said.

She looked at it, astonished. "What is it?" she asked uncertainly.

"A bank-note of the French empire," he replied, "for the sum of one million francs."

It took the little party several minutes to fully comprehend the importance of the scrap of paper which lay before them. At last Mr. Morris spoke.

"It seems to be genuine enough," he said, "but how the devil did it get there, inside that coin, and why?"

The prefect smiled. "I will tell you," he said. "I learned the history of the coin while in Paris last week.

"During the early period of the Emperor Napoleon's reign he had, as every one knows, a constant need for money, with which to prosecute his various and colossal campaigns.

"From time to time issues of coins of various denominations, as well as bank notes, were made, but there were many who distrusted Napoleon's success, and the issues were not always received with favour.

"In order to create a popular coinage some of his ministers conceived the idea of issuing a large number of one-franc-pieces, in one of which should be, cleverly concealed, a bank-note of the denomination of one-million francs.

"A coin was selected at random, and a clever watchmaker was employed to make within it the secret cavity in which the note was placed. Lead was introduced in the interior of the coin so as to bring its weight up to the standard. The bank note was then introduced and the coin thrown in with many millions of similar coins in circulation.

"There was nothing about it to identify it. The watchmaker alone knew that by pressing a pin into the eye of the head, as I have done, the lever would be thrown out. And it was manifestly impossible for this poor watchmaker to test even the smallest fraction of the hundred million francs which made up the issue.

"The experiment was a huge success, yet, up to now, it cost the government nothing. Everybody scrambled to get the new coins— a great many were destroyed in fruitless efforts to find the bank-note, but it was never found. At last people forgot about it, and perferred to keep their franc-pieces rather than destroy their value by cutting them up, searching for a fortune, which the majority of them had come to look upon as mythical.

"Only by the luckiest of chances could it have been discovered, and that chance, Mlle. Mercier, fell to the lot of your father. I congratulate you and would suggest that my good friend, Mr. Morris, will doubtless be very glad to take charge of your little fortune for you, arrange for its payment by the government, and invest it for you in such ways as his judgment may indicate."

"By all means!" exclaimed the banker. "I shall be only too glad to serve Mlle. Mercier."

The others crowded around her, offering their congratulations.

"I thank you, M. Lefevre," Mr. Germaine said "on behalf of the Trans-atlantic Line for your remarkable solution of this most mysterious affair. You may name your own terms, as I before said."

The prefect laughed. "I make no charges, monsieur," he said. "I have enjoyed the whole matter hugely. Besides, it has enabled me to win a little bet."

"A bet?" Mr. Germaine and the others looked at him in astonishment. "How so?"

"I will tell you. When I arrived here from Paris some three weeks ago, I was quite worn out and not at all well. My physicians had induced me to take a vacation. I came to America to make a long promised visit to my friend, Mr. Richard Duvall.

"The White Flour Pinch"—have you felt it? With the advancing price of wheat "the seven-cent loaf is doomed," say the bakers. In its place we have the eight-cent loaf—in many cities only the sixteen-cent loaf. A loaf of white flour bread is not a complete ration. However wholesome and pure, it does not supply all the proteids the human body needs. In Shredded Wheat Biscuit you have all the body-building nutriment in the whole wheat grain prepared in a digestible form. It is always the same price, always the same high quality. Eat it for breakfast with milk or cream or with fruits.

Made in Canada

Nothing could have induced me to undertake the case which caused you and the officials of your line such concern.

"It was suggested, however, by Mr. Morris, I think, that Mr. Duvall might be willing to undertake the case. This, however, did not meet with your approval; in fact, there were some suggestions made that the case was quite beyond Mr. Duvall's ability.

"This naturally made my friend angry. He himself had no desire to undertake the case having withdrawn from the active practice of his profession, but these reflections upon his skill annoyed him. He announced to me that he intended to take up the matter on my behalf, and, in fact, in my person. I told him I had no objections, but doubted that he could carry the deception through successfully. In fact, we made a wager upon the results."

The prefect paused.

"But," said Mr. Germaine doubtfully, "so far as I can see, he failed utterly. In all that you have told us I do not see that Mr. Duvall has been in the least concerned."

"That gentleman," remarked the prefect, "only shows how successfully he accomplished his purpose. In order to demonstrate to you my meaning, allow me to make a trifling change in my make-up."

He raised his hand to his face, calmly removed his pointed gray moustache and imperial, took off his wig and laughed.

"Duvall!" exclaimed Mr. Germaine stepping suddenly backward. "It's not possible!"

"Well—I'm damned!" exclaimed Barnes, in his surprise almost swallowing the quid of tobacco that he was chewing.

"Sacre mon de Dieu!" gasped Captain Bonnot. "Seems I was right, after all."

"You, Captain Bonnot," said Duvall "were the only one who even temporarily penetrated my disguise, and you have the woman who was with Vernon to thank for that."

"And where, may I ask, is M. Lefevre?" asked the astounded managing director as soon as he could collect his wits.

"He has been enjoying the galeties of my place at Newport for the past three weeks," replied Mr. Morris. "I understand he is to spend the next three with Mr. Duvall."

CHAPTER XXII.

Duvall Pays a Bet.

The bet that M. Lefevre made with his friend Richard Duvall, was this. If he won in his contention that Duvall would be unable to carry out his impersonation of himself without detection the latter was to furnish him with a drink which should make all the concoctions of the famous cafes of Paris seem insipid and worthless.

Duvall insisted that the prefect had won, since his disguise had been penetrated aboard the Richelieu. The prefect demurred to this, but his host insisted. As Duvall said, he had not carried through the deception successfully. He had, in fact, been discovered, and for that reason he insisted upon paying the bet.

They had arrived in Washington, a merry party, the evening before, and had made the twenty-mile run out to Duvall's country place in the latter's touring-car.

Now after a comfortable night's rest, M. Lefevre sat on his host's broad verandah, his eyes straying appreciatively over the wide expanse of lawn, the clumps of hydrangea bushes, with their pink and blue blooms, down to the twenty acres of splendid-looking corn, beyond which spread a sloping green pasture dotted with grazing cows.

To the left were the orchards loaded with pears, apples, and peaches, the vegetable gardens, the fields of rye and wheat. It was a beautiful sight on this late August morning, and in spite of the heat the prefect was enjoying himself hugely.

"Now for the ambrosia," remarked Duvall as he came out of the house, followed by a darky carrying a tray upon which were decanters, crushed ice, tall glasses, sugar, and a little glass bowl containing a quantity of a green herb unfamiliar in appearance to the prefect.

"Mon Dieu! In this drink of the gods, my dear Duvall, you require, it seems, a variety of ingredients."

"Ah, monsieur, but such ingredients!" Duvall took up a sprig of the herb and smelled it, smiling, then twisted it slightly and dropped it into a glass.

"I am certain that when you have once tasted this drink you will long for it all the rest of your life."

"Stop your nonsense, Richard," said Grace, "and fix M. Lefevre his drink. It's hot, and I'm sure he's very thirsty."

Duvall went on with his preparations. "Such drinks as this," he said, "cannot be hurried in the making." He was carefully measuring out the proportions of liquor in a small glass.

"I declare, my friend," said the prefect, "that you use as much caution as though you were preparing a dose of medicine. My curiosity is aroused. What is the name of this concoction?"

"I will tell you that, Lefevre, after you have tasted it. But remember—you can have but one, although I know you will want a dozen."

"Richard! How can you!" laughed Grace.

"I know the prefect to be a connoisseur, it could not be otherwise. Here."

He handed Lefevre a tall glass, frosted on the outside until it was white with snowy particles, and crowned with a bunch of green leaves. "Drink that, mon ami, and know that you have not lived in vain."

The prefect took a sip. Then another. Then, with the air of a man who is performing a sacred rite, he slowly drained the glass.

"I do not need to have you tell me the name," he said solemnly. "It is the nectar of the gods."

Duvall laughed heartily.

"I thought you'd like it," he said. "And you are really satisfied with the way I handled that case, in spite of the fact that that idiot Bonnot found me out?"

"My dear Duvall," laughed the prefect, "you are becoming altogether too conceited. Permit me to say that I am entirely satisfied with the way in which my dear Grace, assisted—I pay assisted, mind you—by you, handled the case; and I drink to her good health and prosperity with all my heart, and hope that her honeymoon may continue, unbroken, as long as you both live."

"Amen!" said Duvall, putting down his glass and patting his wife fondly on the cheek.

"She's a better and cleverer detective than I ever thought of being. Come, Lefevre, get your hat, I want to show you my prize cows."

THE END.

PRUSSIANS DEMORALIZED.

Verdun is the Grave of Germany's Military Power.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The first civilian to enter Fort Vaux after its recapture by the French was an American, Mr. Whitney Warren. The fort was reoccupied on Friday afternoon. Mr. Warren was at Bar le Duc. He automobiled to headquarters and obtained authorization from General Nivelle to go to Fort Vaux.

He returned to Paris that evening and informed the European edition of the Herald that, though the outworks are demolished, the fort itself is as solid as a rock and forms a valuable leverage point for French operations.

The entire Douaumont-Vaux battlefield of some eighteen square kilometres resembles a lunar landscape, honeycombed with craters caused by shell explosions.

Mr. Warren says the spirit of the French troops is grand and irresistible. The Prussians are demoralized. The prisoners he met were dazed, dejected and unnerved by the bombardment. He saw eighteen captured in an outpost at Damlop by a patrol. Eight of them surrendered without even a show of fight. They told the patrol they were waiting to be relieved. A few minutes later a relief detachment of ten arrived and promptly surrendered also.

Mr. Warren is enthusiastic over the victory. He says the Prussians' assertion that they voluntarily evacuated the fort is sheer bluff for American consumption. The Prussians were swept out by French guns.

"Verdun is the grave of Prussians military power. Half a million men," says Mr. Warren, "is the price the German nation has paid for the oak leaves conferred on the Crown Prince by William the Baby Killer."

When the Back is Lame

IT IS A SIGN OF

KIDNEY TROUBLE

Backache is the signal sent out by the kidneys the minute they become overtaxed.

Those who heed the warning when it first comes, usually have but little trouble. The danger lies in delay. You can cure the lame, aching back by curing the aching kidneys beneath—for it is really the kidneys aching and not the back.

Doan's Kidney Pills are a special remedy in kidney and bladder troubles only, they are not a "cure all."

Mrs. Wm. Traverse, Campbellton, N.B., writes: "It is my pleasure to write you in regard to your Doan's Kidney Pills. I have been using them for kidney trouble which used to affect my back so I could hardly bend down, nor could I lift anything. I learned about your pills from your B.B.B. Almanac, so I began using them, and in no time I was completely cured. I give all the praise in the world to Doan's Kidney Pills and always recommend them to my friends."

When asking for Doan's Pills always see that you get the oblong grey box with the trade mark of a "Maple Leaf."

IF

Michael Angelo lived today and said that a certain printing process reproduced his art better than any other, you'd believe him—because Angelo was the greatest painter of his time.

IF Napoleon had said that a certain cannon was the finest type of artillery, you would also have believed this without question—because Napoleon was the greatest soldier of his time.

IF The world's greatest living artists were to tell you a certain sound-reproduding instrument gave the most accurate and faithful replicas of their voices, you'd believe them too, wouldn't you.

THEY DO!!!

Enrico Caruso says

I am indeed satisfied with my new Victor records. They are magnificent and I congratulate you on the superb reproduction which the Victrola gives them.

Madame Melba says

I wish you to know that I am more than delighted with my new Victor records. They are wonderful and reproduce with that perfection which is only possible with the Victrola.

John McCormack says:

The Victrola alone of all talking instruments achieves a perfect reproduction of the artist's voice. You may be sure of it that I would not have engaged to make Victor Records exclusively till 1930 unless I was entirely satisfied that the instrument reproducing them was the very best.

Louise Homer says

The fidelity with which the quality of tone of each artist is reproduced by Victor Records as played on the Victrola is almost startling.

Antonio Scotti says

Never had I imagined that a talking machine could give such perfect results as the Victrola.

Modern Norway Land of Progress

COUNTRY TEEMS WITH STORIES OF SEAFARING RICHES SUDDENLY ACQUIRED — ANCIENT CRAFT AS ARGOSIES

By Henrik Willem Van Loon.

Christiania, November 4.—If the people of New York City suddenly should decide to move to Norway, there would not be houses enough for them in the entire country. There are less than 2,500,000 inhabitants in this rocky western part of the great Scandinavian peninsula. The national capital has not more than 250,000 The second city of the land, Bergen, has 80,000. The third city, Trondhjem, situated in the north, has 59,000 All the other towns are small, pleasant little provincial centres, inhabited by a democratic people who go their own way and take little interest in the policeman's request to "keep to the right."

Indeed those lovers of a pure democracy who want to revive the days of their youth, long before the introduction of traffic regulations, will do well to visit this excellent city of Christiania. If they survive the intricate mass of carriages, irresponsible automobiles, street cars (manned by women for lack of men who have all gone to Wisconsin and Minnesota) and nondescript vehicles from the country districts, they can write an epic upon organised disorder.

That, however, is a mere detail, and I should be the last to complain. Often have I landed in the town of New York (per Hoboken) and every time have I been obliged to drop my nickels in the gaping money boxes of Mr. Theodore Shonts. Three hours after arrival in Christiania the special correspondent of the Times was honored with a pass for the municipal electric cars. What greater hospitality could any city show? I am duly grateful and in exchange I predict a great future for this little city tucked away along the shores of the most magnificent harbor any near by hilltop ever revealed.

RENASCENCE OF NORWAY

"I use the word "future" advisedly. At the present moment Christiania has little to recommend itself to the fastidious traveller. And no wonder. The brother of the King of Denmark, when he accepted the throne of the newly created Kingdom of Norway in 1905, took the title of Haakon VII His name was Charles, a perfectly good name. But the people of Norway wanted to show that their country was a direct continuation of that Norwegian kingdom which had played such a great part in the early Middle Ages. Hence they revived a famous name. It had been borne by the most powerful of their former rulers, Haagen, the Old, who lived and died in the thirteenth century, and who I am informed, lies buried in that cathedral of Kirkwall which we were allowed to see in the hazy distance. Kindly remember that this brings our history back to a period several centuries before America was discovered.

Norway then passed through a complicated series of international adventures. A hundred years later it became a dependency of Denmark. After four more centuries it came to be the minor partner in an unpopular union with Sweden. Finally, a few years ago the country had the courage of its convictions and openly proclaimed its desire to manage its own affairs. After half a thousand years and without war, revolution, or the shedding of a single drop of blood, without even the causing of bad feeling on the part of her former master, Norway once more entered the ranks of the independent nations of the world.

Norway assumed her part of the large common debt which the dual kingdom of Norway and Sweden had contracted during the last century She organized her railroads and her telegraphs and her Postal Service and these produced a small but regular revenue. She gave the right of suffrage to practically all her citizens — both sexes. She made the accumulation of large wealth more or less unpopular by the introduction of an income tax which forces anybody who is afflicted with $10,000 annual revenue to render one-quarter thereof into the Treasury

She continued the fight against drink, waged for half a century and greatly reduced the per liter per head which had once been a national disgrace She established a good consular service, encouraged co-operative banking and selling and buying among the farmers. She reduced the percentage of infant mortality. Finally, in 1914, she passed a drastic bill defining and protecting the rights of illegitimate children.

A SUBSTANTIAL PEOPLE.

In short, Norway, since her re-establishment as an independent kingdom, has played an honourable and important role as one of the most advanced of our modern socialised nations. Her credit is good. When the sudden outbreak of the great war drove all the money of the world into safety vaults, hidden chests and old stockings, when even far-away Iceland was obliged to declare a moratorium. Norway reached over to New York City and immediately obtained all the funds she needed.

Better than that, her national reputation is good. Ever since 1825, when a first group of Norwegians left Stavanger for the United States, the Norwegian has been a welcome immigrant. Our last census shows that almost half a million Norwegians life in America. They do their work and live their lives. They are not very rich but neither are they very poor. They retain an almost pathetic love for the barren rocks of their native country. When they return home it is to spread the good tidings of their adopted land of plenty and prosperity. They vote the Republican or Democratic ticket, keep a picture of King Haakon in the parlor, and stick to the job of being American citizens.

Of course this country has been deeply affected by the war. From a material point of view, the effect has not been a disappointment. Ever since the beginning the Norwegian has been a skipper. A thousand years ago his little tubs of eighty or ninety tons found their way into the Mediterranean, along the Gold Coast of Africa, and (if rumor can be trusted) pass the Cape of Good Hope. The tonnage of the ships has slightly altered, but the old courage and seafaring ability have remained the same.

WAR PROFITS FROM THE SEA

The Norwegian cross waves from tramp steamers, the like of which one rarely sees. The reader who doubts this statement is advised to take a ferry trip through the harbors of New York. We will see Norwegian tramps of such dimunitive dimensions that he would not board them to cross from Boston to Provincetown. Yet it is exactly ships of this type which have made millions of crowns for their Norwegian owners. Captains and crews. They can sail anywhere and everywhere, they offer few more comforts than the average life-boat, and the sailors do not seem to mind the dangers of the German submarine.

There are Norwegian Captains with the record of Nilson or de Ruyter, for the number of ships they have lost. Not once or twice, but at least half a dozen times, have they been forced to hoist their pennant upon a new ship. Their old vessels lie on the bottom of the ocean with a German torpedo in their sides. But the new one is making sufficient money to recoup owners and sailors for any loss sustained.

There are stories of eighteenth century wooden clippers pressed into service of the Allies and now allowing their owners to have champagne with every luncheon. There are wild yarns about two energetic boys, who, working together and hiring an extra hand, were able to make their everlasting fortune, transporting wood from the Norwegian forests to the Allies in an old smack. Whoever possesses a pair of naval boots and a dilapidated oil kin coat hastens to Stavanger or Bergen, or Drammen, to sign articles and join in the golden harvest of high freights and frequent voyages. Clearance papers can be had for anything that will keep afloat long enough to make the trip from Christiansand to Newcastle. In short, the war has meant a sudden abundance of gold in a very poor country.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

Wash away all the stomach, liver, and bowel poisons before breakfast.

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside; no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head; no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became saturated with an accumulation of body poisons, begin this treatment and above all, keep it up! As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening, and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

British Give Up Golf in Face of War's Demands

The announcement of the suspension of Golf Illustrated, the organ of the game in Great Britain calls attention to the fact that the war is forcing play into the background in England.

The announcement comes as no surprise to those who have noted the trend of events and seen that for weeks the publishers have been obliged to reprint illustrations and to devote the greater part of the reading matter to news of the game emanating from this country. So for a time Americans will lose track of the great players with whom they have lived in the spirit if not in the flesh, and of the editor of Golf Illustrated, Harold H. Hilton, who, as the American amateur champion in 1911 and defender of that title in 1912, is bound to this country with even stronger ties than those of the ordinary freemasonry of the links.

Many of Britains' best golfers have given their lives for their country in the great struggle: many more are back home, maimed. These who have still to face the music have the heartfelt wishes of followers of the game in this country for a speedy and safe return.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the musssy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

DEATH LADLED OUT TO TERRIFIED BOSCHES

LONDON, Nov. 7.—The daily work of a tank on the western front has been graphically described by a young Australian soldier who was wounded while serving in one of these new engines of war. The description in diary form appeared in The Manchester Guardian:

Monday—Out for first time. Strange sensation. Worse than being in a submarine. At first unable to see anything, but imagined a lot. Bullets began to rain like hailstones on a galvanized roof at first, then like a series of hammer blows. We passed through it all unscathed.

Suddenly we gave a terrible lurch. I thought we were looked through. Lookout said we were astride an enemy trench. Our guns raked and swept trenches right and left.

Got a peep at frightened Huns. It was grimly humorous. They tried to bolt like scared rabbits, but were shot down in bunches before getting to their burrows. Machine guns brought forward. Started vicious rattle on our "hide." Not the least impression was made. Shells began to burst. We moved on and overtook some more frightened Huns. Cut their ranks to ribbons with our fire.

They ran like men possessed. Officer tried to rally them. They awaited our coming for a while. As soon as our guns began to spit at them they were off once more. Infantry rounded them up and survivors surrendered. Very curious about us. Stood open-mouthed and wide-eyed watching, but weren't much the wiser.

Experience was not altogether pleasant at first. Tank sickness is as bad as sea sickness until you get used to them.

Tuesday— Off for another cruise. Pepperoing began at once. Thought old thing was going to be drowned in showers of bullets. Things quiet down quickly. Silly blighters thought they could rush the tank like they would a fort. Dashed up from all sides. We fired at them, point blank. Very pluck chaps some of them, for all their madness. The survivors had another try. We spat at them venomously. More of them went down.

A Rough Voyage.

Wednesday—Early start. Roughest voyage yet. Waves of tin seemed to break over us. Tremendous crash. Then another, and several others at intervals. Silence for a time. Party of Huns came to meet us outside the village. Very stout old gentleman in front. Thought it was the Mayor and village bigpots to give us a civic welcome. Mistaken. They meant to give war reception but not as we understood the word. Let fly with machine guns. Then tried silly boarding tactics. We laughed. Our guns answered theirs.

Tank reception committee dispersed in a cloud of smoke and flame; no trailing clouds of glory. Fat old gentleman only visible member of deputation. Stood open-mouthed. Purple with rage. Tank bore down. Old gent started to run. Funnier than a sack race. Old gent flung himself to earth with many signs to surrender.

Thursday—Got into the village, and passed down between two irregular rows of wrecked houses. Hundreds of Huns came rushing up from cellars and from behind ruins to see us. Some had eyes staring out of their heads. Looked surprised and even frightened.

One blighter made a rush at us with a clubbed rifle. Made a terrible swipe at the tank. Smashed his rifle, and made a nasty noise on our roof. Hurt himself more than he hurt us. Off for a joy ride after some nice Huns who took to flight as we came up.

Saturday — On the move before breakfast. Terrible crash on first go off Thought we had collided with a wandering world. Weathered the storm. Got busy on enemy trenches Rare good sport. Enemy fired a surprise for infantry — Yorkshiremen— advancing to attack. We tried a surprise, too, and ours came off first. Huns weren't pleased. Didn't think it was playing the games according to Potsdam rules.

We waddled into their ambush for the attacking troops. Never saw men so frightened. Tied pants-stricken in all directions. Only a few chaps stayed behind and tried to stop us by machine-gun fire. Smashed them to bits and left their machine guns to be picked up by the Yorkshiremen they hoped to surprise.

Went sporting after the enemy wherever we could find them. Their losses were terrible. Later strong detachments tried to make their way back supported by big guns. Lined hot time. Every time they tried to push through we stripped their ranks to bits At last they gave it up. Very wise of them.

Ladled Out Death.

Sunday.—Good work of frightening Huns continued. Better day, better deed. Fritz didnt think that. Blighters opened rifle fire on us at two hundred yards. It was like water off a duck's back Fritz couldn't make it out. Kept up the fire, but got a bit nervy as the blessed old thing kept waddling up to him. Ladled out death as you might vamp out indifferent music from a hurdy-gurdy.

Fritz got fits. No fight left in him. Prisoners scared to death. Some of them acted as though they believed that we used our tanks for making sausages out of prisoners. We had a lot of trouble explaining that once they surrendered they were safe

Terribly Hurt By Touching Live Wire

W. Wright of Shakespeare Hurled From High Pole.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—Wilson Wright, whose home is at Shakespeare, a village near Stratford, was terribly injured when, while repairing a telegraph line at the corner of Hamilton road and William street, his hand touched a high tension hydro wire. At the same time it appears his hip came in contact with another wire, making a circuit. Several thousand volts passed through his body, hurling him to the ground, 30 feet below, and burning a huge hole in his hip, and charring his fingers to the bone.

Dr. E. Spence, of the corner of King and William street, reached the scene quickly, and had Wright rushed to Victoria hospital in the police ambulance. It is expected that notwithstanding his terrible injuries he will recover. As far as could be ascertained last night no bones were broken.

Wright is nineteen years old and was employed by the G. N. W. Telegraph Company.

How To Make A Good Hair Tonic At Home

If you have been using hair tonics purchased readymade at the drug stores you can probably save some money and get a great deal better results by using the following recipe which has been remarkably successful in stopping loss of hair and making new hair grow on bald and thin spots. Anyone can easily make it at home. Simply mix 2 oz. of Lavona Rum and then add one-half drachm of De Composse with six ozs. of pure Bay grease or stocky. Ladies should be careful not to apply to face or where hair is not desired. G. L. B. Binghamton, N. Y.

HAS FAMILY OF 19.

Takes Restaurant Supply to Provide the Meals.

Chicago Nov. 8.—The average man who complains about the increased cost of living has it pretty soft, in the opinion of Edward A. Sharp, of Rogers Park, a suburb of Chicago. Mr. Sharp is the proud father of seventeen children, and when his wife prepares a meal it looks like the dinner bill of a fair-sized restaurant.

"It requires a peck of potatoes, four loves of bread, $4 worth of meat, five heads of cabbage and four qaurts of coffee for a snack at our house," said Mrs. Sharp to-day as a couple of grocery boys staggered in with the food for dinner.

"We use ten quarts of milk daily, and it takes a bar of toilet soap to wash all the children," he concluded.

HAD BOILS
FOR SIX MONTHS
B. B. B. DROVE THEM AWAY

When the blood becomes impure the very first symptoms which manifest themselves are a breaking out of various forms of skin trouble such as boils, pimples, sores, etc., and to get rid of these troubles you must cleanse the blood thoroughly with a good blood remedy.

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters.

Thousands of people from one end of Canada to the other have used it during the past forty years, and have nothing but words of praise for its cleansing properties.

Mr. Rufus Beers, Upper Main River, N.B., writes: "I want to say a few words about your medicine, Burdock Blood Bitters. I had boils for over six months and sometimes was so bad I could not work I tried lots of cures but nothing would drive them away for good until I took B.B.B. In a short time I was all better. It is a dandy medicine. I keep it in the house all the time."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont., but go well and favourably is it known that there are many imitations on the market. See that our name appears on the wrapper.

The middy that slips over the head and has no more buttons than if it were not a garment at all but a flower sack, seems to be the inspiration for the newest blouses for early autumn wear.

Valour Endears Commander And King To Italy

ROME, Nov. 7.—Italy's wheel of war to-day revolves about two human pivots. They are Gen. Cadorna and the king.

Opposition to the "little generalissimo," developed on the inauguration of his command. The rank and file of the army, however, have always been with him.

His foes were official liveries. They had the powerful forms of fraternal and governmental politics.

But events proved Cadorna's "genius for selection." Goritz and the lower Isonzo vindicated his "watchful waiting policy. Today he has a fixed niche in Italy's hall of fame. But it is second to his place in the hearts of the people.

The "little generalissimo" is a rigid disciplinarian. He begins with himself.

"Morally and physically he is the strongest man I know" said one of his junior officers.

He is deeply religious. He likes to eat and he likes to sleep. No other man is begrudged his full share of each.

Snap Judgment Is Sure.

Although doing little material work, he plans and supervises everything. Even in his things his snappiest judgment is remarkably sure. He is far more apt to stray in matter of smaller import.

The scholarly Gen. Porro is an invaluable aid on detail work. His optimism has been a tonic for his men. Despair does not lift its head in his presence.

Cadorna kept a smiling face through the long shower of personal abuse. Never for a moment did he lose his head.

His military excursions carry him oftenest to the hardest pressed zones. He has a shake of the hand, a word of cheer for the highest and the lowest.

"Somehow war seems easier after the little generalissimo's visit," said a soldier in the trenches. This inspiring magnetism is probably the most effective element in Cadorna's command.

King Endeared to People

War, too, has endeared the king to his subjects. He has thrown away the trappings of royalty and rushes about in a low gray racing car.

All his time is passed at the front. His city and country palaces are closed. In the heart of the "zone di guerra" he has an unpretentious dwelling.

He is constantly on the move, visiting battlefields. At Goritz he went over a dangerous bridge and into a shrapnel-ed city to spend a fleeting hour with his people. Cheering soldiers and townsfolks surrounded him.

Although smiling his appreciation, he seemed embarrassed by their enthusiasm. He motioned the crowd to silence.

Afterward in the Duke Carso Cadorna's machine went by. The same determined look that had marked Victor's countenance sat on the little generalissimo's.

"It spells victory," cried our officer.

King Ordered Off Field.

Once when there was fierce fighting in the Dolomites the king suddenly appeared on the battlefield. He had sped from the Carso up through the high flung valleys.

Pressed by Cadorna to leave the zone of danger he refused.

"Am I speaking to my king or my general?" asked the little generalissimo.

"To your general, and the sovereign

"Then go, and go at once," commanded Cadorna. And obediently Victor rode down the mountain to and the peaceful valley.

A Race For Constantinople Between British and Russians In The Balkan War Zone

Constantinople is likely to be the prize of the capitals under Prussian domination, to fall into the arms of the Allies. It is a race between the Russians in the Dobrudja and the British on the Struma, to get there first. Of course the public here desire to see the British armies win. But they will not begrudge Grand Duke Nicholas the honor if the Russians are the first to erect the cross above the crescent on the mosque of St. Sophia.

The Russians are 240 miles away, and the British 280, but the latter have the easier route. Both would follow the coast lines, the Russians coming down along the shore of the Black Sea and the British pushing along the Aegean by the railway that runs from Salonica to Lake Doiran, crosses the Struma at Demirhissar, and then by way of Seres and Drama to Dedeagatch, crosses the Maritza River at Demotika and continues east to Constantinople. The further the British get along this line the easier will be their task. Once the Greek Macedonian frontier is crossed the way lies across the lowlands at the food of the Rhodope Mountains and in Turkey level plains stretch all the way to Chatalja and Constantinople.

The British are well across the Struma River, heading for Seres and Demirhissar. The village of Yenikeui was captured on Wednesday and Nevolyen on Thursday. Their line now makes a loop east of the river along the Seres road. With Demirhissar and Seres in their possession they will be able to make more rapid progress to the eastward by means of the railroad.

On the Western Macedonian front the Allies are apparently doing very well. The Serbians, aided by the French, are gradually reconquering their country. Descending from the high Kaimakcalan ridge they have crossed the Cerna River and are now pushing on toward Monastir. The French are clearing the enemy from the Serbians' left flank and have taken the railway station of Verbeni and the town of Bur, near the frontier, and only 12 miles south of Monastir, which is now menaced both on the east and the south. Berlin admits that the high plateau of Nidje Planina, which overlooks the Cerna Valley east of Monastir, is held by the Serbians.

ITALIANS AID IN ALBANIA.

Italian cavalry are moving up from Southern Albania along the Dryno Valley, clearing the country of Bulgarians, who had advanced southwest of Lake Presba in the original defile through Serbia and have been terrorizing the inhabitants ever since. The general direction of the watershed here is towards the northwest, the Vojusa River, which empties into the Strait of Otranto, north of Avlona, being the main drainage line. The region is full of mountains, with narrow valleys, through which flow small streams, rendering progress slow and difficult. The whole Macedonian frontier is protected by similar natural mountain barriers, which are a far greater obstacle to the allies' progress than the guns of the Prussians, and their friends, the Austrians, Bulgars and Turks.

The operations on the Macedonian front are directly connected with those on the eastern frontier of Roumania, where a very interesting development occurred this week. The Roumanians, 24,000 strong, by crossing the Danube between Rustchuk and Tutrakan, and advancing from the southwest against the Prussians and the Bulgarians fighting in the Dobrudja, endeavored to trap the latter between the two fires. Field Marshal Mackensen, who had been sent to command at this place soon after Roumania declared war, had advanced his forces to the Dobrudja almost to the railroad from Constanza, which crosses the province from east to west. Here the Russians and the Roumanians, who had been steadily retreating before them, made a stand and within a few days drove them back near the old frontier. Part of the Prussian forces on this line were detached against the Roumanians who had crossed the Danube, and the latter withdrew again to the Roumanian side—with heavy losses, Berlin insists.

Some military observers here think that the preliminary retreat of the Roumanians and Russians in the Dobrudja was premeditated in order to lure the enemy into a trap. A great battle was fought by the northern army in which, Bucharest reports, the Prussians and the Bulgars were driven back on their centre and right flank. This Berlin denies. But the despatches from the whole of this region are so conflicting that all the public here knows is that the contending armies are still stretched across the Dobrudja from the Black Sea to the Danube, where heavy fighting is progressing and, it is believed, without any decided advantage yet to either side. But the Russians are constantly being reinforced by troops which are being brought across the Black Sea from Odessa and Terbisond and the issue cannot long remain in doubt.

ROUMANIANS IN TRANSYLVANIA.

While these operations have been going on along their eastern frontier the Roumanians have been overrunning Eastern Transylvania, pouring through the passes and moving down the valleys. They are following the course of the Aluta toward Fogaras, north of which town Prussian and Austrian troops, Berlin said early in the week, were obliged to retire "before superior forces." Yesterday Bucharest used almost the same expression, saying that the enemy had attacked "with superior forces" in the region of Fogaras, and the Roumanian troops had been withdrawn somewhat in consequence.

The Aluta, which runs in a southwesterly direction from Fogaras, makes a sudden bend to the south before Hermannstadt is reached, and breaks through the mountains into Roumania by way of the Rothenthurm Pass. This was the scene of the Roumanian defeat last week, which Berlin heralded as a great victory. The Prussians got the pass but the Roumanians escaped. The bulk of the army is still engaged on the right bank of the Aluta, making counter attacks in the mountainous regions north of the pass.

While the Austro-Prussians apparently have the better of it in the fighting in Transylvania they are hard pressed farther north, in Galicia, where the Russians have by no means abandoned their drive toward Lemberg. The southern forces have halted around Halicz, which still resists, but the advance is being pushed on in the direction of Zlocsow, thirty miles east of Lemberg, and from the region of Brzezany on the south east. The Russians also are making great progress in Armenia west of Trebisond.

Believes She Was Saved From Stroke of Paralysis

All One Side Was Cold and Powerless, when She Began Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

A dead nerve cell can never be replaced. In this way it is different to other cells of the human body. But feeble, wasted nerve cells may be restored and herein lies hope.

In this fact is also a warning to take note of such symptoms as sleeplessness and loss of energy and ambition, and restore the vitality to the nervous system before some form of helplessness results.

Nervous prostration, locomotor ataxia and paralysis are the natural results of neglecting to keep the nerves in healthful condition. The use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when you suspect there is something wrong, will soon restore vitality to the nervous system, and thereby prevent serious developments.

Mrs. Everett Nichols, R. R. No. 3, Dundalk, Ont., writes: "I take pleasure in writing to tell you the great benefit I have derived from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was so nervous I could not sleep, and found it hard to get my work done at all, but, having no help at the time, had to do the best I could. Finally my left arm became powerless and cold, and this continued to get worse until my whole side was affected, head and all. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and the first box helped me so much that I used several, and believe that this treatment saved me from having a paralytic stroke. It has built me up wonderfully, and I can recommend it most heartily, believing that if more Nerve Food were used there would be much less sickness."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures in nature's way by nourishing the blood, wasted nerves back to health and vigour. Fifty cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

SEEK CAUSE OF CAR FAMINE

INEFFICIENT DISTRIBUTION A FACTOR, RAILROAD OFFICIAL SAYS.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 9.—The apparent shortage of cars upon the railroads of the country is the result of a lack of efficiency in distribution, according to W. L. Barnes, Superintendent of Transportation of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, who was one of the witnesses at an informal hearing held to-day by C. C. McChord of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

It was brought out that the railroads of the United States own approximately 2,600,000 cars, and that the apparent total shortage is only about 60,000. Mr. Barnes gave it as his opinion that much of this apparent shortage resulted from shippers asking for more cars than they need, in order that their allotment might approximate the number they really want. Any apparent shortages resulting from other causes, he said, could be met by a more efficient distribution of the car supply.

Mr. Barnes, in response to questions as to why the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy had failed to return cars owned by other roads, said that system had been forced in self-defence to hold foreign cars, and would continue to do so until some assurance was provided that its own equipment would be returned. More than 37,000 cars of all classes belonging to the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy were held on foreign lines, he said, while that system held approximately 32,000 cars belonging to other lines.

Aside from Mr. Barnes, other railroad representatives heard to-day were W. L. Parks, Vice President of the Illinois Central; J. F. Porterfield of the same system, and C. B. Phelps, Superintendent of Transportation of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad. Short statements were also presented by representatives of Ohio and Michigan coal dealers and consumers.

Thin People Can Increase Weight

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and many thin men and women we believe can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it aims to prepare the fat-forming, strength-giving material of what you have eaten into rich, ripe fat producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form which the blood can readily accept. Much of this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol works to stop the waste and do it quickly and to make the fat producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive, all leading druggists in this vicinity sell it in large boxes—forty tablets to a package—on a guarantee of weight increase or money back as found in each large box.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you with Sargol send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 74 Antoine St., Montreal and a complete ten days treatment will be sent you postpaid in plain wrapper.

PRETTY TRIMMINGS TO DECORATE HAT

Such charming hats can be bought ready trimmed that it seems strange that one should trim her own millinery. But, on the other hand, such lovely trimmings can be bought, all ready to slip into place on the hat, that it seems strange we don't all of us try to use them.

One of the trimming novelties is the hand-embroidered hat band. This is a length of wide ribbon in any desired colour. It is long enough to form a bow at the side of the hat, or to be looped with long hanging ends, in the centre it is embroidered by hand in metallic threads. It is the only trimming needed on the hat on which it is used.

Then there are the embroidered silk flowers, and they can be applied so artfully that they look as if they were embroidered on the hat.

Jet is one of the smart hat trimmings this year and so there are many jet ornaments for sale.

A small metal ribbon bow and metal tassel is a pretty hat trimming. It is placed on a ribbon hat band so that the tassel dangles over the crown of the hat.

There are various little fur ornaments that can be bought for trimming hats. These the especially smart used on velvet hats.

Tassels of beads are an easy thing to make for a hat. They must be placed with skill of course, to look right.

Then there are all sorts of feather ornaments. There are little flame-like feathers, tiny ones, that are used all about the crown or brim of a hat. There are uncurled ostrich feathers in various forms. There are long quills. A little practice in placing them will enable you to do so with a real nack.

Sir Frank Benson's oldest son has been killed at the front.

Before the discovery of a successfull hog-cholera serum it seemed as though in parts of American hog-raising would be swept out of existence. In Nevada many farmers became afraid to raise hogs, because of the losses from cholera. Later, up to 1915, the total number raised increased greatly when an effective serum treatment was devised.

The Peps way of treating coughs, colds, bronchitis and lung and throat troubles. How? Well, up to now people with these chest and throat troubles have swallowed cough mixtures, sickly syrups and the like, into their stomachs. Sore lungs and throat get no good by dosing the stomach. Peps work differently.

Peps are tablets made up of Pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes—not swallowed down to the stomach, which is not ailing. Try a 50c. box of Peps for your cold, your cough, bronchitis or asthma. SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

World's Temperance Sunday. Rom. 14.13, 15:3.

Golden Text: It is good not to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor to do anything hereby thy brother stumbleth. Rom. 14:21.

1. Verse 13. What difference, if any, is there between forming an opinion about a man and an attempt to "judge" him?

2. If a good man smokes and a boy begins to smoke from his example, and the habit leads to bad company and that leads to drinking, to what extent is the good man responsible?

3. Verses 14, 15: What is the moral difference between actions and motives?

4. If I were to say that there are no outward actions that are necessarily sinful, how would you disprove my assertion?

5. Verses 14, 15. In those days eating meat that had been offered to an idol was not in itself wrong: how then could it be sinful for one man to eat it, and not be sinful for another?

6. Why is it that a hundred years ago drinking in moderation was thought by most good men to be right, and that to-day the vast majority of professed Christians think it very wrong?

7. If your neighbour is very ill and your piano playing hurts him, and if you refuse to refrain from the pleasure of playing, what will God and good people think of you?

8. Verses 16, 17. To what extent should a good man deny himself any pleasure, the gratification of which hurts his neighbour?

9. What is the relative importance of our bodies and of our souls?

10. What does the kingdom of God on the earth stand for?

11. In the last analysis in what does the real wealth of the individual, the family and the nation consist?

12. Verse 18. What are the main things which we should do in order to be well pleasing to God and to good men?

13. Verses 19-21. What are the things in the family, the community, and the nation, which make for peace, after which we should follow?

14. How does individual abstinence from strong drink help in destroying the liquor traffic?

15. Verses 22, 23. Why does God put moral quality wholly in motive, and never in actions without motive?

16. If we deny ourselves things we enjoy, for the sake of others, what is the effect upon ourselves?

17. Why is it that, if we do a thing, no matter what its nature, if we know it is going to hurt another, we cannot at the same time have faith in God?

18. Chap. 15:1-3. Is Christian duty in harmony with the law of "the survival of the fittest?"

19. Why is the Gospel message not primarily for the fittest, but for those who are less fit?

20. What practical lesson should we learn from the fact that "Christ pleased not himself," but lived and died for others?

AMAZING STORY OF A "SOUL CHILD" TOLD IN COURT

Russian Countess Charged With Conspiring to Deceive Her Husband

TRIAL RESULTED IN ACQUITTAL OF ACCUSED IN PETROGRAD CASE.

London. — Though in the midst of a war to the death, Petrograd is still "alive" with its sensational "soul child" case.

It is an extraordinary and complex case. Put into a few words, the Countess Orlov Davydov is charged in the Petrograd District Court with conspiring to pass off upon her husband a male child that was not his, in order that she might benefit from the infant's inheritance of the Count Davydov's entailed estates in the event of her being a widow.

There were all the simulations of a real birth for the count to look upon when he returned home—nurses, temperature charts, the smiling mother, and the pleasing infant.

But now that the count repudiates the son and heir as his, and seeks to have a declaration of the court to that effect, the countess does not contend that the infant was born to her in any natural sense, but that it is really the "soul child" of them both. She even declares that the count's dead daughter by his first wife "dictated" to her the place where the "soul child" could be found. In reality, it is the illegitimate child of a peasant girl by a father of whom she even does not know the name.

ONCE AN ACTRESS.

All this is amazing enough; but relating as it does, to the wife of the bearer of an old aristocratic name, a member of the Imperial Duma, and a District Marshal of the Nobility, it is in no way surprising that it has "set all Petrograd by the ears." The countess herself was originally much better known to the Russian public under the maiden name of Maria Poire. She was then an operatta and concert singer, hostess, musician and war correspondent, and finally actress in chief at the Imperial Theatre in Petrograd. As she stands in the dock to-day a fortune of 20,000,000 roubles is involved in the issues concerning her and her "soul child."

By her side in the dock, says the Daily Telegraph's special correspondent, in continuing his report, sit two wizened dames, typical examples of shabby gentility. They are sisters and one of them is the widow of a "Councillor of State," whose title, in the continental fashion, she still bears.

Latterly they have followed the calling of nurses. It was these two women who assisted the countess in her search for a newly-born child which she could pass off on her husband as his own, and the story they told was sufficiently remarkable.

CASE OF BITER BITTEN.

One baby was obtained and brought to their house, but it was frail and sickly, and did not satisfy the countess. She wanted her accomplices to return it but this they refused to do. The infant was left in the house for a week, and was the pretext of interesting telegrams to the absent count, telling him that a child had been born to him, and dwelling with considerable detail on the health of the mother and the child.

Meanwhile the countess has recourse to the advertising columns of the papers, and by telephone she got into touch with a midwife, who undertook to find her, a suitable child with a healthy mother.

In a few days word was received that what she wanted had been found; but at this point the countess herself was deceived by that art which she had so often practised on others. Though the baby was robust and healthy, its mother was a plain, thick-lipped and pock marked peasant girl, whose naturally dull intelligence had not been sharpened by working in the market gardens and trundling the wheelbarrows full of brick.

ENLISTING A MOTHER.

Accordingly a friend of the midwife, a stately and attractive young woman, was induced to act the part of the mother, and having disguised herself as a peasant woman, and then thrown a shawl over her head, with shaking bosom and streaming eyes she handed over to the delighted countess the innocent pretender to one of the best names, and at any rate, a share of one of the largest fortunes in Russia.

At the same time the countess was assured that the father of the child was a "student," though as a matter of fact, he was a simple laborer whose very name is unknown to any of the parties to the case, and whose identity at this date it would probably baffle the shrewdest of detectives to discover.

As no attempt is being made to dispute the main allegations in the indictment, the witnesses as a whole throw little fresh light on the case. They are a motley crew. Among them are chiromophists, methums, and purveyors of cosmetics. But they also include well known public personages, like Cadet Deputy Maklakoff, who was consulted by the count on the question of his divorce from his first wife—a case which never came to pass so far as it concerned the first countess. No evidence was forthcoming against her, although Marie Poire is alleged to have tried to gather proofs and in the end there was mutual divorce, the count acknowledging himself as guilty.

FLOWERS AFTER VERDICT.

Such have been the details of an amazing case, the unfolding of which has been spread over a number of days.

Now has come the result in the acquitting both of the countess and her fellow-occupants of the dock.

BEST BY TEST

Four questions were submitted to the jury. The first was whether the child entered the registry at Trinity Church, Moscow, as the offspring of Count and Countess Alexei Orlov Davydov was in reality the illegitimate son of a peasant girl, Andreva. It was answered in the affirmative. The remaining questions concerning the guilt of the three defendants in procuring the insertion of this false entry. All were answered in the negative.

The jury was 25 minutes in considering the verdict. The male members of the public had anticipated the result for they had ready a bouquet of flowers, and as soon as the acquittal was pronounced one of them stepped forward to hand it to the countess. But he was stopped by one of the attendants of the court. Other members of the public expressed their disapproval of the acquittal. It would be difficult to say on which side public sympathy as a whole lay.

MEXICO MUST NOT AID SUBMARINES

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 7.—The Mexican Government has been notified by the British ambassador at Washington of the presence of German submarines in the Gulf of Mexico and has been warned that the Allies will take "drastic measures" if the undersea boats receive aid from Mexican ports or sources. This information was made public last night by the Foreign Minister, Senor Aguilar, who issued the text of a note received from the British Ambassador through United States Secretary of State Lansing and Charge d'Affaires Charles B. Parker.

The British note demands a strict censorship of the Mexican wireless and says that any failure to maintain Mexican neutrality will be attended by disastrous results. In his reply, addressed to Mr. Parker, Senor Aguilar says that it seems strange to the Mexican Government that Great Britain should use the United States State Department as an intermediary on a point concerning Mexico alone, especially when Great Britain has an accredited representative in Mexico. The reply says that the Mexican Government, for this time only, answer the representations of the British Government through Mr. Parker.

Foreign Minister Senor Aguilar states that the Mexican Government feels it unjust for the Allies to hold Mexico responsible for submarine activities in the Gulf of Mexico when the same submarines arrived in American ports and sank ships in American territorial waters without causing conflict or difficulties between Germany and the United States. He adds that Mexico desires to retain cordial relations with Great Britain and to this end suggests that the British fleet prevent the German submarines from leaving their base, thus obviating to the Mexican Government disagreeable incidents caused by the European conflict. If such measures by England are not efficacious, the Foreign Minister concludes, the Mexican Government will take such measures as the circumstances direct should German submarines enter Mexican waters.

Managers of Two Large Companies Say There Will be No Shortage.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 8.—F. M. Chase, Vice-President and General Manager of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, and C. F. Huber, Vice-President and General Manager of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company, yesterday declared that there is no danger of an anthracite coal famine.

They say that "$12 coal is a false situation, created through the frenzy of people, and offers an opportunity for speculators and independent operators to reap a financial harvest."

Both declared that there will be plenty of coal throughout the winter, and that the big companies will not increase their circular prices or sell to dealers who advance prices above the regular winter standard.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

SAVED BY A WOMAN

An Episode of the Peninsular War

By ALAN HINSDALE

When the Duke of Wellington was fighting the French in Spain in 1809 to 1814, gaining one victory after another, naturally the Spanish people were in an unsettled condition. In all countries when there is war there are persons who pretend to belong to one side or the other—sometimes both sides—either doing secret service or partisan work or engaged in robbery.

Alfonso Fernandes, a youngster of twenty-three, hated both the French and the English, expecting that, whichever conquered, Spain would have a foreign yoke about her neck. Fernandes, who commanded a small body of mounted men, would harass either side alike. Sometimes he would attack a supply train of the British, then the very next day, when they were pursuing the French after one of their many victories, he would be found in the van of the English ranks sabering those Frenchmen who were unable to keep up with their retreating companies.

Fernandes was the son of a Spanish grandee and highly educated. One day he was riding at the head of his men through a rural district not far from Talavera, when screams were heard in advance. Fernandes put spurs to his horse and, followed by his troops, rode around a bend in the road through trees that obscured his vision, and, emerging into the open, came to a gentleman's country place that was being looted by stragglers from the French army.

Dashing through the gateway and up to the house the Spaniards attacked the marauders and drove them off. Fernandes himself found a young lady struggling with a French grenadier and cut him down.

Naturally those occupying the place were very grateful for their deliverance, and Donna Maria Matalinia's heart went out to her preserver. The troop encamped, or, rather, bivouacked on the grounds of her home and received everything they needed that the place afforded. For some time they made it a base of their operations, striking out in different directions, always returning after a foray. But their absences were neither so frequent nor so long as they had been, for the leader spent much time dallying with Donna Maria.

Nevertheless the harassing Fernandes gave the French about this time was sufficient to excite the ire of Colonel Pierre Villiers, who vowed that if he could catch the "bandits," as he preferred to call them, he would hang every one of them. The colonel sent out a scout after one of Fernandes's attacks on a French outpost to follow him at a distance and discover his lair. The scout returned with the information that Fernandes himself spent much time at the Matilinias, but as for his troop they had no stopping place.

The more time Fernandes and Donna Maria spent together the more deeply they fell in love with each other and the more reckless Fernandes became in exposing himself to attack from his enemies. But a woman readily scents danger to the man she loves. The lady frequently expressed disapprobation at her lover remaining with her when his men were away, pointing out how easy it would be for either the French or the English to take him while he was alone. But whenever he consented to leave her she was sure to ask him to take the risk just once more.

Meanwhile Fernandes's band, under the leadership of his lieutenant, was harassing the French night and day. It being known what force was making all the trouble and it not being known that Fernandez himself was dallying with his beloved, he incurred all the obloquy of these attacks.

Colonel Villiers, having learned that Fernandes visited a certain place, made up his mind to take him there. He sent one or two expeditions there, but at the time Fernandez was away with his troop. The Frenchman, not wishing to frighten the bird away, concealed the fact that they were after him. But they did not deceive Donna Maria.

Colonel Villiers, eager to take the man who was annoying him, finally put a watch on the house Fernandez frequented and, one evening when it was reported that the Spaniard was there, concluded to go in person to capture him. Putting himself at the head of a dozen men—Fernandes's men were not with him—the colonel led them to the house where the lovers were dallying, surrounded it with his men, then closed in upon the premises.

Fernandes and Maria were sitting on a bench in the flower garden when suddenly they heard steps approaching, accompanied by the jingle of spurs. Both jumped to their feet and retreated to the house, screened on the way by high growing plants common to tropical countries, and closed a door behind them without having been seen. Discerning from a window the forms of men without, the lovers suspected that Fernandes was in danger, and Maria at once began to think of a place to hide him, for escape was obviously impossible. She led him upstairs to a bedchamber and put him in a closet. Fernandes had never been beyond the ground floor of the house and did not know in whose apartment he had been hidden. The closet door was locked, and he was in the dark. It was not long before the bedroom door was violently thrown open and there was a tread of boots on the floor.

"What means this intrusion?" he heard spoken in a voice which he recognized as Maria's.

"Pardon, senorita," said a man's voice, "but there is a man in this house who is wanted. We must find him."

"In a lady's chamber?"

"I regret to disturb you."

"You mean that you regret to insult me."

"That is not intended."

"You come into my room when I am in bed and yet you do not intend to insult me?"

"God forbid that I, a French soldier, should insult a woman."

"Will you take the word of a lady?"

"Certainly."

"Well, then I am an unmarried woman. Is it not an insult for you to look for a man in a maiden's bedroom?"

"Certainly, senorita, provided the man is not some near relative."

"There is no near relative of mine in this house. My father is at the capital. I have no brother. Would that I had to protect me from this indignity!"

This evidently had a marked effect on the man, for after a humble apology he closed the door, and all was still. In a few moments the closet door was opened, and Maria, in a double gown, stood before her lover.

"Get into the bed," she said, "and I will take your place in the closet. When they do not find you in other parts of the house they will return and search this room."

As he stepped out of the closet she was about to go in when steps were again heard without. Maria took the key from the outside of the closet door and put it on the inside, but she did not close the door.

"Have you your pistol?" she asked hurriedly.

"Two of them."

"Well, be guided by what I say to any one who comes to the room."

Fernandes got into the bed with his clothes on and covered himself up. Maria had blown out the candles in the room, and it was dark. She stood within the closet, the door open and her hand on the knob.

Colonel Villiers had sent his men to search the house, and when the man who had failed to search Donna Maria's room returned and reported that he had been prevented from doing so by motives of delicacy for a woman the colonel started at once to make the search himself. But the colonel was a gentleman of France, and the work before him was not to his taste. Going to Maria's bedroom, he knocked at the door.

"Who's there?" asked Maria.

"Pardon me, senorita, but I must search your room. I am sorry to"—

"I give you warning," interrupted Maria, "that I will not suffer insult a second time. I have armed myself, and whoever desecrates the privacy of my chamber shall receive a bullet for doing so."

The colonel, though he disliked to intrude upon a woman forcibly, was not afraid of one who opposed him in a masculine way. He opened the door and entered. His figure was plain enough to one in the room, but he could see nothing. He had taken two steps beyond the lintel when a pistol cracked from the bed and he fell in a heap on the floor.

"Quick! Change with me!" cried Maria as she darted from the closet to the bed. As Fernandez passed her she seized a pistol from him and hurried into bed. Fernandez took position in the closet. The exchange had scarcely been made when the colonel's men, having heard the shot, appeared before the chamber door and saw their commander lying in the opening.

"Carry him away," said Maria from the bed. "If any of you approach me I will serve you as I served him."

The men drew back at this. But in another moment one of them asked whether, if they attended to the colonel, they would have to do so under fire.

"So long as you attend to him," was the reply, "you are safe. All I ask of you is to respect me."

At this one of them raised Villiers, who had a bullet in his lung, and, seeing that he was alive, took him up and carried him into another room. Maria called to Fernandez:

"Now is your chance. The men have lost their leader and are busy ministering to him. Go before they again turn to continue the search for you."

"Rather you go before they return for their revenge. I will join you."

"What! You, to whom the church has not united me?"

"We will go to a priest."

"Go, then; I will follow you."

In another moment Fernandes was on a trellis without the window, and Maria followed him. Reaching the ground, they ran among the plants till they made an exit from the place.

A short distance from their starting point was a chapel. On reaching it Fernandez rapped on the door of the priest's house beside it.

"Father," he said when the priest opened the door, "I desire to be united in the holy bonds of matrimony to this woman."

The pair were admitted and taken to the chapel. There they were married in haste and continued their flight. But there was no necessity for haste. Those they had left behind were too much engaged with their colonel to follow them. They made good their escape, and the next seen of them they were in Madrid.

When Spain was relieved from the foreign yoke imposed upon her by the great Napoleon Fernandes became prominent in the cortes.

YOUNG WOMEN MAY AVOID PAIN

Need Only Trust to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, says Mrs. Kurtzweg.

Buffalo, N.Y.—"My daughter, whose picture is herewith, was much troubled with pains in her back and sides every month and they would sometimes be so bad that it would seem like acute inflammation of some organ. She read your advertisement in the newspapers and tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She praises it highly as she has been relieved of all these pains by its use. All mothers should know of this remedy, and all young girls who suffer should try it."—Mrs. MATILDA KURTZWEG, 529 High St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Young women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by this root and herb remedy.

If you know of any young woman who is sick and needs helpful advice, ask her to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Only women will receive her letter, and it will be held in strictest confidence.

LOSSES OF BRITISH DECREASE AS TROOPS GAIN EXPERIENCE

NEW YORK, November 10.—The Tribune publishes the following:

LONDON, Nov. 9 (by Arthur S. Draper).—In modern warfare the question of casualties is the foremost problem of the rival commanders in chief. But all losses in an engagement must be weighed relatively, and there are as many standards as there are armies.

The battle of the Marne, one of the decisive battles of all times, set a high standard in casualties. Before the present war, which has made all past conflicts pygmean in comparison, losses were viewed in an entirely different light.

During the fiercest of the Somme fighting the casualties in one week undoubtedly exceeded the total losses in the entire Franco-Prussian war, but the allies considered the price they paid for their gains reasonable. Against their losse they balanced their territorial gains, their capture of prisoners, guns and ammunition and German casualties. On the other hand, Prince Rupprecht had to seek satisfaction in the thought that the allies' casualties exceeded his own.

If the allies had decided to push right on to the Bapaume-Peronne road in the first three weeks of the Somme offensive they probably could have done so. Nothing would have pleased the German General Staff more than to have had Sir Douglas Haig and General Foch try it. The cost of dards.

the success would have been enormous compared even with present stan-

THIEPVAL COST FEW LIVES.

In August there was much bloody fighting at High Wood. The British wanted it, and the Germans considered it worth a great many of their soldiers' lives. Undoubtedly more British than Germans died there, but General Haig got it at a price which was not unreasonable considered in relation to its importance.

Thiepval was a fortress of immense strength; it represented the acme of German engineering skill and was valued as the British value Gibraltar. If the British had fought on in the first days of the offensive until it was in their hands, their casualty list would have been out of all proportion to Thiepval's value to them, but when they took it on September 26, it cost them fewer men than it did to carry Montauban in July. For every three casualties in the carrying of Thiepval in September they took two German prisoners.

Suppose the German losses have been smaller than those of the Allies, say, at the ratio of 3½ to 6½ which even the German claims would not exceed, the advantage is still with the Allies, considered relatively to the importance of their present position over their line on July 1st.

When the British army began the Somme offensive it had guns and ammunition behind it, but it lacked one thing, and that was experience. the succes would have been enormous compared even with present standards. trained, confident and courageous, but it needed experience.

British casualties ran high at the start—higher than those of the French, who were doing brilliant work on the right. The French had thoroughly mastered the art of advancing just fast enough not to run into their own barrage, and not too slow to lose momentum; they used any cover the ground offered.

No longer do the young graduates of St. Cyr go into battle wearing white gloves; these are the days when officers do not need to make marks of themselves for snipers' bullets to show they are brave and gallant leaders. The green British army learned rapidly, and as they grew wiser in experience their casualties decreased.

When the Canadians on the left, the Australians in the centre and the famous British Guards on the right made an attack last month they knew exactly how far they were to advance and, what was equally as important, just where they were to stop.

From the start of the war Germany had a tremendous advantage in that she had practically supreme control of the military activities of the Central Powers. It can be truthfully said that now there is the same cooperation among the general staffs of the Allied nations.

Americans often express surprise that the Allies do not advance faster. They ask why, if the Allies are so much stronger than the enemy, they do not throw in enough men to push right through. The answer is that the gains would not offset the losses.

Winter Will Completely Eliminate Germany's Chance Of Invading Roumania

NEW YORK, November 10.—(By New York Times Military Expert)—For the first time in several weeks we again see fighting in Dobrudja. Such periodic displays of activity are but natural when two armies are in constant touch with each other. It does not indicate, however, that the Dobrudja fighting is more than a temporary flare-up. Both sides, it seemed, began minor offensive operations. There may be a reason for it, but whatever this reason is, it is not with the idea of accomplishing anything in that particular field. The reasons why this is so have been sufficiently amplified on other reviews to need no other reference. What may be the object, however, is, on the part of the Germans, to cover the transfer of troops to the Transylvania field, and on the part of the Roumanians, to prevent such transfer.

A POTENTIAL DANGER.

It has been explained in detail why Mackensen has about reached the end of his rope in Dobrudja; why he can do nothing more until von Falkenhayn breaks through the Transylvania border and joins him. The same barriers which prevent Mackensen from advancing out of Dobrudja also prevent the Roumanians from assuming the offensive. This state has as yet not quite been reached. As long as the Roumanians are in force in Dobrudja, and they still seem to be, there is a potential danger accompanying a weakening of the German forces. There is a serious doubt, however, whether this danger will ever become active. Once the Dobrudja situation has been cleared up by the advance of Mackensen to the Danube on the northern boundary, this danger will have been removed, and Mackensen will be free to do just as the Roumanians have probably already done—shift some of his troops to the Transylvania front while he himself intrenches and remains entirely on the defensive.

ROUMANIANS HAVE THE ADVANTAGE.

Of course the same procedure is open to the Roumanians, and it must be said that in this the advantage is all with the Roumanians, because of their very much shorter lines. It is the advantage of the interior position, the advantage which the Central Powers have held from the beginning of the war. In order to reach the Transylvanian frontier the Germans in Dobrudja have to travel the length of the entire southern border of Roumania, from Dobrudja to the Iron Gates. The Roumanians, on the other hand, have to go but the short distance across the country before they are at the point of greatest danger and the point where they are needed most.

There is really but one point—or, rather, one section—of the Transylvania line which the Roumanians have to fear, and that is the section between Kronstadt and Hermannstadt, the territory between Red Tower Pass and Predeal. The Teutons here, as elsewhere, are outnumbered, and they can only make up for this handicap by superior communications. In other words, they are practically limited to that section where the railroad facilities are such as to discount the discrepancy in men. Obviously, it does not make any difference how many men a given power may have. The point is to have numerical superiority at the point of attack. One of the fundamental principles of all strategy is to have the most men at the proper point at the right time. If, then, the Germans by their superior transportation facilities can so shift their men that they have a superiority in numbers at the point of attack, the mere fact that as a whole they are outnumbered is without effect.

HAS BEEN SEVERE FIGHTING.

For several weeks there has been severe fighting in the vicinity of Predeal. On Saturday the Roumanians retook a height near the Torzburg Pass, just east of Predeal; on Sunday the Germans retook it. It is, however, a very minor advantage, any way we look at it. The Roumanians gained but little advantage by their success and lost little when it was wrested from them. The main point to consider is that, in spite of the claimed successes of either side, the situation is stationary. This in itself is an advantage to the Roumanians, as every day that passes brings the winter that much nearer, and if by winter the Germans have not succeeded in breaking down the Roumanian resistance which blocks the passes Germany's chance of eliminating Roumania from the war has passed.

This chance seemed brilliant at one time. When Roumanian defenses were crushed in Dobrudja it was generally expected that the beginning of the end of this newcomer in the lists was in sight. But, although several weeks have gone by since the Cernavoda bridge was blown up, matters have not changed in the slightest degree. A little more territory has changed hands, the Germans have advanced somewhat to the north, but the changes have brought no advantages.

ITALIANS STILL HAMMERING AWAY.

On the Isonzo front, the Italians are still hammering away in the new offensive which is reaching toward Trieste. Austria denies that any advances have been made. All the reports from Vienna tell of repulses of every Italian attack. At the same time it is evident from the points where fighting is now taking place that the Italians have achieved considerable success. The beginning of the offensive found Italy clinging to the western edge of the Carso Plateau. Their grip on it was none too secure, their situation precarious. The slightest Austrian success along this line would have thrust them back on the Doberdo. The danger of this has been removed and the grip which has been obtained on the Carso is firm and lasting. For nearly three miles the Austrians have been pushed back, and as fast as one new position is consolidated, a new thrust is made.

The next few days will be interesting from one point of view. The limit to previous Italian offensives has been but a few days. Then their supply of artillery ammunition runs low, and their attack first slakens and then dies out. The present offense has been under way now for four days and has met with a considerable measure of success. The Austrian loss has been severe, a matter of 10,000 prisoners having been taken.

The Italian gains have, however, brought but little advantage from the standpoint of communications. In fact, this element of strategy is almost entirely lacking in the Carso region. There are any number of roads crossing the plateau and wandering over it in various ways. None of them within striking distance of the Italians is of sufficient importance to exert any effect on the general situation. The Italians have simply taken so much territory, and this, a small amount, of no particular value. They have inflicted considerable loss on the Austrians—probably an army corps having been placed on the casualty reports, though the cost of doing this cannot be estimated. The situation is one that the Austrians have no present cause to worry about.

of course, that an investigation has been made in the case of the steamship Marina, but no facts have been made known.

Added to the Marina case are the attacks upon the Arabia, the Lanao and the Columbian, of the American-Hawaiian line. Mr. Walter H. Page, American Ambassador at London, today cabled a preliminary report on the sinking of the Arabia, stating that she was torpedoed on her homeward voyage in the Mediterranean and that "most" of her 483 passengers (largely women and children) were saved.

All the information thus far obtained regarding the circumstances of the attack upon the Arabia and the Columbian indicate that proof has been given of a change in policy by the German Admiralty and that all regard for law and humanity have been, or are about to be, thrown to the winds in the interest of the policy of "frightfulness."

The Columbian was immune from attack in all circumstances unless she absolutely defied the summons of the submarine commanders to stop to permit visit and search, and this, it is thought, any captain of a neutral merchant vessel would not be likely to do. The logic of the situation is that the captain would have stopped for this purpose if he had a chance.

The statement reported from Captain Mainland, master of the Lanao, now threatens to precipitate an issue in this case. Captain Mainland's statement shows clearly that the Prussians attacked the Lanao under the assumption that she was an American vessel, and Captain Mainland himself believes such to be the status of his ship.

A technicality may save the Prussians from a violation of their pledges to the United States in that case, but the intent of their action can hardly be misinterpreted otherwise, it is thought here, than indicating a resumption by the Prussian Admiralty of submarine operations against neutral vessels regardless of the law

STREAM OF WATER IS STRONGER THAN STEEL

A stream of water considerably less than an inch in diameter, moving with such amazing velocity that it could not be cut by a bullet or by the finest tempered sword, is described in the Popular Science Monthly.

"A factory at Grenoble, France," it is related, "utilises the water of a reservoir situated in the mountains at a height of 200 yards. The water reaches the factory through a vertical tube of the same length, with a diameter of considerably less than an inch, the jet being used to drive a turbine. Experiments have shown that the strongest man cannot cut the jet with the best tempered sword, and in some instances the blade has been broken into fragments without deflecting a drop of the water, and with as much violence as a pane of glass may be shattered by a blow from an iron bar. It has been calculated that a jet of water a small fraction of an inch in thickness, moving with sufficient velocity, could not be cut by a rifle bullet.

VISITORS ALWAYS LOSE.

"The engineers of some big water-power projects of the Far West are willing to wager that a 200 lb. man swinging a 4 lb. axe with all his might cannot make a dent in the water as it emerges from the nozzle of the power-house. Burying an axe in a stream of water looks like child's play and the average 200 lb. visitor is likely to "bite." He invariably loses. So great is the velocity of water emerging from the nozzle in the modern power plants that an axe, no matter how keen its edge, is whirled from the hands of the axeman as soon as it touches the water. The water travels under a pressure exceeding 500 lbs. to the square inch in many instances, and no power on earth can turn it off in the course once it gains momentum. It has the same effect on one's fingers as a rough emery wheel and will shave a plank with the nicety of a razor-edged plane."

STUDENTS SLEEP ON PARK BENCHES

Petrograd. — The housing problem in Petrograd has become more and more serious, as refugees have poured in, crowding the hotels, filling all available lodgings, and producing a state of congestion throughout the city. It has proved particularly perplexing to thousands of university students. At present there is hardly an unoccupied apartment in the city nor a vacant room in any of the houses which ordinarily let rooms. Private families in comfortable circumstances without the slightest need of eking out an income by taking in lodgers, have in many cases generously yielded to the tremendous demand for rooms, and disposed of them at high prices to a panicky public which filled them with the celerity and the eagerness of persons confronted with the prospect of sleeping in the parks.

The predicament of the student class, which having little money to spend, has naturally been unable to compete in the scramble for rooms with doubled or trebled prices, has been the subject of several conferences of the university faculties which have made appeals to the city authorities to take immediate measures to provide for the large number of homeless students. Many of these students are now sleeping on park benches, or spending the night in walking the streets, while the more fortunate ones are sharing rooms which as many as five or six have taken together.

One proposal is that the hotel proprietors be compelled to give a certain number of rooms at a low rate to students. Another is that the moving picture theatres be converted into lodging-houses, and that the idle steamboats on the Neva be requisitioned.

Evidence of the present shortage of lodgers occurs daily in the advertising columns of the newspapers. In some advertisements it is stated that as much as five hunderd roubles (two hundred and fifty dollars) will be paid as a bonus in addition to the regular rental merely for information leading to the lease of a desirable apartment.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

ECLIPSED 1860 ELECTION.

Record Sums Were Placed on Presidential Contest.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—On the eve of the election there was a deal of Wilson money appearing in Wall street and many of the wagers were made at even money. It was estimated that at least $1,000,000 on Monday was placed on the result of the voting, and after the close of the market much more was placed. This makes the present election by long odds the most remarkable betting election in the history of the country—and both of the candidates are the sons of ministers.

Up to the present fight the Lincoln election of 1860 was always quoted as the contest for the White House that brought about the most remarkable betting, but it has been totally eclipsed, and the money that was wagered on the balloting yesterday afternoon was heavier than on any two Presidential elections. According to all figures, more than $5,000,000 will change hands on the result today.

NOVEMBER.

There's a dream in your eyes, November—
When the wild duck wing their way,
From the blue north lakes to the cypress brakes,
Where the Spanish moss is gray—
Of roads that the winds remember
From the first dim dawn of day!

There's a speech on your lips, November,
That your migrant children know!
Ere the buried veins of the rock moraines
Were sunk in glacial snow,
They learned—and the wilds remember—
The Law of the Long Ago!

There's the hush on your heart, November,
Of a Mesozoic year!
From the Winyah, south, to the Cooper, mouth,
Do the iris wings appear—
For the Oolite spawn remember
That flight from the frozen fear!

RUSSO-ROUMANIANS CLOSE TO CZERNAVODA

WILSON IS AGAIN THE U. S. PRESIDENT

Large Portion of Mackensen's Forces May Be In A Trap

Sudden Dash of Russo-Roumanian Forces Has Surprised Enemy--Defenders of Roumania Are Now Battling For Possession of the Cernavada Bridge While They Have Suddenly Developed an Offensive North of Bucharest ---Splendid News From Roumanian Battleground.

GERMAN LOSSES NOW TOTAL 3,755,693

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 10.—(Special Cable)—It is thought probable here that a large portion of Von Mackensen's German-Bulgar-Turkish force invading Roumania, via Dobrudja, has been trapped by the sudden dash of the Russo-Roumanian forces which are to-day reported from Petrograd to be battling for the possession of Cernavoda Bridgehead.

The news came suddenly when it was still thought that the opposing lines in Dobrudja were fighting many miles north of the Constanza Railway, of which the Cernavoda Bridge across the Danube River is a famous and important connecting link. If the Russians have occupied Danaresv, two miles from Cernavoda in any force, their guns now control the bridge and the approaches to the bridge, and have possibly cut off a large portion of the Teutonic troops, attempting to retire to the other side.

Later despatches also report that the Roumanians have suddenly developed a heavy offensive north of Bucharest, in the neighbourhood of the Passes, through which the enemy managed to penetrate Roumania.

PETROGRAD, November 10.—Russian troops have captured Hirsova and Mcaluj and have captured an important height southwest of Kasemdja, the official statement added.

A CONFLICT OF OPINION AS TO CONSCRIPTION

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, November 10.—There appears to be a conflict of opinion as to General Hughes' remarks before the Empire Club in Toronto last night with regard to conscription. It is pointed out, in connection with the question of recruiting the new National Service Commission under R. B. Bennett, has not yet got down to work properly, and that until it has had a chance of showing what it can do, it is superfluous to talk of conscription.

It is not believed, however, in view of Australia's experience that conscription is in contemplation by the Governmene here.

An Enemy Advance Guard Retires

Examiner Special:

BUCHAREST, November 10.—An enemy monitor and a small advance guard which attempted to approach the Ramadan bridgehead were obliged to retire by our artillery, the War Office announced to-day.

German Casualties Now 3,755,693

Examiner Special:

LONDON, November 10.—Germany's own count of her dead for the war numbers nearly a million men, according to the official casualty list received here to-day.

The October casualty list admitted at the War Office in Berlin show 199,675 casualties, including 34,421 dead, which brings the total losses for the war up to 3,755,693 in dead, wounded and missing. The total dead was placed at 949,739.

Artillery Fighting On Both Sides

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 10.—Considerable artillerying occurred on both banks of the Ancre, General Haig reported to the War Office to-day.

The Germans used numerous gas shells northeast of Festubert. Enemy trench mortars were silenced.

MANY AIR BATTLES ON THE FRENCH FRONT

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official), November 10.—French aviators were engaged in seventy-seven air fights yesterday in which ten Germans were brought down, the War Office announced to-day. Otherwise activity was confined to intermittent cannonading and skirmishes at various points.

PETROGRAD, November 10.—Russian forces, mounted and afoot, are engaged with the enemy two miles west of Csernavoda, the War Office announced to-day. The victor will gain possession of the bridgehead which is of great strategic importance. After sharp fighting the Russians occupied Dunarsav, two miles from Csernavoda. They took a number of prisoners.

MR. C. A. G. SPENCE AND MR. W. HENRY HELD UP BY A GUN

Officials Were Acting in the Interests of the Children's Aid Society George Emery, the Man Behind the Gun Will Be Placed Under Arrest

LIVED IN A TENT

Mr. C. A. G. Spence, local agent for the Children's Aid Society, and Mr. William Henry, superintendent of the Children's Shelter, had an exciting experience yesterday, which culminated in both men being held up by a gun in the hands of George Emery, who resides in Belmont Township, about eight miles north of Havelock. To-day preliminary steps have been taken to have Emery arrested by the county police on a charge of interfering with the officials in the performance of their duty. Mr. Spence and Mr. Henry went to Belmont Township for the purpose of investigating a complaint respecting a number of children said to belong to Emery, and, if necessary, bring them to the Shelter. Arriving on the scene, the officials quickly decided to bring the children to the Shelter, and were proceeding to put their plan into effect when George Emery seized a rifle from inside of the tent and threatened to use it on the officials.

Reasoned With the Man.

Mr. Spence remonstrated with the man for upwards of an hour without success, and rather than use force and endanger the lives of others, the officials decided to return to Peterborough and place the matter in the hands of the county police.

With Mr. Spence and Mr. Henry was Mr. H. McCannon, who took the officials out to the place in an automobile. Before returning arrangements were made with a nearby farmer to take care of the children.

It appears that the man, his wife and five children were living in a tent that was none too plentifully supplied with the necessities of life. According to the party who supplied the officials with the information concerning the case, the children had nothing to eat but soggy bread, and were insufficiently clad. The weather of yesterday gave the officials some idea of the privations suffered by the children, and it was to relieve their distress that arrangements were made to have them taken care of by a neighbour until they can be brought to the Shelter. Up till last week, George Emery's father was said to be living with him, making in all seven people in the one tent.

Seized a Rifle.

Mr. Spence assured Emery that as soon as he was in better circumstances the children would be returned to him. After thoroughly explaining the situation, Mr. Spence made a move towards the tent for the purpose of securing the children. Emery sprang in ahead of him, and, seizing a rifle, dared the officials to enter and remove the children. The officials claim that it would have been a very easy matter to have seized Emery, but they had no desire to use violence under the circumstances.

The matter has been turned over to the county police, who will take proceedings necessary to place Emery in custody.

The family live in an isolated part of the country, and the trip was made over very bad roads.

Seed of Several Kinds For Crops — Warning From the Agricultural College.

GUELPH, Nov. 9.—Prof. Zavitz of the Agricultural College warns Ontario farmers of a serious scarcity of seed for "barley, oats, potatoes, corn and alfalfa. I would advise any farmer who has a good quality of these to be very careful what he does with them. There was a lot of grain thrashed out that will not do for seed. It is not advisable to import seed from other Provinces or from other countries, as there is always the danger of smut grain, which we have been trying to eradicate."

CANADIANS' WIVES BETTER AT HOME

OTTAWA, November 9. — An official memorandum issued by the Government to-day calls attention to the difficulty which is likely to arise out of the movement to England of the wives and families of Canadian soldiers. The memorandum follows:

"Information has been received pointing to the serious position in which, in all probability, the women and families of Canadian soldiers, who have gone to live in England during the war, may find themselves. The transportation problem is already sufficiently acute and when it is considered what a large amount of shipping will be needed to bring the troops themselves back to Canada, the difficulty of providing for the return of the wives and families may be appreciated.

"It is strongly urged by the Government that all who may be contemplating going to England should seriously consider this question, as it may well prove to be one of great embarrassment to them."

PTE. JOHN WILSON IS OFFICIALLY REPORTED ON THE MISSING LIST

Another Peterboro' Soldier Unaccounted For—Directors of National Service Meet at Ottawa to Discuss New Methods of Recruiting—To-day's General Military News

An official message was received from Ottawa this morning to the effect that Pte. John Wilson, of the Canadian Infantry, is officially reported missing. Pte. Wilson enlisted in an outside unit. Mrs. Bertha Wilson, of Peterborough, is the next of kin.

The Executive Committee of the Peterborough Returned Soldiers' Club met last night at the home of the president, Sergt. Victor, and discussed plans for the future. The club will hold a card party and concert a week from Monday for returned men. It was decided to meet all returning soldiers at the station when possible, and also to extend them a general welcome at the next meeting of the Club following their return.

OTTAWA, Nov. 9.—A conference of the Divisional Officers commanding the military districts of Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces was held with Mr. F. B. McCurdy, the acting Minister of Militia, at Militia Headquarters here to-day. The conference was summoned by Mr. McCurdy in the absence of General Sir Sam Hughes to discuss recruiting plans and progress, and to give opportunity for an exchange of ideas as to how to meet the recent falling off in recruiting and bring battalions so far authorized up to strength.

No announcement as to detailed conclusions was made at the end of the conference this evening. It is understood that a number of the military men are urging some form of modified conscription in order to effectively secure the enlistment of the thousands of slackers who should be made available for military service. The Government, however, is for the present at least against any form of compulsion.

A number of suggestions were made with a view to preventing overlapping in recruiting efforts, and to securing a more systematic canvass of each local area. These suggestions will be more fully considered by the Government and by the Headquarters Staff before any definite new policy is adopted.

Mr. R. B. Bennett, M.P., Director-General of National Service, was also called in, and discussed with the officers his plans for a census of available man-power in Canada, and the proposals as yet only in tentative shape for systematizing recruiting efforts either for military or for industrial work.

73 Per Cent. Canadian Born.

COBOURG, Nov. 9.—Of the 336 men who have signed up here for overseas service with the Cobourg Heavy Battery since the outbreak of the war, 200 were residents of Cobourg, and 73 per cent., or 243, are Canadian born. This week three new recruits were enrolled with the sixth overseas draft from the Cobourg Heavy Battery here.

The Kingston Standard says: A Returned Soldiers' Association has been formed in Peterborough, and the local Veterans' Association has been asked to assist in completing the organization. One of the local officers will probably be sent to Peterborough to give the returned soldiers assistance in completing their organization work.

The Lindsay Warder says:

In the near future, probably the first week in December, the local branch of the Soldiers' Aid Commission intend to hold a public meeting, or entertainment, at which medals will be presented to returned heroes and heroines, including: Bandsman Moyse, who returned about a week or so ago from Bramshott Camp, Eng., suffering from nervous breakdown; Pte. Percy Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Brown, of Ops, who is now working in Toronto; Pte. Steve Ingle, who served with a Battalion, at Bermuda, and was honourably discharged, and Miss Tilly Mann, trained nurse, who is at present convalescing in Canada.

It might be mentioned that Drummer Moyse has two brothers at the front, both drummers, while his father is the expert drummer of the 48th Highlanders, of Toronto, now on active service.

Little Chance of Changing Rules For Sending of Parcel

Orders concerning parcels for prisoners of war in Germany are made by the British authorities. They apply to persons in Britain and Australia as well as Canada.

While the Canadian Government hopes for an extension of time that will enable Canadian relatives and friends to send Christmas parcels to prisoners, though the new plan is scheduled to take effect December 1, yet there seems little likelihood of any further change than this.

Must Be Censorship.

The British authorities take the view that there must be a system established which will enable them to censor all parcels in order that information may not be conveyed to the enemy.

No explanation yet has been received of the reason the order applies to privates and not to officers and non-coms.

The Canadian Government has received many protests from persons in Canada who have relatives held behind the German lines.

However, all that the Canadian Government can do is to make representations.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Woodrow Wilson and Thomas R. Marshall have again been elected President and Vice-President. Soon after 11 o'clock to-night all the doubtful States except New Hampshire and Minnesota had given Wilson such a steady lead that his election was no longer in doubt. When, at 11:25, the news came that Chester R. Howell, the Republican State Chairman in California, had conceded the State to the Democrats, the disputed election of 1916 was no longer in dispute.

Fifty hours after the polls closed in California Republican Chairman Howell conceded the State to the President. Thus the thirteen votes needed to assure the President a majority in the Electoral College dropped into the Democratic column, and

PTE. STOCKDALE WAS WOUNDED IN A BAYONET CHARGE

Member of 93rd Battalion Tells of Fighting at Close Quarters With the Huns When Latter Attacked Canadian Trench

AN INTERESTING LETTER

Miss Doris Warren, 514 Patterson street, has received an interesting letter telling how Pte. George Stockdale, of the 93rd Battalion, was wounded

The letter ran in parts as follows:

"We were up the big Somme front line for two days and nights, and on the fourth morning about half past two, the Germans made an attack on us, on a four hundred and fifty yard front, so we waited till they got half way, and then we jumped out of our trench at them. It was a great fight, but I never saw it through. After killing four big Germans with my bayonet, and just as one was making to kill me, I got hit on my hip with a bullet, and I at once fell to the ground, but thank God I had a little strength left in me, for another big German was right on top of me with a bayonet ready to kill me, but I saw him and sprang at him with the butt end of my rifle. He at once turned around and fled, and I could not run after him. I had to crawl to the first field aid and get dressed. The rest of the boys went on fighting, but don't know how they came out. I hope they are well. I learned soon after that they captured the German front line and advanced four hundred and fifty yards, more honour for the Peterborough boys. I am nearly better now, having been in hospital four weeks in England. I may have a chance to go and see my mother after escaping death so soon."

It may be remembered that Pte. G. J. Stockdale was one of the N.C.O.s who took the special course in bayonet fighting and physical drilling in the B. F. and P. T. School, London, Ont., but gave up his stripes on entering the trenches.

LATE NEWS OF THE ELECTION

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

RHINECLIFF, N. Y., Nov. 10. — President Wilson was greeted as "the next president" when he came ashore from his yacht Mayflower to-day, en route to Williamstown, Mass. A big crowd greeted the President and Mrs. Wilson and cheered both. The President was looking fine and wore a happy smile as he responded to the greeting. He has been kept informed of California's vote count by wireless during the night.

No Congratulations.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Early this forenoon Hughes had sent no message of congratulation to President Wilson. This was taken in some quarters as indicating that he may delay this usual exchange until the official count is complete in all close states. Chairman Wilcox and Hughes have not yet conceded defeat.

The Soldier Vote.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 10.—The soldier vote will probably decide whether Hughes or Wilson will get Minnesota's electoral vote. The result will probably not be known before next Tuesday.

Still Hangs On.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Chairman Willcox of the Republican National Committee at 12:26 issued the following statement: "The result still depends upon the vote of a few close states. It must be borne in mind that the returns thus far announced are in most states unofficial and may be changed by the official count required by the laws of those states.

THE PRESIDENCY.

The question of the future presidency of the United States is still unsettled. Both Wilson and Hughes refused to be beaten, and while this situation is maintained no President is really elected. The situation is so close that definite results depend upon recounts. However, popular opinion inclines to the election of Wilson; that, probably, if he gets the consent of Germany, he may be President of the United States for the next four years, though it is feared that the paper famine may affect the presidential occupation of writing notes.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY.

The twenty-third annual report of the Children's Aid Society of Ontario—to give it its most familiar and significant title—coming simultaneously with the annual meeting of the local society, adds interest to the subject of which it treats. The report of the latter tells us, as all who observe with reasonable interest, can see, of what it has done and is doing for the rescue from ill treatment and the menace of a vicious future, of children of tender years, and setting their feet in the path of virtue and placing them in the ranks of respectable and useful society.

The provincial report, covering a wider field, demonstrates the splendid sum of benediction. The key-note of the society's work is "rescue the perishing" save the child from neglect in vicious or squalid homes, and put it in the way of becoming a good man or woman. Children in homes — or dwelling places, for they cannot be called homes — subjected to cold, hunger, nakedness, blows, and above all, to not only physical neglect, but neglect of all moral training or example, are on the downward grade, especially if we have added the vicious example of vicious parents. Rescued by the Society, after a preliminary training and treatment in Shelter, they are placed in foster homes, and become honest and useful members of society, better than many having had the advantage of good homes from infancy. It is worth remarking that the report states that over five hundred young men, wards and ex-wards of the society, have enlisted for active service abroad. But for the work of the society a large proportion of these might have, instead, enlisted for compulsory service in penal institutions.

In the quarter century since the society was established, ten thousand children—the raw material for criminal or vicious lives— have passed through the society's hands, cared for and placed in foster homes. The vast majority of these have become self-supporting and five hundred have been married and become heads of homes. What this means is partly expressed by the fact that not two per cent. of the ten thousand rescued have found their way to the prisons of the province. Whereas, judging by the vicious influence they were surrounded by and would have been surrounded by, before rescue, it is probable that 20 per cent. would have been prison inmates or vicious, dangerous and unprofitable members of the community—the mean criminals and the victims of absolute idle.

On the economic side it is safe to say, according to the Provincial Secretary, that every man and woman saved from crime or pauperism or institutions, for the public, whether maintained by the municipality or the province, means a saving of $800 effected—a net gain of nearly $3,000, if one accepts the prevalent estimate that every good, productive citizen is worth $3,800 to the state.

Considering everything, it is not only a duty, but a profitable exercise of influence or endeavour for every citizen to assist the powerful but quietly working influence of the Children's Aid Society.

A DAMAGING LIBEL.

Government organs are apt and eager to denounce as treason any criticism of the government in regard to its administration of the country's war responsibility, in that such criticism prevents recruiting and destroys the harmony of non-partisan co-operation in the work of the common cause. But that is as nothing compared with the disuniting influence of irritating and libellous statements made by representative government supporters proof of such a spirit by a journal of Mr. W. K. McNaughton of Toronto speaking from a public platform made the declaration that "the fighting in this war is largely being done by the Conservative party". Apart from the disturbing and disuniting influence of such a statement, it is insultingly and libellously untrue. While Liberals do not flaunt their loyalty, but live it and die for it, there are thousands of Liberal homes in Canada darkened by the shadow of the death of their loved ones, killed in action; and thousands of hearts of Liberal wives, sisters and mothers are anxious over the perils of thousands of their brave relatives now making sacrifice and fighting to the hilt in the war zone. Liberals and Conservatives mourn together and there is no party distinction in the common interest that unites the people of Canada. Such intemperate and libellous language tends to work injury to the cause of recruiting and national co-operation in war work; but insult is added to injujry by the brasenly patronizing statement on the same occasion by the same speaker that "many Liberals are loyal". How much such language is out of sympathy with the spirit of national co-operation prevalent, is shown by the fact of the splendid reproof of such, a spirit by a journal of the slandering Mr. McNaught's own party. We don't often find occasion to reproduce with approval of the words and spirit, many of the utterances of the Orange Sentinel, but heartily endorse the following from its columns in effective rebuke of mischief makers like the speaker referred it. Here is what the Sentinel says:—

> By an unguarded remark from a Toronto Alderman the loyalty of the Liberals in Canada has been called in question. Nothing could be more unfortunate. There are hundreds of homes in the Dominion saddened by the loss of sons—some of them only sons—whose fathers have been lifelong Liberals. In the English-speaking Provinces Liberals have done their full share in giving men and money to defend the Empire. The Chairman of the Patriotic Fund in Toronto is Sir William Mulock. Associated with him are many of the most prominent Liberals in the city. Men like E. F. Malone and J. D. Allan have suffered the loss of sons who were among the most promising of the young men of the city. The raising of such a question at this time is due to the thoughtlessness, and is exceedingly regrettable.

"THE BETTER CLASS."

If any working man was in doubt of where he stands in the levels of society he is now told. Our evening contemporary, in a somewhat premature discussion of the results of the Presidential election, discovered the reasons why Wilson developed surprising strength. It says, in the middle of its article:

> "It was in the Western States that Wilson developed surprising strength. The Socialists and working classes in that section must have supported him to a man * * * the latter in gratitude for his eight-hour legislation, as it applies to the employees of railways."

The article concludes with this paragraph:

> "If Hughes has been defeated, it can at least be said of him that he was not vanquished by the votes of the better class of the electorate."

Anyone with the slightest knowledge of the meaning of language, taking the two paragraphs quoted, together, can understand that our evening contemporary considers the working classes as an inferior order.

In connection with the above it is interesting to note that under the heading "A paper for the workingman," our contemporary makes this statement:

> "The Review is the only paper that prints and discusses matters of interest to the working man."

If the circulation department of our contemporary would present this statement along with the editorial opinion expressed above, it would be a great business getter.

Mr. Rowell On Britain's Marvellous Achievements In Fighting and in Finance

KINGSTON, Nov. 10.—"Britain's Effort" was the subject of Mr. Rowell's address here on Thursday evening before the alumni conference at Grant Hall, Queen's University. In a comprehensive speech including nearly all Britain's war activities, Mr. Rowell brought out an astonishing array of facts, showing in the most illuminating way the marvellous achievements in organization and finance of the British people during the war.

He compared what they had accomplished with what was expected of them at first by the allies and showed that any limited liability plan such as had been theoretically contemplated was impossible. It was even more impossible to-day and this applied to Canada as well as to Great Britain.

Mr. Rowell reviewed the development since the opening of the war, of the army and navy, munitions, finance, air service, trasport, army medical service and other branches of activity.

As a sample of the interesting information he brought out there, is the following:—

According to the Minister of Munitions, Mr. Montague, the output which in 1914-15 it took 12 months to produce, can now be obtained from home sources in the following periods:

18 pounder ammunition—3 weeks.
Field Howitzer munition—2 weeks.
Medium size shell—11 days.
Heavy shell—4 days.

That there is need for this enormous increase of productive power is shown by the fact that the preliminary bombardment in the week before the opening of the Somme offensive consumed more light and medium ammunition than the total amount manufactured at home during the first eleven months of the war, while heavy munition manufactured during the same period would not have kept the bombardment going for a single day.

One or two examples of the magnitude of the financial operations:—

The public debt, which before the war was $32,550,000 is now $10,720,000,000. The estimated total at the end of the present fiscal year, March 31, 1917 is $15,325,000,000 and in August at approximately $20,000,000,000. At that time, therefore, the interest at 5 per cent on the national debt would equal the total annual revenue of Great Britain before the war, which was approximately $1,000,000,000.

Mr. Rowell gave details of the astonishing amount of taxes being levied in Great Britain, particularly on the wealthy classes. He referred to it as the "conscription of wealth" and remarked on the cheerfulness with which the burden was being borne.

As a result of this taxation the annual income of Great Britain has $1,685 oinf yoins floinfleatfl ok risen from $10,000,000,000 before the war to $1,685,000,000 in 1915-16 and with an estimated revenue for the current fiscal year of $4,545,000,000, including not less than $430,000,000 from the excess profits tax alone.

In the afternoon Mr. Rowell spoke to the Women's Canadian Club on what he had seen at the front.

THE STUDY OF RUSSIA WILL BE AN INTERESTING SERIES OF ADDRESSES

In connection with the classes now being conducted at the Y.W.C.A. on the study of Russia, Mr. Morris gave a most interesting and graphic paper on the geography of Russia on Tuesday night. Mr. Morris' address was a scholarly and instructive one, and a most auspicious opening to this most interesting series. Miss Williams of the Collegiate staff will give the next address on "The Resources, Products, and Transportation." The public generally is cordially invited to this class, which will be of the greatest interest.

A very comprehensive course of study has been planned. Each week, some particular phase of the subject will be treated in a twenty-minute or half hour paper, while the rest of the evening will be devoted to general discussion of the topic. Announcement will be made later of those who will take the subjects for the other evenings. The programme as planed is as follows:

1. The Geography of Russia.
2. Resources, Products, and Transportation.
3. The Races of Russia.
4. General Sketch of Russian History up to Peter the Great.
5. Modern Russia — A Historical Sketch.
6. Imperial Government.
7. Local Self Government.
8. Social Life—Town.
9. Social Life—Country.
10. Religion.
11. Education.
12. Literature—A General Sketch.
13. Literature—Tolstoi and Other Novelists.
14. Art—Music and Printing.
15. Siberia.
16. Army and Navy.
17. Russia in the Present War.

HOLLWEG'S ADDRESS TO THE REICHSTAG

German Chancellor Has Entirely New Version of How War Came About

Berlin, Nov. 10.—Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg's address to the War Committee of the Reichstag, which had been awaited eagerly on account of the semi-official announcement that he would make important statements, was delivered yesterday. The Chancellor presented a new version of events in the last days before the outbreak of the war, particularly in connection with Russia's mobilization and efforts to avert hostilities.

The Chancellor referred to the situation on July 30, 1914, two days before Germany declared war on Russia. The German Ambassador at Vienna had been instructed to request Austria-Hungary most urgently to reach an understanding with Russia, making it clear that Germany did not desire to be drawn into a world war in consequence of disregard of her advice. Austria-Hungary agreed to Germany's suggestion, he said:

"With this," the Chancellor continued, "compare the following steps taken by Lord Grey (British Foreign Secretary): On July 29, 1914, the Russian ambassador at London said that German and Austro-Hungarian circles were under the impression that England would remain quiet. Lord Grey replied: 'This impression is removed by the orders which we gave to the main fleet.' On July 29 he informed the French ambassador of a confidential warning which had been given to our Ambassador in London that Germany ought to be prepared for quick decisions of England, which meant England's participation in the war. Could Lord Grey suppose that such a disclosure made to the French Ambassador would be of service to the cause of peace? Was not the French representative obliged to consider this disclosure as a promise of armed assistance in case of war? Must not France have been encouraged by this to give to Russia a promise of the unconstitutional fellowship in war asked for so urgently for days? And must Russia not have been strengthened to the utmost by this certainty of a British and French alliance in her intentions to wage war?

"The Russian answer to the morning conversation of Lord Grey, indeed, came as quickly as was expected. On the evening of the same day, July 29, M. Sasonoff (Russian Foreign Minister) instructed the Russian Ambassador at Paris, to express to the French Government sincere thanks for the declaration given to him by the French ambassador that Russia could count completely upon the assistance of France."

REPORTS BRITISH PLAN TO CALL MEN OF 45.

Berlin, November 9.—The London correspondent of the Paris Temps wires that according to hisinformation there is small prospect that England will be able to make up the shortage of available men for the front from Irish sources. The last revolution there has made Englishmen over cautious.

It is now hoped to gain the needed reinforcements by mobilizing men from the industrial works. It is further proposed to raise the age service limit to 45, in spite of heavy public opposition.

Pictures of Collegiate Dead To Be Hung In The Institute Halls

The Collegiate Institute boys of recent and past years who have given their lives for the Empire are to be remembered in death by the old school with its successive classes through an idea that Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, the Principal, has suggested and has already begun to put into effect. It is his intention to obtain photographs of these former students and arrange them in a gallery of honour as a recognition of their sacrifice and as a constant reminder and edification to the students of tomorrow.

The Collegiate's honour roll is mounting up, and it is comparatively easy to recall a number of the old boys, beginning with Major Bennet, Lieut. Arthur Ackerman, who was decorated with the Military Cross, Lieut. Harold Matthews, Lieut. W. Morris, Lieut. Stanley Fife, Privates George Minorgan, Bill Gibson, Harry Edmison, Barker Dean, Jim English, Cecil Feeney, Laidlaw Anderson, Merton Adams, and others.

Do everything on the right day, when possible.

Get up early on busy days; it is easy to work when it is cool and quiet.

A hot-water bottle should be only half full. It is then soft and comfortable to use.

Keep your house clean and tidy, especially your living room.

SPLENDID ADDRESS ON THE WORK OF THE NAVY

Large Audience Heard Lieut. Ellis Last Night—British Sailors' Relief Fund Brought Prominently Before the People of Peterborough—Resolution is Passed.

Moved by Judge Huycke, seconded by Dean McColl, and carried unanimously—

That the thanks of this meeting be expressed to Lieutenant Ellis, R.N., for his interesting and instructive address on the British navy.

And that this meeting do strongly recommend the claims of the British Sailors' Relief Fund to the generous support of the citizens of the City and County of Peterborough.

And that this meeting do further request the executive officers of the local branch of this fund to take such steps as may be necessary to bring this fund to the attention of the general public so that by public grant or private subscription or by both methods a sum may be raised worthy of the splendid sacrifices of life and health made during the present war by the British sailors of the Royal Navy and the British mercantile services.

The above resolution was unanimously carried by the large audience in the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall last night, when Lieut. Ellis of the Royal Navy, gave a most enlightening and interesting illustrated address on the nation's safeguard—the British Navy.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, who was chairman of the evening, made a short address before introducing Lieut. Ellis. He explained that the object of Lieut. Ellis' lecture was not for recruiting purposes, but to solicit aid for the families of the heroes on the trawlers of the sea, many of whom have already given their lives for their country. Mr. Kerr hoped that the recent reports of terrible storms at sea would make the appeal more realistic. To bring the navy nearer home, Mr. Kerr referred to Mr. Corkery's son Vincent who is now wearing the British blues.

Mr. Kerr then introduced Lieut. Ellis, who, he explained, had served in the British Navy for some years on the Caesar, Cressy and Irresistible, from which ship Mr. Ellis had taken the splendid views shown.

A great many in these inland towns said Lieu. Ellis, know very little of the work and management of the British navy, but I was surprised today on entering a street car in this city, when a small boy seeing my uniform said, 'Oh I know who you are; you belong to the navy; I am from Portsmouth.' Then there are in this city many immigrants from the British Isles. Even in England there are those who have never seen a ship on the sea. I know of two old ladies who came a great distance to see Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, who was scheduled to arrive in Portsmouth soon. On arriving at the harbour they, seeing Nelson's flagship, the Victory, which has been at Portsmouth ever since the battle of Trafalgar, mistook it for the Terrible, which was to have brought Mr. Chamberlain, and went away much disappointed, saying, 'Too late, too late.'

I think it magnificent the splendid response the people who can know little or nothing of the sea or the navy, made. What we do all know is that every soldier who has taken part in the war and had to cross any water, to do so has been carried aboard a British man of war and carried safely. Not one British transport has perished. The lines of communication have been kept open by the navy throughout the war.

Before the war Germany impressed its people that her navy must be of such strength that it would be ready to undertake any risks involved should a war come. Here Germany was preparing against the only other great power—Great Britain.

The work of the navy is silent, but safe. Why? I will illustrate how a matter of, seemingly no significance can affect the fleet. An officer on Admiral Jellicoe's ship went out on deck one morning, took a photo of the admiral and sent it to a friend in a club in London. A newspaper man seeing the snap at once secured the photo. It appeared next morning in a London newspaper. At breakfast that day Admiral Jellicoe on receiving the paper ordered the fleet to leave the harbour immediately. The background of the snap was a distinct outline of the coast where the fleet was, and its position could be ascertained by anyone knowing the coast. The German fleet was in the Kaiser Wilhelm canal previous to the building of the Kiel [illegible]. Germany saw how by bringing their fleet down into the Kiel they would have a better chance of attacking the British fleet. Britain is not as blind or stupid as the Germans would have us believe—some years previous to the war a British ship with a pilot visited the Kiel Canal. In the night a heavy fog fell. In the morning the British man of war had left the canal and had not required a pilot. I should not be at all surprised to hear some morning that the British submarines had also paid the Kiel a call.

The German sailors are trained as well, and their guns are as good as ours, but they have not the invincible tradition of our navy. When the great naval [illegible] to come, [illegible] look for [illegible] war in six months.

My appeal is not for recruits, whom I know are needed to take the place of our heroes of Jutland—it is for the families of those men who already have gone. In Portsmouth alone there is a street over a mile long; in every house but one there is the widow or the children of one of the brave men. Will we see them want? Navy recruits are wanted, and they are dealt well with—you may enlist today, get a uniform to-morrow and be at sea the next week. The pay is good—$1.10 a day—Mc. paid while on board, the balance kept for your return or given to your family, as you wish. This is to prevent jealousy, as the British tar receives only 30c. a day.

I would like to interest you all in the sailors' relief. The fund is similar to others, but we do not require socks. The British navy is self contained to a great extent. It is the men on the trawlers and life boats we wish to assist. We want you to show your practical sympathy by helping to send Christmas cheer to the families of these men. I would like for a moment to explain the submarines of the British navy. They are always on the job safeguarding the men of war. We protect our men of war from the German subs and torpedoes by wire netting lowered when an attack is expected. We have [illegible] in the navy. Day in and day out we are practising when not in action, ready to meet the foe. The only difference when in action is that the target shoots back.

The Germans have broken all unwritten law in firing on our trawlers. These, by tradition, are left unharmed, as our Lord's disciples were fishermen. Now, however, the trawlers to a great extent have been taken over by the Admiralty, and are fishing for subs and mines. Our harbours are protected from mines which might be laid at night or in a fog by the enemy thus—a line of mines, twenty to a mile, is laid. The order to fire is given and the mines explode at once. The explosion causes all enemy mines also to explode, leaving the sea clear for our men of war.

Next in importance for the safety of the fleet is the aeroplane service. The value of these auxiliaries was proven when the coast of Belgium was bombarded. Our aeroplanes watched how the battle went and signalled the British ships how to direct their fire at a 15 mile range. Our birdmen watched the Canadians help save Calais.

The enemy aeroplane menace has been minimized by the antedote discovered by Lieut. Robinson, R.N. We have not been bothered by them since.

It is our duty to help the families of the men who transport, or assist in transporting, Canada's sons to the firing line.

Two splendid musical numbers were given during the evening.

A solo, "The Lass With the Delicate Air" by Miss Dorothy Allen, who was accompanied on the piano by Mr. Buchanan, and a solo by Mr. Douglas Carlisle, "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep."

The solo which was to be given by Mrs. Sherry was, to the great disappointment of all, not given, as Mrs. Sherry could not be in town.

Music & Drama

"THE CONSPIRACY."

A fair-sized audience attended the Grand last night and witnessed the most powerful detective drama of the New York underworld ever staged. The Conspiracy was the best production made by the late Charles Frohman, and was running at The Play House when he met his untimely death. In the hands of the Royal Alexandra Players, this play was given an intensity of action that is seldom equalled by Stock Companies, all the roles being well handled, especially that of Margaret Holt, which was played by Uarda Sayre who gave such a realistic interpretation of the part that at times her audience was fairly lifted from their seats.

To-night this popular company is going to repeat their opening play, 'The Slaves of the Mills.' This play is the strongest argument ever advanced by either the working man or the capitalist; it gives a fair argument for both sides, but it favours neither, but leaves the audience to decide which is right.

Under its original title of 'The Lost Paradise,' this play caused the riots in The Coeur de Leon mining district. This strike was so bitterly fought by both sides that several people were killed and the State militia had to be called out to quell the rioting. The Nevada Legislature was in session at the time and pending an investigation into the miners' conditions the play was placed under the official ban. It served its purpose though, for in the investigation that followed the deplorable condition of the miners and their families was brought to light and measures for the remedying of the same were started and carried out.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

In the early stages kidney trouble is known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone, rheumatic pains and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. The thorough action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and disorders and make you well again.

JUNIPER ISLAND MAY BE MANAGED INSTEAD OF LEASED NEXT YEAR

The Stoney Lake Cottagers' Association are considering the re-leasing of the store at Juniper Island, which has been conducted during the past seven years, by Mr. Harry W. Stock. Owing to the conditions prevailing as a result of the war the Association may simply engage a manager for the store until the war is over, when a lease would probably be more favorably regarded by prospective lessees. In any case Mr. Stock will be missed next summer by the cottagers. During his occupancy Juniper Island store and pavilion reached the height of their popularity, a popularity that is maintained under conditions most satisfactory to the Association. Mr. Stock found it impossible to continue at Juniper Island, owing to the increased demands of his business occasioned by the enlistment of his son, Lieut. A. P. Stock, with the 93rd Battalion, and hence did not renew his lease.

BIG INCREASE

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—The Dominion financial statement for the month of October and the ten months of the fiscal year up to October 31 shows an increase in revenue of slightly over $34,000,000 as compared with the same period last year. The total revenue for ten months was 34 millions greater than last year, including twenty-four millions due to the increased customs collections, five millions to public works, including railways, almost two million to excise, one million to postal revenue and the remainder to miscellaneous items. Ordinary expenditures show an increase of about one million dollars, while capital expenditure has dropped from nineteen to thirteen millions. Since Oct. 31st, 1915, the national debt has increased from 402 millions to 605 millions. The war expenditure for October was just little less than 23 millions. In October, 1915, it was nine millions.

SUCCESSFUL CONCERT

A most successful programme was given by the Songster Brigade, assisted by the Band, at the S. A. Temple last evening. Bushels of stuff for soldiers' comforts were gathered in and will be sent away, together with socks, cakes, gum, etc., for Christmas.

Ensign Hurd will remain over tonight and there will be a special meeting at the Temple. All are invited.

The contributions received included pens, envelopes, paper, gum, in all enough to fill eighty-five boxes. These boxes will be forwarded to the soldiers belonging to the Salvation Army in the different units. The evening was very pleasantly spent and the excellent musical numbers must enjoyed.

SKELETONS WERE UNEARTHED BY SHOVEL

LINDSAY, Nov. 10.—The C. P. R. steam shovel, which is at work digging out gravel from the hill just back of the C.P.R. station at Bobcaygeon, unearthed a number of skeletons, the ground above having many years ago been used as a burying ground. It was the first cemetery in this locality and was used when the thick forest stood right to the lake shore.

A man named Murdock was the first to be buried there. Coming from the old land he was taken ill on shipboard and shortly after coming here he died and was buried in this old cemetery. His wife, some years later, died at the Scotch Line and her body was brought down to Bobcaygeon in a dug-out canoe and carried through the woods to be laid to rest beside her husband.

Years ago most of the bodies were removed from the old cemetery and placed in the Verulam cemetery, but evidently there were some which remained undisturbed until the big modern mechanical navvy came along and brought their bones tumbling down to the ground below.

GIRLS HAIR CUT OFF BY REJECTED SUITOR

TORONTO, Nov. 10.—Because Miss Alice BaBughan, 617 Davenport road, rejected his proposal of marriage, John H. Simons, 32 St. Albans avenue, sheared off her beautiful tresses. Arrested yesterday by Detective Carter on a charge of assault. Carter says the young man told him that he had cut off the girl's locks because he thought that the loss of her hair would so detract from the young lady's appearance that she would then consider Simons' proposal. The latter is of the opinion that no other will be willing to marry a girl who has her hair clipped.

The hair-cutting incident occurred at the young lady's home Wednesday night in the presence of the girl's mother. According to the young lady, Simons had frequently made himself obnoxious to her by persistent offers of marriage. He continually followed her and tried to force his suit. She would have none of him. When he visited at her home last night, all her exhortations that he should not bother her any longer fell on deaf ears. Finally as the girl turned away from him to go over to her mother, Simons, she says, snatched a pair of scissors from his pocket, evidently specially brought along for the occasion, and rapidly unknotting the girl's hair, deftly sheared it off near the head.

Followed by the screaming girl and her mother, Simons rushed out into an adjoining lane where he continued to cut the hair into shreds. He then made his escape.

U.S. TOMATOES AT 20 CENTS A CAN

OTTAWA, Nov. 9.—Canned tomatoes at 20 cents a tin will be available to the Ottawa housekeepers hereafter. The F. J. Castle Co., Ltd., has imported a stock from Maryland, and is selling it to eager retailers at $2.10 a dozen, three pound cans. This means 20 cents a can for the consumer, while Canadian canners are charging $2.60 a dozen for the three pounds cans, that retail at 25 cents this year, where last year the house wife bought two cans for a quarter.

One Ottawa grocer said: The Canadian canners have put on a smaller tin, of two and one-half pounds, which they offer to us for $2.40 a doz., and some dealers have old stock left over which they are offering at 20 cents a can, but all those who have fresh goods, and have had to pay the advanced price are looking to the American tomatoes to solve the problem of prohibitive prices.

"They are first-class goods, and I don't believe that the Canadian canners will sell their stock in competition.

"It is a well-known fact that they told the farmers not to raise the usual number of tomatoes this year, because the shortage of cans would make it impossible for the canners to take them. The season was bad, and many of the plants that were put out failed to produce. There you have the reason for the Canadian prices."

MARY PICKFORD AT THE EMPIRE

There is an extra good programme at the Empire Theatre to-day and to-morrow. Mary Pickford will appear in the Eternal Grind. There is a good comedy "The Soap Suds Star and Mutt and Jeff" in the Big League" all at the Empire to-day and to-morrow.

FLOUR DEARER THAN IN THE CIVIL WAR.

Boston Transcript: With the advance of high grade flour to $10 per barrel, we are told that flour has risen to "the highest price since the Civil War." It has really reached a higher price than it brought during th Civil War, for the high rate which then prevailed was expressed in terms of paper money, and at one time during the war a dollar in gold was worth $2.85 in paper. In terms of gold the highest price attained by flour during the Civil War was $4.90 a barrel. We are therefore now paying in gold twice the price for flour that was paid in the Civil War. The present price neither of flour, wheat nor cotton is a record price. In 1795 flour sold at $12 per barrel and in 1796 at $16. A hundred years ago, in 1815, it was $14.75 a barrel. Wheat is now at $1.83 per bushel, December delivery, but in 1854 wheat brought $2.21 per bushel; in 1855 $2.43; in 1866 $3.09, in 1869, $2.05 gold. In the meantime wages are very much higher than they were in either one of the year, named. There have been many periods in which the prices of these necessaries of life, relatively to wages, were much greater than they are now.

WAR IS NOW RACE BETWEEN SHELL PLANTS

By C. F. Bertelli.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—War's final phase inaugurated this week is in the form of the most dramatic armament race the world has yet seen. General von Stein has announced that Germany, surprised on the Somme by the Entente Allies' superior output, began at once to increase hugely her supplies of guns and shells.

"Every parcel of the country's energy must be devoted to the production of munitions," said Marshal von Hindenburg, commander-in-chief. "We come straight from the Somme," said General von Stein. We must do everything in our power to surpass the enemy's gun and shell output. I'm going to apply myself to this task."

Last March the Allies began their greatest munitions effort and this month they are taking up Germany's workshop challenge. So that the world war in this coming winter will be fought principally in European munitions plants. Victory next spring will go to the side able to project the largest and deadliest shell-screens.

That the race already has begun is clear from the absolute famine in steel for commercial purposes. All over Europe every available ton is going for military or naval purposes.

It isn't permissible to indicate the stupendous dimensions of the effort being made in France, England, Russia and Italy, in addition to the American output, but I possess positive information showing a desperate counter-move by the Central Empires has begun. It includes withdrawal this week of 17,000 troops from the Eastern front for munition factories and means remodelling the whole army organization.

In the summer of 1915 Mackensen's gun phalanx struck a successful blow in Galicia. This summer Germany made a similar munitions effort to meet the Volhynia menace and effectively carry on the Roumanian campaign.

To do this she had to create new divisions, most of which do not represent fresh effectives, but troops gleaned from old divisions.

What is new about them, however, is the enormous war material wherewith they are furnished. Every fresh division represents one hundred guns added to the German artillery total. The successes of both von Falkenhayn and von Mackensen in Roumania were won by the colossal concentration of brand-new heavy guns.

PRESIDENT WILSON IS AGAIN THE CHOICE

apparently ended the suspense and anxiety of an election which has been unparalleled in American political history.

North Dakota's five votes in the Electoral College were conceded to President Wilson to-night by William Lemke, Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, when returns from all but thirty-three precincts in the State gave the President a plurality of 1,560 over Hughes.

Nothing to Say.

Republican Chairman Wilcox when informed that the President had carried California only replied: "I have nothing to say."

Secretary Tumulty, at the summer White House at Shadow Lawn, sent the news by wireles to President Wilson on board the yacht Mayflower en route to Rhinecliff, N.Y.

The California returns showed that, with only forty-eight districts missing, the President's plurality in the State was 2,970.

Barring some wholly unexpected turnover in the incomplete States leaning toward Hughes, or a change on a recount, California's acquisition to the Democratic column gave the President 300 Electoral votes, without New Mexico's three. In New Mexico at midnight the President was leading by 2,094 votes, with 180 districts missing, and it was not believed this advantage could be overcome by Mr. Hughes.

Conceding West Virginia, New Hampshire and Minnesota to Mr. Hughes—and he was in the lead in all three—only gives him 259 votes, seven less than the required majority. With 272 votes in sight President Wilson had six to spare for a possible split of electors in California or a sudden reversal in New Mexico.

Hughes Holds Minnesota.

This morning the States in doubt were California and North Dakota, in which Wilson was leading by a small plurality, and Minnesota and New Mexico, in which Hughes was leading by still smaller ones. Later in the day New Hampshire, which had been given to Hughes, became doubtful, and New Mexico swung over to the Wilson column. After that the only hope for the Republicans was in California, which Hughes must carry in addition to Minnesota. But the California returns as they kept on coming in only served to strengthen Wilson's assurance of the State. He did not gain much, but he did not lose, and with every new return the [illegible] stronghold which would overturn the Wilson plurality became fainter. When the southern part of the State was nearly all on record and had failed to cut Wilson down any farther, while the northern part confirmed his plurality, it became certain that California had given the Democrats the victory in the nation.

All the news of the day was Wilson news. The back settlements of New Mexico, which were so long coming in, reversed Hughes' apparent lead when they did come and turned over to Wilson by what, for that sparsely-settled State, is a huge majority. Hughes lost nothing in Minnesota, but the hope of a change in North Dakota was not realized, and the dwindling of his plurality in New Hampshire until the Democrats were claiming the State was the finishing blow.

DISTRICT ELDERS HAVE BEEN CHANGED

At the annual meeting of the East Ontario Conference of the Free Methodist Church, held at Odessa, Ont., the first of September, the District Elders, Rev. R. Burnham and Rev. W. H. Reynolds were again elected, only being transferred to each other's districts.

Rev R. Burnham, who has been labouring in the Toronto and Muskoka districts for the past four years, goes to the Kingston and Campbellford districts, and Rev. W. H. Reynolds takes his place.

As Peterborough is in the Toronto district the people here will have the privilege of hearing Rev. W. H. Reynolds preach to-night at 8 o'clock in the Free Methodist Church on Aylmer street, it being the occasion of the first quarterly meeting since his coming to these districts.

He will be remembered as being instrumental in establishing the work and building the church here, about seven years ago, and the Society feel privileged in having him again as District Elder.

He will also preach to-morrow night and both both morning and evening on the Sabbath, and as he is a very able preacher the congrega[illegible]

WHY NOT DO LIKE THE POLICE?

They Don't Find it Difficult to Sleep on the Street—Lindsay's Housing Troubles

The Lindsay Warder says:

Citizens should keep the front and back doors of their residences locked at night, as many strangers are arriving in town, amongst whom may be some undesirables and people of doubtful character.

Yesterday morning the maid in a South Ward house was surprised on going out to the summer kitchen to see a big burly fellow get up from behind the stove, where he had slept for the greater portion of the night, and beat it out the side gate. The back door had been left unlocked. The lock-up has helped out others who could not get sleeping accommodation in town.

A laborer who came to town on Saturday and has a steady position at $2.50 per day slept in the lock-up, not being able to get a bed anywhere.

COFFEE A DRUG OR A GROCERY?

In coffee a grocery article? Last night Sergt. Reid and P. C. Deannard had an experience, the subject of which was discussed around the police station this morning. They were taking advantage of some of the Rexall bargains at Payne's store last night and were particularly attracted to the coffee, of which they were taking six pounds for $1.53. Mr. McDermid, of the other Rexall store at Charlotte street corner, evidently jumped at the opinion that the police were in buying evidence and after a brief consultation, they evidently decided to take no chances, according to the report, and the policemen were told to come around in the morning.

In a merely casual discussion Chief Thompson remarked this morning that it was a question whether the by-law would cover such a case. It was aimed at grocery stores, and this was a drug store in which the coffee was offered during a special sale. It is understood that the police were actually buying the coffee for their private use and with no thought of the catch, eluding by-law for grocery [illegible]

RETURNED HERO IS WELCOMED BY CHOIR

Mr. Ben Blanchard, Twice Wounded, is Guest of St. Paul's Choir—First of the Boys of the Choir to Return From the Front

Last night after the usual practice, St. Pauls choir spent a social hour in honour of Mr Ben Blanchard, B.Sc., a former member of the choir, who has returned from the great struggle bearing many a scar as witness of how faithfully he has played his part.

Mr. Blanchard, on arriving, was received with enthusiastic cheering every one eager and proud to shake hands with such a hero.

After refreshments had been served, Mr. Allan said how delighted all were to welcome him home, and to thank him for going to fight for them.

He was the first of the choir boys to return, and words failed to express their intense pride in him for the splendid and courageous manner in which he had played the game. They hoped he would settle in Peterborough again ere long. There would ever be a warm welcome awaiting him. "For he's a jolly good fellow" was sung with great gusto followed by three cheers after which, in a few modest words, Mr. Blanchard expressed his great pleasure in being with the choir again.

Mr. Blanchard enlisted in the early days of the war with his home battalion in Halifax, N.S., and when bomb throwers were asked for he volunteered. He has been wounded twice, the last time very seriously when a bomb exploded in his hands.

Mr. Blanchard, after along time in hospital, was honourably discharged last April, but had re-enlisted and is now doing military duty in Toronto. The evening was brought to a conclusion with the singing of "God Save the King."

Petitions For The Patriotic Fund Being Largely Signed

Ex-Mayor Buller Reports Statement That a Few Ratepayers Believe Only the Signatures Will Be Taxed—All Will Contribute

The Patriotic Fund canvas of the ratepayers who are asked to affix their names to the petition which will be presented to the Council requesting the raising of $53,000 by twenty-year debentures as the city's contribution to the Fund for 1917, are being splendidly received. This is the report from various captains, and there is no doubt that the petitions will be very largely signed. Ex-Mayor Buller reported an erroneous idea that he had heard expressed by one or two parties. They believed that only those persons would be taxed for the Fund who signed the petition. The error of this view is self evident. If the Council is moved to borrow the $53,000 every ratepayer will contribute his share on the basis of forty-one cents per thousand dollars of assessment, this contribution to be continued for twenty years. Mr. Buller felt that this should be mentioned to offset any misconception of the operation of the petition. The canvassers point out that no man will be burdened by the addition of forty-one cents to his tax bill. It will be recalled that the memorable morning of the departure of the first Peterborough contingent in September, 1914, Mr. Buller, speaking as Mayor of the city, promised those first recruits that their wives and children would be cared for by the citizens. Thus far, it may be stated that promise has been fulfilled, and it is evident that the ratepayers are determined to "carry on" to the end.

Splendid Report of the Nicholls Hospital Inspection On Oct. 6th

Dr. Helen MacMurchy, Toronto, concludes the report of her recent official inspection of the Nicholls Hospital with the following observations:

The two greatest needs of this hospital are a nurses' residence and a better kitchen and store-rooms.

The nurses' residence should also contain comfortable accommodation for the domestic staff.

It is hoped that in the near future the authorities will be able to give favourable consideraion to the above.

The result of the inspection was satisfactory, and the visit was a pleasure.

Special Features Observed.

The work of this hospital is going on well. The management is good, everything is in good order, and the patients are receiving careful nursing and due attention.

The X-Ray equipment, added since last inspection, is a great advantage.

The site is a beautiful one, and the lawns and gardens are receiving attention, and are being improved.

The following are some of the minutiae:

Secretary of Board — Mr. John Crane.

Superintendent—Miss Beamish.

Acting Superintendent—Miss Sara Sanderson.

Financial receipts for past year, $26,301.77.

Expenditure for maintenance, $25,-908.32.

Number of days' stay of patients reported for past year, 6,360.

Government's grant for year, $1,592.40.

City grant, $1,307.00.

Number of patients in residence—Males 14, females 21, infants 2 — total 37 (on October 6).

Number on free list 22, on pay list 15. Total number of beds 80.

Number of deaths during past year, 63.

Number of births, 86.

Number of nurses 19, and 6 probationers.

Number of employees — male 4, female 9.

Medical men on staff, 24.

Tubercular patients are admitted, isolated, and transferred.

The wards, beds, etc.—Everything was found clean, comfortable, and in good order.

The equipment of the operating room is good.

Nurses' quarters—Not as good as it should be in such a hospital as this, but fairly satisfactory, in the meantime.

Kitchen and equipment — Fairly satisfactory, but the work is being carried on well.

Laundry — Satisfactory. A good building quite separate from the Hospital, and well equipped.

The steam and hot water heating, electric lighting and ventilation are good.

The fire protection is adequate and complete.

The food is good, well prepared, cooked and served.

Altogether the report is a most satisfactory one, and reflects credit upon the Hospital Board and staff.

Park St. Needs Rebuilding After Upheaval For Sewer Work

South End residents are asking themselves, and have just about reached the stage of asking the Council whether any attempt is to be made this fall to restore Park Street to the class of ordinary highways. The roadway was literally turned upside down from Albert street south to Lansdowne street, in constructing the new trunk sewer, and remains just as the workmen left it. True, John Thirnbeck's men filled in the ditch fairly carefully enough, but there was no attempt made to rebuild the road, to put in a gravel crown, and that is precisely what is needed. November rains are showing their mirring effect, and the prospect next spring is almost alarming.

That dangerous ruts have already been worn in the loose and yielding surface is illustrated by a recent runaway. Spenceley's express waggon which was stopped by F. C. Dickson, in front of the Examiner office, started from the corner of Park and Lake streets. In turning the corner the front wheel on one side bumped into a rut throwing the driver to the ground, rendering him unconscious for nearly an hour, according to one report. The accident might easily have had a serious consequence and a damage suit against the city.

Several blocks of the pavement north of Albert Street were chopped out and replaced by brown earth that will be more or less mud until new pavement is put in. In fact the sentiment of Southenders demands that some attention be given by the City Fathers to the work that has been left undone, including the removal of the timber, the shacks and other articles required during the construction of the sewer. And the particular wish that the work be effected before the snow flies.

DRASTIC ACTION

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 10.—In an order-in-Council which was passed today under the War Measures Act, the Dominion Government takes drastic action with respect to the cost of living. The order confers wide powers upon the Minister of Labour and municipalities to investigate conditions in regard to necessities of life—food, clothing and fuel, makes the accumulation of such a criminal offence, and also bans any agreement whatever looking to enhanced prices above "what is reasonable and just." The order deals with machinery for prosecution and stipulates that when ever in the opinion of the Minister of Labour an offence is being disclosed, he is to remit to the Attorney General of the Province certified copies of evidence by the examiners. The consent of the Attorney-General is necessary to prosecute. The penalty provided for an infraction of the regulation is a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars or imprisonment for any term up to two years or both. Any director or officer of any company or corporation who assents to or acquiesces in a contravention of any of the regulations is held guilty personally.

BARRE IS TO HANG

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Nov. 10. — For the brutal murder of his wife, as she crouched against the door of her farm home at Rose Corners near here, her infant baby clasped in her arms, Alphonse Barre, a French Canadian, was to-day sentenced to death at L'Original Assizes. Barre, who has fallen from a burly farmer of 208 pounds to an emaciated wreck of 148 since his arrest, received the sentence impassively.

Medical testimony indicated Barre was of a low type of mentality. Following the murder of his wife, he walker three miles to a nearby hamlet, tolled a death peal on the church bell, and surrendered himself.

EXHIBIT OF POULTRY

At the meeting of the Poultry Association on Wednesday night with Mr. Archie Brault presiding, arrangements were made for the annual exhibition, early in January. Afterwards a poultry show was put on by the members with Mr. Harry Lush as judge. The members had brought their birds to the Trades and Labour Hall under their arms, in bags, crates, and even in waggons. It was quite an interesting exhibit, with the following results:

Minorca, Black—1st and 2nd, R. D. Hobson.

Cornish, Indian—1st and 2nd, Geo. Buller.

Black Orpington—1st, Geo. Buller.

White Orpington—1st cockerel, Mr. Perry; 1st pullet, M. Perry.

White Wyandotte—1st, pullet, A. Brault.

Rhode Island Reds—1st, cockerel, and pullet—Geo. Buller.

Best bird in show; White Wyandotte pullet—A. Brault.

The prize list Printing Committee was appointed as follows: Messrs. Smeaknore, Kelly, Paxman, Buller, Ash, Brault and Mesley.

Moved by Mr. Kelly seconded by Mr. Hartley, that a sale class be put on under the usual charges and that the lowest price be $3.00.

A machine has been invented for re-inking typewriter and adding machine ribbons.

CARRYING MESSAGES FROM THE TRENCHES A DANGEROUS JOB

AT TIMES HAVE TO BRAVE FIRE OF MACHINE GUNS, RIFLES, AND ARTILLERY BEFORE REACHING THEIR DESTINATION.

In trench warfare, where flag-wagging is impossible, and the telephone wires may be broken at any moment by shell fire, foot messengers or "runners" are used to maintain communication between commanders of units and the directors of operations.

Every officer in a regiment has one or more runners attached to him, the number increasing with the higher ranks. The runner's work is not arduous at all while telephone communication is whole. It is in an advance that he is put to the greater test, for in addition to taking his chance in the charge which captures a trench, he is almost certain to have to carry messages across the open under heavy shell fire.

It is often of vital importance that messages should be got through from a captured trench to the officer commanding operations, and in the probable event of a breakage of the telephone wire this dangerous duty devolves on runners.

Infantry had occupied a shell-mangled trench but the enemy's machine-gun fire was so deadly that further advance was impossible; officers were carefully locating their positions. As soon as they are found the information is sent to the artillery in the rear to knock them out.

The officer commanding a certain section has written his directions—in triplicate, for good reasons.

"Runner!" he ejaculates.

A man immediately approaches him.

"Take this to the C. C." says the officer. "You'll find him at ——— farm. You'll have a tough job, I'm afraid."

"Very good, sir," returns the runner, briskly. There is nothing in his tone to denote that he is about to attempt an almost hopeless task.

A PERILOUS TASK.

The moment that he starts for the rear he knows that the enemy snipers and machine guns will concentrate upon him. Even if he escapes these he will still have a terrible barrage to traverse.

Waiting for a few moments until there is a lull in the enemy's fire he sprints across the open. The officer turns away briskly to superintend the work of consolidation, but swings around at the cry: "He's down, sir."

A glance confirms the word, and the officer takes another despatch from his haversack.

"Runner!" he exclaims in a mechanical tone.

"Yes, sir!"

The officer repeats his previous orders.

"Need I take my rifle and bandolier, sir?" inquires the runner.

"No leave 'em behind, 'Snips!'" returns his superior genially.

"Snips" is not his real name though he is so called by all the men and by his officers, too, on occasions such as this. Below middle height, he is young and of wiry build, with a sharp and intelligent face. On the football field he has achieved fame and at inside right has in the past brilliantly helped to uphold the honor of the regimental team.

There is a cheery smile on his face as he gets over the parapet to make a run on this other field—in the grimmer game. Instead of starting straight for his destination, he sprints off at a tangent, then turning in a flash, darts in another direction. The machine guns are rattling away incessantly. The men cease their work to watch as "Snips" twists and turns, flashes and darts in different directions, but all the time drawing nearer to his goal.

SHOUTS OF ENCOURAGEMENT.

"Good old Snips! Doant pass, lad! Take the ball on yourself!"

Such were the laughing shouts which followed him. The rattle of the machine guns seemed to increase in fury at their impotence to stop that dodging figure.

Suddenly "Snips" pitches forward headlong. A husky groan comes from the trench he has just left.

"Runner!" ejaculates the officer in the same toneless voice as before.

But a cry of:

"Good lad! Good old Snips!" causes him to glance quickly in that direction, and he sees his runner again dashing on.

"Lay doggo in a shell hole to kid the Roche gunners," explains one of the men with pride.

A few moments later "Snips" was out of danger of the machine guns, but an even greater menace lay ahead. The enemy were putting a dense barrage between him and his destination. He kept on running until he had reached the shrapnel sprayed zone he must traverse. Then he deliberately slowed down to a walk. A runner, according to their own code may run under rifle but not under shell fire. Luck was with Snips for he passed through the inferno unscathed and delivered his message.

WOUNDED AT LAST.

"Snips is on his way back, bearing a written message from the O. C. He realizes that the enemy shell fire is even greater than before as he reaches the barrage. He trudges sturdily through it. Suddenly with a gasp of pain he falls to the ground. For a moment he writhes with agony, then with his clasp knife he rips the cloth around his knee laying bare a ragged wound. Though quivering with pain he takes out his bandages and stoically binds it up. With an effort he stands up on his sound leg, and his face twists as he puts the other to the ground. He means to go forward and does so, though slowly and suffering agony.

"Steady lad, you've come to the front trenches. The 'first aid' is the other way," exclaims an officer to whom he is unknown.

For an instant "Snips" paindrawn face lights up, as with a lurch he thrusts out his despatch.

"I'm a runner, sir," he murmurs dazedly; then slides limply to the ground.

SEES DEER; FALLS DEAD

Hunter's Peculiar Death Reported by Indian

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 10.—While deer hunting in Grimsthorpe township, about thirty miles north of Madoc village, D. E. Minns, of Baltimore, Ont., died in a peculiar manner Wednesday. He was walking through the woods when he came upon two Indians who were standing by a deer which they had just shot. Whether in the excitement of the hunting or the exertion, or at the sight of blood, Mr. Minns fell to the ground dead. This is the story which one of the Indians sent to Coroner Dr. W. S. Harper, at Madoc, who is investigating the case. The Indians tramped about eighteen miles through the bush to get the message to the authorities.

Mr. Minns was about sixty-five years of age, and is said to have complained of his heart before going into the woods. He was a brother of Public School Inspector Minns, of North Hastings, and of Mr. W. S. Minns, of the staff of the Ontario School for the Deaf, Belleville.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Nov. 10th, 1916.

Sir,—Is it not about time that public opinion closed the pool rooms and bowling alleys of this city to eligible men who should be in khaki?

Day in and day out these places are full of young slackers who, between games, block the pedestrian traffic on George street and make funny remarks about any soldier who happens to pass by. Not to one soldier! Oh, dear no! My self and was mad when the thick forsight not appreciate one joke.

I do not suggest barring these eligibles as an incentive to recruiting, for I know that most of the habitues of these places are of too refined a class to put on the uniform and lower themselves by associating with our nasty, rude Canadian soldier boys. But if places of amusement were denied to this gentry they would get so "fed up" with their own contemptible selves that out of sheer boredom, they would enlist or cross the border, which lately many a spineless creature has already done.

I might also suggest, and this for the benefit of the slackers, that, for the sake of their precious healths, they cut out accosting females. There are enough soldiers and other men in this town to make it a dangerous pastime.

Yours truly,
Gordon H. Grahame.

Dear Sir,—Judging by views expressed by two of your correspondents in last night's issue of the Examiner, it would seem many citizens were dissatisfied with the position assigned the returned soldiers in the funeral procession of Lieut. Ackerman. To those unfamiliar with military affairs, the place filled by the returned soldiers was a menial one, reflecting discredit upon the boys from the trenches, but I am quite sure those responsible for the arrangement of the details had no thought of subjecting our heroes to any indignity. The truth of the matter is, the returned soldiers had the place of honour. At military funerals, the regular or usual order of procedure is completely reversed; arms are reversed; right foot comes down with drum beat instead of left; juniors precede seniors, etc., and by the way, if your correspondents and others had observed closely, they would have discovered this order was the one followed.

I hope I may have explained the matter satisfactorily to those interested, and exonerate from undue censure, whoever was acting the role of master of ceremonies.

Veteran.

Peterborough, Nov. 10, 1916.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I noticed in your paper last evening that the 93rd boys are badly in need of socks. Surely we have enough patriotic societies in Peterborough to see that no Peterborough boy at the front needs for anything. The whole trouble seems to be lack of co-operation. A score or more organisations are engaged in the grand work of preparing comforts for our boys overseas but supervision is needed to prevent duplication and to prevent one lot of Peterborough soldiers from getting too many things while others get nothing. I have noticed too, letters of acknowledgment from men who did not enlist here, expressing thanks for gifts sent from Peterborough. That means that while Peterborough boys are lacking comforts, soldiers from other cities are receiving gifts from our patriotic societies. This seems especially so in the case of an organization which last year held a tag day and collected $700 or $800 from Peterborough citizens. Subscribers to this fund made their donations thinking the money would be used for the sole object of looking after the welfare of Peterborough troops; but judging from the acknowledgments printed in your paper from time to time, many comforts from this league have gone to other soldiers. I do not begrudge any of the boys at the front these comforts, but it seems to me that the Peterborough organizations should first see that every Peterborough soldier has been looked after before they start distributing their gifts to other men. I heard of one church organization who sent a big parcel of comforts to a Queen's University unit just because the son of one of the members of the society in question happened to belong to that particular unit. As a matter of fact he was the only Peterborough boy in the unit and also as a matter of fact the parcel represented the united work of a large number of ladies, who imagined probably that their long hours of toil was for the purpose of supplying comforts to the boys from our city.

We have hundreds of Peterborough soldiers overseas. Can't our patriotic societies get together and see that all are looked after alike and that none are neglected. After a regular supply of comforts has been arranged for every Peterborough man, it is time to think of the boys from other cities. Keep up your good work, ladies. All that is needed is a little system.

Reverie of a Stranger

When in Petersburg, Va., the players visited the famous battlefields of the Civil War in that neighbourhood, particularly the one known as "The Crater," in which thousands of lives were lost. Adjoining the battlefields is Blandford Cemetery, another historic Southern spot, with a chapel erected in 1735. Elmer Steele copied the following beautiful poem from the wall of the chapel, where it had been written over forty years ago, and when the chapel was in a state of decay:

Thou art crumbling to the dust old pile;
Thou are hastening to thy fall,
And round thee in thy loneliness
Clings the ivy to thy wall.
The worshippers are scattered now
Who knelt before thy shrine,
And silence reigns where anthems rose
In days of "Auld Lang Syne."

And sadly sighs the wandering wind,
Where oft in days gone by Prayers rose from many hearts to Him,
The Highest of the High.
The tramp of many a busy foot
That sought thy aisles is o'er,
And many a weary heart around
Is still forever more.

How doth Ambition's hope take wing,
How droops the spirit now;
We hear the distant city's din,
The dead are mute below;
The sun that shines upon their paths
Now gilds their lonely graves;
The zephyrs which once fanned their brows,
The grass above them waves.

Oh! could we call the many back
Who's gathered here in vain—
Who've careless roved where we do now,
Who'll never meet again;
How would our very souls be stirred
To meet their earnest gaze
Of the lovely and the beautiful,
The lights of other days.

The author of these lines has never been discovered, though diligent search has been made for him.

140½ Hunter Street

Voice of the People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I appear to have taken some trouble in years gone by in preserving clippings from men that I have considered greater than me in some respects, at least there have appeared to have been many of them, and though I realise that my mind is far from being what it once was, I took a good deal of pleasure yesterday in looking over some of them. Here is one which I think we may look upon with some pride regarding some of our history in this serious time. The choice is yours whether it goes to the paper or waste basket.

The late T. Dewitt Talmage was not only a preacher of some distinction, but also conducted a paper called the Christian Herald in New York, I think which came into our home for some time. He also visited many notable places and wrote in a pleasing way. His red letter day in 1890 with Gladstone at Hawarden is noteworthy if only for the following, but of conversation I asked him (Dr. Talmage writes) if the years had strengthened or weakened his Christian faith. We were racing up hill. He suddenly stopped and regarded me with a searching earnestness, a solemnity that made be quake. Then he spoke slowly, more seriously. Dr. Talmage, my only hope for the world is in the bringing of the human mind into contact with divine revelation. Nearly all the men at the top in our country are believers in the Christian religion. The four leading physicians of England are devout Christian men. I myself have been in the cabinet forty-seven years, and during all that time I have been associated with sixty of the chief intellects of the century. I can think of but five of those sixty who did not profess the Christian religion, but those five men respected it.

We may talk about questions of the day here and there, but there is only one gospel for all circumstances and conditions. It can and will correct all that is wrong. That Dr. Talmage came of good stock, the following extract will help to show:

My father was the only person whom I ever knew without any element of fear.

Seated in a waggon one day during a runaway that every moment threatened our demolition, he was perfectly calm. He turned around to me, a boy of seven years, and said: De Witt, what are you crying about. I guess we can ride as fast as they can run.

Respectfully,
J. H. Taylor.

FRENCH GAVE ELOQUENT REPLY TO RECENT STATEMENT MADE BY VON HINDENBURG

French Have Sufficient Resources to Strike and Strike Hard as Was Proven in the Sudden and Successful Attack at Chaulnes—War Summary by the Military Expert of the New York "Times."

ENEMY IS SHORT OF MEN

NEW YORK, November 11.—On Tuesday the French gave an eloquent reply to the recent statement of Field Marshal von Hindenburg as to their waning power. Although for some days they had been fighting desperately on the Somme front, and in addition had but finished up their work of restoring the solidity of their Verdun defensive positions, there was still enough vigor and sufficient resources to strike, and strike hard, at a third section of the front—that of Chaulnes, which for some time has been practically neglected.

This attack was different from any which the French have yet delivered. An entirely new offensive scheme was tried out, apparently with good success. This scheme was based on a sudden infantry attack without the intense artillery preparation which has marked all other operations on the west. In order that such a method could be successful, the trenches must be practically denuded of infantry. Experience has shown on the western front that no attack against existing trenches can be successful without plentiful use of artillery, unless it can be predetermined that these trenches at the particular point selected for the attack have been drained of their defenders. It has been difficult enough to forge ahead even with the artillery at their command.

VERDUN DRIVE DUPLICATED.

While there is an absence of details, it is extremely probable that the sudden stroke at Verdun has been duplicated. The French must have had information that the German lines at Ablaincourt and Pressoire had been weakened by withdrawals. Otherwise in the fact of previous experience they would not have dared such an attack as that which they launched. Having this information, they failed to give the usual warning of the attack by means of a heavy artillery bombardment, but struck quickly in a surprise movement and before the Germans could bring up the supports, broke through their positions and rushed these two towns.

When the relation between the villages of France with the many positions for both infantry and machine guns which they afford, and the German defensive scheme is realized, the importance of these two villages becomes apparent. They may very rightly be regarded as the keys to the Chaulnes position on the north. On the west and north Chaulnes is completely covered by the French lines. There is now no village, however small, between these lines and a line due east from the city. More than this, the French advance has carried their lines to within less than a mile of one of the few remaining routes out of the city toward the east, that is the road from Chaulnes to Marchelepot. This road then is under the close range fire of the French artillery, so that, except at night, its use for the transferring of men or supplies is a hazardous operation. The ground between the French lines and this road is open and flat, both being about 100 meters above the sea. It is, in fact, a small table land.

SEVER LINES OF COMMUNICATION.

The next push should bring the French lipes up to the highway itself. But it appears that the French are after something much more important than a highway. The principal means of communication between the Chaulnes district and the Somme front proper is the railroad which runs northeast from Chaulnes to the Somme, and thence up the Somme Valley to Peronne. It is by means of this road that the Germans have effected the transfer of troops to one section or other as occasion demanded. The French now are about two miles and a half from this road and well to the east of Chaulnes. If they can reach the railroad all rail communications between the Germans north of the Somme bend and those in the south will be severed except by a very roundabout way over a narrow-gauge road which comes down well to the east of the Somme Valley.

GERMAN FORCES OUTFLANKED.

In this move also the French are paving the way for an enforced German retirement much greater than any that has yet been forced. It is noticeable that the French, after the advantages gained as a result of the fall of Combles, have made no attempt to force their lines ahead against Peronne. The position is three-quarters surrounded, but no effort has been made to complete the circle. If the French can take Chaulnes, and thereafter push their lines from Barleux south within a mile or two of the river, the capture of Peronne then will have far reaching effect. Not only will it mean the taking of one small town and a few hundred prisoners. It will mean also that all of the German forces on the western bank of the river between Chaulnes and Peronne will be outflanked, and while this alone will probably not cause them to fall back across the stream, the amount of pressure necesary to effect this will have been reduced to a minimum.

RANGE IS TOO SHORT.

The thing that enables the Germans to hold their present lines west of the river between Peronne and Barleux is the gun position which they hold undisturbed on the east bank of the stream. It is improbable, if not impossible, that the Germans have anything more than light field guns on the west bank of the river between these points. The range is too short for heavy artillery, as the French lines are but two miles from the river itself. With Peronne out of the way, these gun positions will be uncovered one after the other. Then the Somme will lose its value as a defensive screen and the Germans will be forced to establish their lines on the east bank. At the present rate of progress this may and probably will be a long time ahead. It is, however, but one of the larger elements of the Somme fighting.

ENEMY SHORT OF MEN.

There is another argument to be found in the east with which the French took these two towns of Ablaincourt and Pressoire. Much has been written of the decline of German numbers. Some of it has been believed, and much of it credited to the desire of the writer rather than to the actual condition. The theory of the decline in numbers is, however, borne out in every detail of the fighting, both at Verdun and at Chaulnes. If the Germans had sufficient reserves in France, they would be able to feed their battle line from depots in the rear. This they are certainly not able to do.

We have seen German statements of the presence of the Bradenburg division of Douaumont fame, fighting on the Somme. We have seen the Verdun front in general stripped of men until the lines were too thinned out to hold. We now see another section of the front weakened in exactly the same way and for the same reason. May there not be something after all in the expectation of the Allies that sooner or later they will break through?

German Papers Clamour For Permanent Peace

And They Want the Allies to Obligingly Make the Proposals—Chancellor Has Opened the Way—Socialist's Speech Repeated by Chancellor in Different Phrases.

NOT TO ANNEX BELGIUM

AMSTERDAM, via London, November 11.—Several German newspapers in commenting on Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollwegg's speech, express the opinion that it opens the way for peace. The Tageblatt says the ideas for the future which the Chancellor discussed are more important than the question who is guilty of having caused the war, and refers to the Chancellor's remark that after the war humanity will demand measures to prevent recurrence of such conflicts.

"Whoever is convinced," the Tageblatt continues, "that the cry will go through humanity for a peaceful arrangement, will not fail to make preparation for a response to this great cry."

FOR LASTING PEACE.

The Freisinnige Zeitung says that the Chancellor in all seriousness declares his readines to collaborate in efforts to obtain international guarantees for lasting peace, adding:

"Now is the time for the entente powers, especially Great Britain, to come forward with a programme."

The Vorwaerts, the Socialist organ, says that what the German Government now desires is tolerably clear; that the Chancellor expressed it in different words than Phillippe Scheidemann, a Socialist leader in the Reichstag, who, in a speech last month, asserted the belligerent nations desired peace, but that those of Von Bethmann-Hollweg are no less clear than are those of Herr Scheidemann.

"In the Chancellor's speech," the Vorwaerts continues, "one hears the first sound of the future rustling which will signalize the end of war's horrors."

NOT TO ANNEX BELGIUM.

An independent Socialist member of the Reichstag said that especial importance attached to the Chancellor's expression of readines to participate in attempts to form a coalition which would guarantee peace.

He added that Viscount Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, never had approved the idea of boycotting Germany to annihilate it, but that to the contrary, he had declined several times to approve such a project. The Socialist member took exceptions to the ideas of the Conservatives in regard to Belgium, and said the Chancellor should make it clear that he was opposed to the annexation of Belgium.

A member of the annexationist group, expressed sympathy with the principle of arbitration, but added that if Germany had accepted it in 1914 the result would have to give the time to her enemies, whose plan was not to begin the war until 1916.

A Socialist member tooko up the question of the Russian mobilization, saying that newspaper reports showed it was in progress before the official Russian date of the beginning of mobilization and quoting several press despatches from Petrograd to Paris and London on July 29 and 30, 1914, to prove his assertions.

Iron makes pale faces rosy, and phosphorus restores nerves, making you 100 per cent stronger in a few days.

It is the desire of every man, woman and child to feel well, eat well, dress well, look well; but you must have plenty of iron in your blood to obtain this glow of happiness and youth. The moment that the blood gets thin or impure, your stomach is unable to digest your food and it passes into the bowels undigested, then your bowels are unable to take any nutriment from the undigested food and the food begins to ferment, causing indigestion, the impurities ran into your kidneys soon follows liver trouble, constipation, rheumatism, etc., and your skin becomes sallow, your nerves shake, you feel tired and all worn out, you take all sorts of medicines and you find nothing does you any good. Now, what you need is iron to build up your blood and phosphorus to restore your nerves. First see how much you weigh, then go to your druggist and get some Bonised Phosphorus with Iron, and in ten days you will find you will be 100 per cent. stronger. The moment that Bonised Phosphorus with Iron is taken it is absorbed by the blood and nerves and you will notice a difference almost immediately. By putting the iron with the phosphorus you form an entirely new form of iron that will not blacken the teeth, upset the stomach nor cause constipation.

Bonised Phosphorus with iron as spoken of here does not contain an atom of arsenic strychnine, nor any poison which has been found so harmful in almost every tonic. This is not a stimulant which makes you feel fine for a while, but instead it goes to the root of your trouble, builds up your blood, strengthens your nerves, giving power to digest your food and drives away all stomach liver and kidney complaints. Bonised Phosphorus with Iron is dispensed in this city only at F. C. Weber's Drug Store, Charlotte street.

Cattle Markets.

Big runs of cattle, sheep and hogs are still coming on to the Toronto market. Notwithstanding the large supplies, the demand has been steadily active and prices holding remarkably steady. The requirements of the several large local packing houses are apparently limited only by the amount of labour, skilled and unskilled, available. On this head the packers in common with all other local industries are having their troubles. The scarcity of hour labour has in part been relieved of late by the employment of a considerable number of Chinese and Japanese, who have been brought into the city for this special work. With the labour situation in this way partly met, the packers are readily taking all the good butcher cattle, with large numbers of canners, that they can possibly handle. For this reason prices have stood the pressure of the recent heavy runs, canners in particular, holding strong.

The demand for heavy feeders has somewhat slackened, but there is a good demand for stockers of choice quality. Real good stockers, in fact, have been difficult to get this week in sufficient numbers for the demand. A lot of thin, common stockers have been on the market, for which there is no very active demand at this late period of the grass season.

Sheep and lambs continue to hold at comparatively high prices.

Hogs have come down a little, the cut of 50 cents made at the beginning of the week holding without the usual come-back.

Cattle Market Receipts.

Toronto Union Stock Yards — Receipts for this week, 800 cars, with 10,368 cattle, 858 calves, 14,927 hogs, 9,005 sheep and lambs, and 1,670 horses.

City Cattle Market—118 cars with 1,580 cattle, 2,071 sheep and lambs, 3,245 hogs, 40 calves, and 46 horses.

Truss Torture

Once Thought Necessary, but Now Your Search for Relief is Ended.

Wonderful Method Retains Ruptures Without Knife, Danger or Pain.

J. Y. EGAN, Specialist of Toronto

Old-fashioned trusses are no longer necessary. Cutting, dangerous and barbarous methods of treating ruptures are done away with by the wonderful discovery of a man who has devoted fifty years to the study of them. The marvellous new Egan Method is given to the ruptured patient right here and promptly where all others fail. If after all previous trusses and treatments you have used in vain, and you are still in fear of the dreaded knife and operation, you are especially welcome. Where operations are absolutely necessary, Mr. Egan will tell you so frankly. Also consultation free.

Where cures fail it will be so stated. Where cures can be effected, you will be told so, but not a penny of your money will be taken, even after cure is effected, unless you are entirely satisfied. No matter how long you have suffered, how many trusses you have worn, how many operations you have had, how many doctors have failed, just send a postcard to-day for free information and consultation blank. No obligation. No charge. No one will call. Write to-day. Note dates.

Free Consultation Coupon.

This coupon, when presented to J. Y. Egan, Specialist, Toronto, who will visit the cities named below, will entitle owner to free consultation and examination. Call at hotel office for number of my room. Note dates.

"Huns Bolt Like Scared Rabbits" From "Tanks"

London November

The daily work of a tank on the western front has been graphically described by a young Australian soldier who was wounded while serving in one of these new engines of war. The description, in diary form, appeared in the Manchester Guardian:

Monday—Out for first time. Strange sensation. Worse than being in a submarine. At first unable to see anything but imagined a lot. Bullets began to rain like hailstones on a galvanized roof at first, then like a series of hammer blows. We passed through it all unscathed.

Suddenly we gave a terrible lurch. I thought we were booked through. Lookout said that we were astride an enemy trench. "Give them hell!" was the order. We gave them it. Our guns raked and swept the trenches right and left.

Got a peep at frightened Huns. It was grimly humorous. They tried to bolt like scared rabbits, but were shot down in trenches before getting to their barrows. Machine guns then brought forward. Started vicious rattle on our side. Not the least impression was made. Shells began to burst. We moved on and overtook some more frightened Huns. Cut their ranks to ribbons with our fire.

They ran like men possessed. Officer tried to rally them. They waited our coming for a while. As soon as our guns began to spit at them they were off once more. Infantry rounded them up and the survivors surrendered. Very curious about us. Stood open mouthed and wide eyed watching, but were not much the wiser.

Experience was not altogether pleasant at first. Tank sickness is as bad as sea sickness until you get used to them.

Tuesday.—Off for another cruise. Peppering began at once. Thought old thing was going to be drowned in a shower of bullets. Things quiet down quickly. Silly blighters thought they could rush the tank like they would a fort. Dashed up from all sides. We fired at them point blank. Devilish plucky chaps, some of them, for all their madness. The survivors had another try. We spat at them venomously. More of them went down.

The blessed old tub gave a sudden jerk. God in heaven, thought I—it's good-bye to earth; but it wasn't. Only some Hun dead and wounded we had skidded into. The rain of bullets resumed. It was like as if hundreds of rivets were being hammered into the hide of the tank. We rushed through—soon the music had charms, and we got to like the regular rhythm of it.

Suddenly a jolt, and our hearts jolted into our mouths in sympathy. Nothing doing in the mishap line. Only some unwonted obstacle. Heavier "strumming" on our keyboard outside, and more regular. Machine guns at it now. Straddled on as if we liked it. A tremendous thud. The whole outfit seemed done for. Nearly jumped out of my skin. Looked at each other and wondered what it was. Still a roof over our heads, thank God!

Wednesday.—Early start. Roughest voyage yet. Waves of fire seemed to break over us. Tremendous crash. Then another, and several others at intervals. Silence for a time. Party of Huns came to meet us outside the village. Very stout old gentleman in front. Thought it was the mayor and the village bigpot, to give us a civic welcome. Mistaken. They meant to give us a warm reception, but not as we understood the word. Let fly with machine guns. Then tried some silly boarding tactics. We laughed. Our guns answered theirs.

Tank reception committee dispersed in a cloud of smoke and flame; no striking tokens of glory. Fat old gentleman only visible member of deputation. Stood open mouthed. Purple with rage. Tank bore down. Old gentleman started to run. Funnier than a sack race. Old gentleman flung himself to earth with many signs of surrender.

Thursday.—Got into the village, and passed down between two irregular rows of wrecked houses. Hundreds of Huns came rushing up from the cellars and from behind ruins to see us. Some had eyes staring out of their heads. Looked surprised, and even frightened.

One blighter made a rush at us with a clubbed rifle. Made a terrible swipe at the tank. Smashed his rifle and made a nasty noise on the roof. Hurt himself more than he hurt us. Off for a joy ride after some Huns who took to flight as we came up.

Friday.—Early afloat. Usual showers of bullets and a few shells on the way. Got right across a trench. We made the sparks fly. Went along parapet routing out Huns everywhere—enemy terrified. Tried to run, but couldn't keep it up under our fire.

One cheeky chap said he didn't think it fair to fight with such things. We said that was our affair, and we could stand the racket Germany cared to make over it. Asked one chap if he thought we should have got permission from the Kaiser before using them. Did not see the joke. Took about two hundred prisoners. Killed and wounded as many more. Tired out when through.

Saturday.—On the move before our breakfast. Terrible crash on first go-off. Thought we had collided with a wandering world. Weathered the storm. Got busy on enemy trenches. Rare good sport. Enemy tried a surprise for infantry—Yorkshiremen—advancing to attack. We tried a surprise, too, and ours came off first. Huns were't pleased. Didn't think it was playing the game according to Potsdam rules.

We waddled into their ambush for the attacking troops. Never saw men so frightened. Fled panic stricken in all directions. Only a few chaps stayed behind and they tried to stop us by machine gun fire. Smashed them to bits and left their machine guns to be picked up by the Yorkshiremen they hoped to surprise.

Went snorting after the enemy wherever we could find them. Their losses were terrible. Later strong detachments tried to make their way back, supported by big guns. Lined up across the road and gave them hot time. Every time that they tried to rush through we ripped their ranks to bits. At last they gave it up. Very wise of them.

Sunday.—Good work of frightening Huns continues. Better day, better deed. Fritz didn't think that. The blighters opened rifle fire on us at two hundred yards. It went like water off a duck's back. Fritz could not make it out. Kept up the fire, but got a bit nervy as the blessed old thing kept waddling up to him. Ladled out death as you might vamp out indifferent music from a hurdy-gurdy.

Fritz got fits. No fight left in him. Prisoner, scared to death. Some of them acted as though they believed that we used our tanks for making sausages out of prisoners. We had a lot of trouble in explaining that once they surrendered they were quite safe.

Finished an exciting week. Got plenty of fun, but one wants a good rest after a spell with a tank.

HEALTHIEST ONE IN THE FAMILY

No Sign Of Dropsy And Kidney Trouble Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

HATTIE WARREN

Port Robinson, Ont., July 8th, 1915.

"We have used "Fruit-a-tives" in our house for over three years and have always found them a good medicine. Our little girl, Hattie, was troubled with Kidney Disease. The Doctor said she was threatened with Dropsy. Her limbs and body were all swollen and we began to think she could not live. Finally, we decided to try "Fruit-a-tives". She began to show improvement after we had given her a few tablets. In a short time, the swelling had all gone down and her flesh began to look more natural. Now she is the healthiest one in the family and has no signs of the old ailment. We can not say too much for "Fruit-a-tives" and would never be without them".

WILLIAM WARREN.

PRISONERS WEAR WOODEN SHOES.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—The French, English, Russian and Belgian soldiers in the German prison camps will, in the future, have to wear wooden shoes. Leather has become very scarce and can hardly be obtained in quantities sufficient to cover the needs of the German army. Two million pairs of wooden shoes have been ordered by the army administration from German and Dutch factories.

PRESS COMMENTS ON THE SHORTAGE OF COAL.

State should Prove Scandal

Springfield (Ohio) Sun.—"The State should take up the present coal scandal and probe it to the bottom. If it is possible to fix the blame and bring the guilty party to trial, they should be given the full extent of the law. The murderer strikes only at one individual, while these criminals attack the welfare of the entire nation."

"Very Ugly Times Coming."

Philadelphia Inquirer:—"We enter upon the cold weather with our markets almost stripped bare of the great commodity and with prospects of some very ugly times before the winter is over. Our prosperity is going to have its bitter side for many very soon, and is already appearing."

"Railroads have Failed."

Cleveland Leader:—"The railroads have been put to a sudden and unexpected test and they have failed. They are without the equipment that they ought to have. They have not even been keeping up with the business growth in the country, much less preparing for a busier future."

"Who Wants to Bother?"

Philadelphia Record:—"A little foresight would have prevented this situation, but who wants to bother about coal in summer time? Still this must be done by both dealers and consumers, or such a scarcity as is reported in some quarters is likely to become an annual occurrence."

"Calls for Drastic Treatment."

Brooklyn Eagle:—"The dealers are inclined, and perhaps with justice, to blame the railroads for not furnishing adequate transportation from the mines to the seaboard; and this is a matter calling for drastic treatment by the Interstate Commerce Commission."

FRENCH LOAN A SUCCESS.

Paris, Nov. 10.—Minister of Finance Ribot announced in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday that $2,270,000,000 has been subscribed to the last loan. Of this more than 50 per cent is new money.

JUST THE THING FOR LITTLE ONES

Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine a mother can give her little ones. They regulate the bowels; sweeten the stomach; banish constipation and indigestion; relieve colds and simple fevers and make teething easy. Concerning them Mrs. Herbert Johnston, Maymoot, Sask., writes:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past four years and find them just the thing for babies and young children." They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

HEALTH AND ALCOHOL.

NOW THAT PROHIBITION of the use of Alcohol in Ontario is in force it might be of interest to discuss the relation of its use to the health of the community. What is the opinion of those qualified to know, upon this subject?

Perhaps as good an authority as any are the life insurance companies. The men who manage these companies are hard-headed business men. Their business is to sell life insurance at so much per annum either for life or for a given period of years. Insurance men obviously do not want to take any greater risks than they can avoid. What is the attitude of insurance companies to the user of alcohol?

Recently the actuary of the New York Life Insurance Company obtained the opinions of seven of the leading life companies upon the following five questions.

(1) Are total abstainers considered favorable risks for insurance?

(2) The hazard on lives of men who drink moderately each day but who never take alcohol to excess?

(3) Does a long-lived family history, a healthful occupation, or other favorable features offset a fairly free use of alcohol daily?

(4) What is the longevity of those who drink moderately each day, but who occasionally drank to excess several years ago?

(5) What is the expectance of persons who have taken cure for alcoholism several years ago and have been total abstainers since that time?

The replies indicate that abstainers from alcohol have from 10 to 30 per cent. lower mortality than non-abstainers. American statistics corroborate the British in this respect.

On the question of the life expectancy of men who have taken the cure and have been total abstainers for years, it was found that there is an extra mortality of 70 per cent. Men who had cured themselves had an extra mortality of 32 per cent. The steady free users of alcohol had, compared with abstainers, a mortality of 25 per cent.

The principal organic disease which results from drinking alcohol is cirrhosis of the liver. The rate from this disease among drinkers as compared with abstainers was increased 500 per cent. A moderate drinker who occasionally drank to excess ten or more years before insuring would be regarded as a hazardous risk and would be charged an extra premium. The company would take into consideration the man's age and his family life.

In regard to the third question the New York Life actuary says: "The feeling exists among medical men that, while there is a markedly favorable effect on longevity through a first-class family history it is not an offset to a habit of three glasses of whiskey a day, which is likely to be exceeded in the future in a good percentage of cases."

HEALTH OFFICERS AND CLEAN CITIES.

In visiting an urban centre it is almost possible to judge of the ability and character of the Medical Officer of Health by the cleanliness and general tidy appearance of the streets, lanes, market, and general environs.

On a recent visit to one of the smaller cities in Ontario the writer had the pleasure of observing a splendid farmers' market. A long double line of horses and wagons occupied the area about the market hall. The venders arrived early; they were a clean, well dressed, smart-looking collection of farmers and farmers' wives, sons and daughters. The market was evidently an established affair, for the city housewives were on hand early; many had their baskets, and after careful selection made their purchases and departed. By eleven o'clock scarcely a single vehicle was left. The farm products were sold and the venders had left for their homes.

The dining-room of the hotel where I stayed overlooked the street. The windows were unscreened yet not a fly was to be seen in the room. What a contrast to the dining-room of a nearby city where I had dined the previous day! In the latter the room, which had not even the excuse of an adjacent market filled with horse-driven vehicles, swarmed with flies. They were on the walls, the tables, the food—on everything. It was disgusting!

On my complimenting the manager of the hotel upon the neatness of his place and of the adjoining market, he said: "Oh, Dr. ——— (the Medical Officer of Health) would take our heads off if things were left in a dirty condition." Further evidence of the generally efficient character of this officer was obtained from others. I made enquiry as to what was the cost to the city for this efficient health officer, and found it to be but a small sum. Yet, he is doubtless worth thousands to the citizens, for no one knows how much illness and death his daily vigilance may have prevented. This city is to be envied for having such a faithful officer.

FOREIGNERS FLEEING.

El Paso, Nov. 10.—All foreign residents of Chihuahua City are expected to arrive at the border on a train which is reported to have left Chihuahua City early yesterday. The fear of an attack on the Chihuahua State capital by Villa bandits, and a massacre of the foreign residents is said to be responsible for the reported exodus.

Scalloped Potatoes.

Peel five potatoes and cut in thin slices. Put in a deep baking-pan a layer of potatoes, then some melted butter, chopped green pepper and salt, alternate layers of potatoes and seasoning until the pan is two-thirds full. Pour over enough sweet milk to cover potatoes and bake for three-quarters of an hour in a moderate oven.

Salad Dressing.

One teaspoonful of salt, four tablespoonfuls of olive oil, two teaspoonfuls of onion, scraped fine; one teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, one teaspoonful of vinegar or lemon juice. Mix thoroughly before adding to salad.

The secrets of fine salad are these: cold, crisp, fresh.

Chicken Souffle.

Two cups scalded milk, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, ½ cup stale breadcrumbs; 2 cups cooked chicken, finely chopped; yolks 3 eggs, well beaten; 1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley, whites 3 eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Make sauce of first ingredients. Add breadcrumbs and cook two minutes. Remove from fire, add chicken, yolk of beaten eggs and parsley. Then fold in whites of eggs. Turn into a buttered dish and bake thirty-five minutes in a slow oven or steam in cup thirty-five minutes.

Pickled Red Cabbage.

Slice up the cabbage fine and place it in a colander, sprinkle each layer with common salt. Let the strips drain for two days, then put them in a jar and cover with boiling vinegar. If a spice is used it must be put in with the vinegar in the proportion of one ounce of whole black pepper and one-half ounce of all-spice to the quart.

Chiffon blouses, dress tops and blouses now have their edges overbound with a narrow 1-8 or 1-4 inch band of the chiffon to give just the right degree of solidity to this material. Edges of surplice fronts, collars, cuffs, etc., all show this finish. If the material is taffeta or satin the overbound edge matches. Of course this edge is put on by hand and if often pressed into a fold in the centre first to keep it from getting askew.

Things Perhaps You Don't Know

When cleaning house, a stick with a notch in the end, to lift picture cords from the hooks, is a great convenience.

LIME IN THE CELLAR.

Put a few lumps of unslaked lime in the cellar. It will keep the air pure and sweet, and also absorb the dampness

PARAFFIN FOR POTTERY.

When pottery does not "hold water" pour in enough hot paraffin to make a thin coating over the sides, and the bottom.

A COAT OF VARNISH

To make your linoleum last longer, and have a much better appearance, give it a good coat of varnish every two months.

Never throw away cake no matter how dry—but the next time you bake a custard slice it on top before putting into the oven. This makes a delicious caramel crust.

Development of Beauty. — The student of humanity and the cause of things may sometimes wonder at the mysterious methods of nature in perpetuating the species. In seeking to even up things, establishing a balance Emmerson suggests this in the Laws of Compensation.

Beauty in a man, that is what would be termed beauty of face, is despised by women. One often hears the remark made of couples: "Isn't it a pity that such a beautiful woman should have such a great homely husband," and frequently without knowing the kindly character of the man the word "brute" or "beast" is interjected.

Man on the other hand seems to ignore the question of strength and size in choosing a mate. He falls in love with a beautiful face, an attractive figure, a bright and winsome countenance. The strong, vigorous man is repelled by the coarse featured, rugged type of woman, and seems drawn by an irresistible impulse to the beautifully formed type, with beautiful features to match.

The importance of developing beauty in woman and strength in men, cannot be over-estimated for upon these two things depend the perpetuty of the race. Strange to say, much of the beauty of women depends upon the care she receives during the first two years of her life. Mr. Ferdinand Herb, in his splendid book, "Beauty and Motherhood," has given us many valuable pointers, but few of greater importance than his chapter 13, from which I quote:

"Considerable space has been devoted to the intimate connection between the ovaries, their inner secretions, and woman's beauty. This has been done for two reasons: First, to emphasize that deficiencies in beauty and sex-characteristics are a form of undevelopment frequently acquired during infancy and childhood through lack of proper care; and, second, to emphasize further that these deficiencies, should not be regarded as unpreventable or irremediable.

"There is neither justification nor time to bewail the cruelty of an unkind fate. Instead of accepting with resignation the shortcomings of Nature, every defect in the development of growing girls should be considered an imperative admonition and arouse parents, guardians, or the afflicted themselves to seek relief at the earliest possible moment by applying special care in a definite, well defined direction before it is too late. Instead of falling a burden to others, many mothers may be spared years of misery and inefficiency, and have their attractiveness, beauty, happiness and productiveness materially increased provided adequate attention is paid to the essentials during their growing years.

"While it is true that extraordinarily good results are occasionally accomplished in the undeveloped adult by systematic and persistent endeavors, full success is rare. To arrest unfavorable tendencies completely, and to produce a physique insuring health, efficiency and beauty, the efforts must begin during the period of infancy or early childhood. At that time the outer form and inner organs are unfolding, and can readily be moulded into proper shape. Never again in life is this opportunity offered. It is the care and attention the future mother receives at this period of her existence which largely determines her efficiency as wife and mother and lays the foundation for her future health and beauty.

Special attention has been paid to the first and second years of life, not without good reason. A good start made at that time is indispensable to direct development into the right channels and to lay the foundation upon which future efforts can build with success.

"Four factors are influential to assure the physical development of the tender girl into a strong and beautiful mother: (1) Food; (2) Exercise; (3) Sleep; (4) Water, air and light.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Rub rusty metal with turpentine.

Chicken fat makes delicious crisp cookies.

Soup stock may be canned as well as anything else.

Never wash the windows when the sun shines on them.

Buy household goods in packages as much as possible. This is sensible economy.

In making chicken salad be sure to take out every atom of bone, gristle and skin.

To keep lemons put them in a jar of clean white sand, so that they do not touch.

Good lard is much better than butter for basting roasted meat and for frying.

Use very little blueing in washing laces for the lace absorbs a great deal of blue.

The hostess of the present aims to set her table as simply as possible, placing only the silver for one course at a time.

The sweet potato makes a very pretty parlor vine. Put the tuber in sand in a hanging basket and water occasionally.

To make a faded cotton dress pure white boil it in water which has half a cupful of cream of tartar to two gallons of water.

The simplest of all salads—lettuce with French dressing—is never too little for a light meal, nor too much for a heavy one.

Fish or eggs may be served in many ways as the chief course of a summer meal.

To preserve the flavour of the olives when a large bottle has been opened, pour a little olive oil on the top and keep well corked.

Plainer meals are a great help to the housekeeper in hot weather.

Peas and corn should always be canned a few hours after they are gathered.

Fine linens and pieces of lingerie will last much longer if they are wrung out by hand and not put through the wringer.

A New Orleans individual salad is made of a thin slice of onion, a slice of tomato and a slice of green pepper, dressed with oil and vinegar.

It is not safe to eat mushrooms after they have been allowed to get cold. They develop injurious qualities and become poisonous.

When the family has luncheon on porch or lawn a tea wagon is of the greatest service to wheel out the dishes first and then the hot foods.

The shortest road to victory is every ounce of Britain's strength.

She who builds up health lays up treasure in the Bank of Nature.

London reports a renewed vogue for pony coats this coming season.

The coat-dress has won its success by combining comfort and smartness.

A South Carolina court has sentenced a man "to be hired out to his wife for two years."

Some of the new separate coats have small yokes, with fullness springing from them.

Few women are really afraid of mice, but they hate to disappoint men, who seem to expect them to be afraid.

Mrs. Mary A. Landon, of South Elgin, has the unique distinction of being the only woman railway president in the United States.

And sometimes a man marries for love of money.

Even a straight-laced man has been known to go crooked.

Sometimes the thing a woman does is the effect without a cause.

Many a man sets himself up as a hero because he has no valet.

A woman never thinks of writing a letter if she has some one to talk to.

After the age of 25 a girl's birthday anniversaries occur every third year.

FOOD ECONOMY

Every housewife knows the length of time it takes to prepare the most ordinary soup, the cost of fuel, ingredients, etc. But with a few vegetables, one or two Oxo Cubes, a little flour and water, a most excellent soup can be prepared in a few minutes at the cost only of a few cents.

So with entrées, savouries, sauces, invalid dishes, the Oxo Cube way is the quick, convenient, efficient way, and makes for economy every time

Another point of great importance is the peculiar power of Oxo Cubes to increase the nutritive value of other dishes. For instance, Oxo and rice is much more nourishing than rice without Oxo. Hence when Oxo Cubes are used lighter meals can be indulged in Tins of 4, 10, 50 and 100 Cubes.

OXO CUBES

LIQUID CATARRH REMEDIES USELESS, ONLY RELIEVE, NEVER CURE

They go direct to the stomach, have very little effect on the lining of the nose and throat, and entirely fail to cure. Only by cleansing the air passages, by relieving the inflammation and killing the germs is cure possible. No combination of antiseptics is so successful as Catarrhozone. In breathing it you send the richest pine balsams right to the seat of the disease. Irritating phlegm is cleared out, hoarseness, coughing and hacking are cured. For a permanent cure for Catarrh, nothing equals Catarrhozone, get it to-day, but beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone. All dealers sell Catarrhozone, large size containing two months treatment, costs $1.00; small size 50c; sample size 25c.

Perhaps Fancied Her.

"What!" cried the careful housewife, "you charge me fifteenpence for these potatoes?" "Yes, madam," answered the polite greengrocer. "That is the very lowest price we can sell them for." "How is it that I can get them from Jones's for tenpence, then?" "I cannot say, madam. Perhaps Mr. Jones has taken a fancy to you. He is a widower, and you are beautiful. Unfortuflately, I—yes'm—fifteenpence!"

Same in the End.

"Will you be mine for ever ever?" he timidly asked. "No, now that I am a Suffragette I never be yours. But you may be mine when you will," she replied in a matter-of-fact way.

Trusted Him.

"Do you think any girl ever proposed in Leap Year, as they did, Jessie?" he asked her. "Not unless she was obliged to," answered the maiden. "Mm! I never thought of that," he said, after a pause. "Oh, George," she said, laying her head affectionately on his arm and looking up into his eyes, "you, I am sure, will never force me to, that humiliation."

APPLE CREAM.

Peel and core six large apples, cook with a little water two ounces of raisins and the grated rind of a lemon until quite soft. When cold add a glass of sherry and put in a pie dish. Beat the whites of three eggs to a stiff, add a little sugar, spread it over the apples and bake in a slow oven.

Corns Cured Quick

Applied in 3 Seconds

Insomnia

WE can live without food, but not without sleep. Many will recall Dr. Tanner's 40 days without food, but who could live a single week without sleep and retain their reason.

It is during sleep that the nervous system is restored, and the nerve force, consumed by the activities of the day, is replaced.

Sleeplessness is one of the first and one of the most torturing symptoms of nervous exhaustion.

With sleeplessness you find nervous headaches, tired, wornout feelings, indigestion, lack of energy and strength. You are nervous and irritable, and cannot compose yourself to rest or sleep.

The nerve force in the body is at low ebb, and the feeble, wasted nerve cells must be nourished back to health and strength by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

You must not confuse this food cure with drugs taken to produce sleep, for it works in an entirely different way. It is not a quick relief, but a restorative, upbuilding treatment. As the nerves are revitalized sleep comes naturally with its soothing influence and hastens recovery.

Sleeplessness

Mrs. Edson Brook, Trenholmville, Que., writes:—"I want to state that I have never taken anything to do me so much good as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I am never without it in the house. I was so nervous I could not sleep, but now I sleep soundly at nights and wake up feeling refreshed and ready for the day's work. I used the Nerve Food for months, and found that it just suits my needs, and has built up the system wonderfully. I know it is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that has brought about the great change in my condition, and I am thankful for it."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

BOY'S RUSSIAN SUIT.

By Anabel Worthington.

The Russian suit for the small boy was long ago introduced and received a wave of welcome that no winter has ever chilled. To-day it holds its own against all others for popularity, for mothers find it easy to make and it launders like a towel or any straight piece.

In the illustration we have a Russian suit with the straight trousers which the boy is so proud of and which show the newest development in suits for little men. They are particularly well cut and fasten with buttons and buttonholes.

The blouse, with coat closing, is belted at a lowered waistline with contrasting goods and collared and cuffed with material to correspond: there is also a useful pocket to decorate at the left side. While the contrasting idea is according to fashion's rule, you may make the suit of all one material if you choose.

Tub fabrics are used all through the winter by some mothers for play suits, and among them galatea, Indian head, linen and the like are to be considered for developing this model. Homespun, wool mixtures and serges are staples that are well thought of if you want a suit not tubable. The suit is as easy to make as an apron.

The suit pattern No. 7982 is cut in sizes 2, 4 and 6 years. To obtain the pattern send 10c to the office of this paper.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address in full, number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

WALKING IS A LOST ART

By Woods Hutchinson, M.D.
The World's Foremost Writer on Medical Subjects

...strong for the primitive virtues, and half of our moral ... with "Back To" ... Of the ... to the simple life is ... crusade fostered by The ... in Boston and New York for ... of the good old-fashioned, ... sport of walking. Nothing ... more useful or more surely ... for it is the unanimous opinion ... physical experts that even after ... and most perfectly equipped ... are available, the ... healthful and most practical ... of exercise is walking, ... for city dwellers.

... this noble and health-giving ... fallen into such a state of ... that our urban ... are in danger of losing ... of their legs entirely and forgetting what those valuable members ... have as source of amusement ... upon the vaudeville stage.

Of course, the rock-bottom, fundamental reason why we don't walk more, why our noble and symmetrical lower limbs have so nearly degenerated into mere props to support us in series of graceful poses, is obvious enough. It is too much like work! No self-respecting modern will descend to the primitive method of hoofing it, with its lost motion, waste of time, and superfluous perspiration, if any other possible form of locomotion or, more correctly, "locoportation" is available.

But there is nothing new about this reluctance, nor is it in the slightest degree peculiar to the city dwellers; the farmer and the villager loathe walking just as cordially as the city man does. The only reason why our honored grandfather or the survivors of his type in the rural districts today, walked more than we do was that, like the beaver in the hunter's story, who climbed the tree, he had to—there was no other means of transit available. In fact to this day the average farmer will wait an hour for a team to become available or a horse to be caught in the pasture sooner than walk a mile. And in the unspoiled country districts, where the old-fashioned virtues of hospitality and courtesy to entire strangers still survive, the driver whose kindly offer of a lift you have declined on the ground that you are walking for pleasure will gaze at you and shake his head in a way that suggests doubt as to your mental balance. With the introduction of the interurban trolley and the farmer's auto, even this difference in necessity between town and country disappeared, and it is seriously to be doubted whether the modern farmer actually does walk much more than the average city man.

Like most of the so-called virtues of an earlier day and the simpler life, the more active habits of the country dweller are a matter of necessity, not of choice.

As a matter of fact, there is no inherent reason why city people should not walk just as much and as often as country people. Sidewalks are hard and crowded, but they never get ankle-deep in mud. But there are two great practical obstacles in the way—one from within, and the other from without, as it were. The two most powerful reasons why it will be difficult to revive pedestrianism are the trolley cars underneath us and the automobiles on top of us. The former make walking seem laborious, the latter make it so dangerous and disagreeable as to be practically impossible. Autos and foot passengers on the same street or road are about as compatible as the devil and holy water. It is hardly too much to say that the automobile as she is at present driven, has made walking for pleasure or walking for health—walking of every sort in fact, except mere pavement strolling or hurried, rabbit-like dashes for the shelter of the nearest subway or trolley car—practically impossible, a source of annoyance and perpetual discomfort instead of a pleasure.

Nothing short of totally separate roadways, either for automobiles alone or for pedestrians alone, can restore to the latter his rights to life, limb and the pursuit of happiness. And that is one of the most vital problems of transportation now before the community—far more important than the long and short haul or terminal facilities or waterfront rights.

One great advantage in a good spirited walk, especially along a country road, is the tone that it gives to the physical make-up. The next time you feel that you have a stomach, and that you are in for a season of indigestion or dyspepsia, take a good brisk walk of five or six miles (preferably along a country road) and you will probably be able to do without the pills of the physician or the drugs of the druggist. Get out in the open, hold your head up, breath in deeply of nature's elixir, and commune with Nature and Nature's God.

E. H. Sothern will go on a 20-week tour for the Red Cross made in "The Proud Prince" and "If I were King."

Silver Securities

From now forward silver stocks will command greater interest among securities buyers.

The absorption of the white metal by Europe is proving a material factor in keeping the price of the metal close to the 70c mark, and the prospective buying promises to establish materially higher figures.

A country-wide boom in silver securities seems inevitable. It has already doubled the interest in copper during the past two years.

Still, pursuing the policy that enabled our clients to take full advantage of the sensational movement in coppers, namely, directing attention to these issues before the great investing and trading public had appreciated their possibilities, we recommend the silver issues for closely studied.

Now we suggest the immediate purchase of Tonopah and Cobalt securities.

Hungry Budapest Crowds Wait Hours For Rations

LONDON, Nov. 9.— The Hungarian government, frightened by the spectre of famine, is seeking to appoint a food dictator but can find nobody to undertake the job and dictate with regard to food which has no existence, writes a Swiss correspondent. He describes how the commonest sight in Budapest is that of little crowds, mainly women, who wait wearily outside the shops for food which they cannot get.

Mr. Tabody, in the Pesti Naplo, describes the torture of these unfortunate women in an interesting article, telling how he saw nothing among the waiting crowds in front of a butcher's shop a captain of police in civilian clothes. "I went up to speak to him," says Mr. Tabody, "and found that the dreaded judge of the food price raisers, who has sentenced some thousands of them to imprisonment, has to stand among the rest and await his turn. He, being an expert on the food miseries of this unfortunate country, told me that the women have to stand one or two hours to get a few potatoes; from two to three hours if they want a bit of sausage, from three to four hours for a quarter of a pound of sugar and from four to five for a bit of lard or fat. His servant girl was knitting her stockings before a green grocer's shop while he waited for a bit of lard. A woman who wants to get something to eat for her children every day must spend at least five or six hours waiting in the queues."

The Budapest authorities have just issued two tickets, one for the general victualling, a general kind of ticket, without which single tickets for bread, meat, maize, potatoes, etc., are useless. These general victualling tickets can be procured only by the permanent residents in Budapest and the Transylvanian refugees, which means the travellers and visitors must take their food with them or go hungry. The second ticket, issued to the holders of the general tickets, is a bean ticket, which entitles every inhabitant to buy a half pound of beans a month. This makes the eighteenth ticket the inhabitants of Budapest now have to procure, and it is reckoned that in order to get the goods referred to in any of the eighteen tickets involves the loss of half a day's work.

Prices Still Soaring.

People in Budapest are tired of grumbling about the prices of necessaries. Within the last month they have again risen from fifty to one hundred per cent, and even the prices would not matter so much if only the food could be obtained. Budapest is like a town besieged, and the people will soon have to follow the example of the Parisians in 1870 and eat rats and mice. The principal trouble is that the Prussians are taking away nearly everything, and what they leave is seized by the Austrians.

There is scarcely any soap in Hungary, and the Prussians and Austrians are as badly off in this respect as the Hungarians are. A small quantity, however, is imported from Holland and from the northern neutrals.

The Pesti Naplo learns that the distribution of the imported soap among the three allies is being made in this proportion: Germany gets 70 per cent.; Austria 27 1-3 per cent., and Hungary the rest—that is 2 1-2 per cent. It is almost the same as regards Hungarian produce, for the Prussians take the best part of it and leave the Hungarians to starve. The general depression on account of the distressing state of affairs is very great, and the newspapers devote more than half their entire space to what they call their food miseries.

Soldiers on Half Rations.

If one takes all these things into account, with the fact that the military are being fed on half rations, and that winter will inevitably bring with it a famine such as no imagination can picture, it is possible to forecast an early end of the war. Winter is the most dreaded word in Hungary today, especially as there is no fuel and no hope of an improvement in this respect, for the railways are over-burdened with the work of military transport and cannot supply civilians with fuel. In a month's time things will look still gloomier.

In Austria the conditions are said to be even worse, for there the people have not only no vegetables but in many places they are sometimes without bread for weeks, and the working classes, especially in Bohemia, are in a dangerous state of exasperation. Ten thousand munition workers, although under military control, struck work in Bohemia at the beginning of October, and would not work until two wagon loads of flour were distributed among them. Twenty of the leaders were arrested and have not been seen since.

The newspaper correspondents in Switzerland send parcels of food and soap and such things every week, and are spending the time in supplying the staffs of their newspapers with commodities instead of telegraphing news.

Hope in Roumania.

In such circumstances it is no cause for surprise that great things are expected of the concentration against that country will end in its invasion and the seizure of the great quantities of food-stuffs which it possessed. There are some military critics who attribute the Prussian campaign on the Transylvanian front to this end and argue that unless Germany and the monarchy can procure foodstuffs from somewhere within the next two or three months (and this somewhere can only be Roumania) the game will be up before the winter is over. The "cannot starve us out" boast has become sufficiently transparent and prominent politicians agree that first of all the starving out of the army will follow.

Statisticians contend that the first two years of the war indicate that the producing power of the Central Empires is far short of their needs, in spite of the assistance derived from neutrals during that period. As the war goes on the food difficulties will increase and sooner or later internal troubles will be too intense to allow of the continuation of an external struggle. The stock of cattle, as compared with pre-war times, is said to have decreased seventy per cent., while the producing power of the land is said to show forty per cent. decrease, owing to the shortage of labour and materials. By organization, by resort to the ticket system, Germany has been able to go on, but no organization will help in Austria-Hungary, it is declared, where there is nothing to organize.

THE DOOR TO HEALTH

Is Through the Rich, Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make

The blood is responsible for the health of the body. If it is good, disease cannot exist. If it is bad, the door is shut against good health, disease is bound to appear in one form or another. One person may be seized with rheumatism or sciatica, another with anaemia, indigestion, heart palpitation, headaches or backaches, unstrung nerves, or any of the many other forms of ailment that comes when the blood is weak and watery. There is just one certain, speedy cure—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make new, rich, blood, and this good blood strengthens the whole system and brings good health and happiness. Thousands owe their present good health, some, life itself, to the pills. Miss Delima Laliberti, St. Jerome, Que., says: "Last year I seemed gradually to grow weak and run down. I did not sleep well, had a poor appetite, and grew pale and generally languid. I consulted a doctor who told me I was anaemic, and gave me a tonic. This I took faithfully for some time, but it did not help me, and I appeared to be growing worse, and finally I was hardly able to go about the house and almost wholly incapacitated for work. While in this condition a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I got several boxes. I was not long after I began their use when I could see an improvement, which just manifested itself in an improved appetite and better rest at night. From this on the improvement was rapid and I was not long in regaining perfect health. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a real blessing for all weak girls."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

COLD SNAP IN WEST.

Sudden Drop in Temperature During the Night.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 11.—After a long spell of uniformly mild weather throughout the West temperatures took a sudden drop Thursday. The coldest recorded was at Regina, 7 above zero, Medicine Hat, Swift Current and Saskatoon registered 10 above. Winnipeg showed the highest temperature between Port Arthur and the mountains with 14 above.

Tells How He Got Films In Shrapnel Rain

New York. — Nelson E. Edwards, a daring movie photographer, who for the last ten months has been making war pictures for the International Film Service, with the German armies, has returned to this country.

He is the only foreigner and unofficial photographer who ever made pictures of the German battle fleet, and submarines, in Wilhelmhaven and Kiel Canal. He also sent the first films back to America showing the arrival of the German super-submarine Deutschland on her return home from the United States.

Many of the most thrilling reels of fighting on the western front, in France, and in the Balkans, produced by the International Film Service, were taken by Mr. Edwards.

"For nearly ten months I have been recording big war events in Turkey, the Balkans, Germany and France for the International Film Service," said Mr. Edwards yesterday after the Nieuw Amsterdam of the Holland-America line had docked.

IN GERMAN STRONGHOLD.

"Of all my unusual experiences and adventures I am proudest of the fact that I am the only foreigner to have visited Keil Canal and Wilhelmshaven (the great naval strongholds of the German fleets.) I was at both places soon after the sea fight between the British and the German fleets off the Skaggerak.

"There I made films of the battleships torpedo boats and submarines. This rare privilege was granted to me for the International Film Service, through the courtesy of Captain Boyed, former naval attache of the German Embassy at Washington. The German officers from Admiral Sheer to the enlisted men were extremely courteous and kind and aided me in every way possible to make the films for exhibition in America.

"I left the United States last December with the Ford Peace Expedition, and after arriving in Denmark, decided to continue on into Germany. I had great trouble in getting to The Hague because of my cameras, and finally had to make the trip across the North Sea in a small boat. The German diplomats in The Hague were cordial to me and arranged my passports to Berlin.

BY TRAIN TO TURKEY.

"After spending some time in the Kaiser's capital, I went to Turkey on the Balkan Express a short time after the direct railroad line between Constantinople and Berlin was opened. Our train was wrecked near Nish, where we crashed into a troop train.

"Reaching Constantinople, I made films of the Sultan and his highest officers. Then I proceeded to districts where fighting of the fiercest kind was in progress. There I obtained many valuable films at the risk of my life.

"Later I returned to Berlin and was accorded the privilege of going to the western front in the Vosges Mountains. Most of the films taken in that active sector were made under actual fire. Several times I barely saved my entire outfit from destruction by shrapnel by running into dug outs.

"I hurried to Bremen for the arrival of the Deutschland and took the first films of the return of the undersea merchantman from her notable trip to the United States.

FOOD PLENTIFUL IN GERMANY.

"Every possible courtesy was extended to me by the German military authorities. I found conditions in Germany about normal. There is plenty of food. The people are determined and are satisfied over the achievements of their armies.

"Conditions in Turkey seemed very favorable to me, although military regulations and requirements there are not as strict as they are in Germany.

"On my arrival in Kirkwall, the British pumped me for every bit of information I might possibly have about Germany and the Germans. My personal effects were searched several times.

"Mails to Germany and neutral countries have been disrupted by the British censorship. In many instances letters are held up for three and four months. The editorial pages of nearly all the American newspapers are cut out before they are allowed to pass into Germany."

Bathe Internally

Over 50,000 People Are Now Doing So

For many years physicians have agreed that the vast majority of human ills were caused by accumulated waste in the Lower Intestines that in our present way of living Nature could not remove all the waste without assistance, no matter how regular we might be, and that the poisons from this waste circulating through the blood pulled us away down below par, and were responsible for many diseases of a serious nature.

During this time the "J. B. L. Cascade" for Internal Bathing, has become of sheer recommendation and those of its users, been steadily growing in favor.

Recently, however, the startling news which has been covering this country that great surgeons and specialists have been operating on the Lower Intestine for the most chronic and serious diseases, has caused Americans to become thoroughly awake to the importance of keeping this Lower Intestine free from all poisonous waste matter, and over 500,000 are now using Internal Baths.

If you try the "J. B. L. Cascade," you will find yourself always bright, confident and capable—the poisonous waste makes us listless, dull and nervous. Internal Baths are Nature's own cure for Constipation—just warm water properly applied. Drugs force Nature—the "J. B. L. Cascade" gently assists her.

Call and see it at the Warne Drug Co., or ask them for "Why Man of To-day is only 50 Per cent. Efficient," a booklet of great interest, which is given free on request. If you prefer write for Booklet to Dr. Charles A. Tyrrell, 163 College Street, Toronto.

British Plantation Rubber Is Saving Canada Millions

Low Prices of Rubbers and Overshoes Due to Britain's Control of Situation

Here in Canada many of us have fallen into the truly Anglo-Saxon habit of considering the "Mother of Parliaments" slow and a bit behind the times. The present price of rubber, when its cause is revealed, affords one of the many proofs that such an opinion is away off the mark.

Thanks to great rubber plantations established, in the face of criticism and ridicule, many years before in her tropical Dominions, Great Britain at the outbreak of the war held a firm and tightening grip on the world's supply of raw rubber—a grip reinforced by her dominating navy. From 60% in 1914, the production of these plantations has grown this year to 75% of the whole world's output, leaving only about half the requirements of the United States alone to come from all other sources.

The result has been that the needs of the Allies, enormous though they are, have been plentifully supplied, while Germany has been reduced to registered mails and the "Deutschland" in desperate attempts to mitigate her rubber famine. Neutrals have been allowed all the rubber they want, at prices actually lower than before the war, so long as they prevent any of it from reaching the enemy, while Canada and other parts of the Empire have an abundant supply at equally favorable Government-regulated prices.

In this foresight and generosity of the British Government lies the reason why rubber alone, of all the great staples, has not gone up in price—why rubbers and overshoes, in spite of increased cost of fabric, chemicals and labor, are as inexpensive as ever, while shoes are costing several dollars a pair more. Wearing rubbers or overshoes through this winter to protect these expensive shoes is more than practical thrift—it is grateful patriotism, for in thus saving leather we make it easier for the Government to secure the absolutely necessary supplies of this alarmingly scarce material for our soldiers.

Both Thrift and Patriotism Point to Rubbers!

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

MASTER AND MAN

A Transformation Scene In Russia

By F. A. MITCHEL

Count Meriwitz died about the time the nihilist movement started in Russia—that movement which led up to the revolution and established the duma. The count left an only son, Dmitri, who had but just come of age and inherited the title and a large fortune from his father. But, while Count Meriwitz had been a loyal subject of the czar, his successor was bent on achieving for the nobles some share in the government.

Dmitri's views became known to his cousin, Ivan Ivanovitch, an unscrupulous man, who in case of Dmitri's removal would become heir to the Meriwitz title and estates. Dmitri was of a trustful nature and confided to Ivan that he was a member of a revolutionary circle, endeavoring to enlist his cousin in the cause of wresting from the czar his autocratic power. Ivan pretended to turn a willing ear to Dmitri's ideas, while he was secretly evolving a plan by which the latter might be sent to Siberia, in which event his citizenship might be taken from him and his estate confiscated.

Ivan, having possessed himself of proof of his cousin's complicity with the nihilists, sent an anonymous communication to the government that he would furnish evidence against a noble of treasonable intent on certain conditions. The plotter stood between the writer and a fortune. If he was convicted and deprived of life or citizenship the informer would expect the government to permit him to succeed to the title and estates instead of their passing to the government.

Ivan's offer was accepted, and he was invited to call upon the chief minister of state. During his visit he gave the name of Count Dmitri Meriwitz as the offender and received the promise he had named—that when his cousin was convicted he should be left in possession of the Meriwitz title and property.

Now, Count Dmitri was very much beloved by those composing his household and his tenants. His valet, Stepan Oblonsky, a man twenty years his senior, who had served the late count, adored him. Stepan was as keen to scent villainy as Dmitri was obtuse to it. Ivan Ivanovitch visited his cousin, and it was in the latter's home that Dmitri endeavored to induce the former to join the nihilists. Stepan overheard a part of the conversation between them and interpreted at a glance, by Ivan's expression, that he was leading the count into a trap.

When Ivan left the Meriwitz home Stepan shadowed him and saw him enter the office of an official who had charge of the secret police for that district. This was quite enough for the servitor, and, returning to his master, he told him what he had seen and implored him to flee.

Dmitri, convinced of his cousin's treachery and not relishing banishment to Siberia, availed himself of his valet's advice and, taking Stepan with him, left at once for Germany.

Several years passed, during which Dmitri remained in exile, but this was very different from being in Siberia. Since the government could not get possession of him no proceedings were instituted against him. This was a great disappointment to Ivan Ivanovitch, who had expected to secure Dmitri's estates. Dmitri, having all the money he wanted, lived in Berlin, Paris, London, Rome—anywhere he chose. But one wants what one cannot have, and the exile pined for his home and his people. Stepan was the only person to remind him of his native land. Indeed, Stepan was a great comfort to him, and Dmitri's gratitude to his valet was proportionate to the service he had rendered.

"If it had not been for you, Stepan," Dmitri often said, "I would now be working in the mines of Siberia."

"This is much better, excellency. Content yourself to remain an exile so long as you may live in luxury."

When the revolution came to a head the count could no longer control his desire to return to Russia. But, being proscribed, if he returned and was recognized he would not only be of no use to the cause, but would run the risk of being sent to that dreaded life lived by those who are doomed to work in the mines of Kara.

Stepan for awhile succeeded in persuading his master to remain away from Russia, but at last Dmitri could stand it no longer to see others supporting the cause he approved while he was living a life of ease. Five years had passed since he left Russia, and these years had brought a greater change in him than any other equal period in his life. At his departure from home he was twenty-one years of age, wore no beard, and his hair was thick. Now he was twenty-six, he wore a full beard and mustache, and his hair had receded from his temples and his forehead. Besides this, his former slender figure had filled out.

He determined to assume another name, return to Russia, which by this time had been granted the duma, and take part as a noble of the land in the assembly that had been constituted to make laws for the country. Nevertheless he had been a long while from Russia and was uncertain as to what he would find on his arrival there. To appear there at all would be hazardous.

He decided to take especial precautions till he had had an opportunity to look about him and judge whether he dared risk recognition. He would take Stepan with him, of course. When he informed his servitor of his intention and Stepan found that he could not dissuade him the valet proposed that after passing the Russian border, until they were satisfied just how dangerous Russia was for the count, Stepan should play master and Dmitri should play man.

This proposition struck the count favorably, and he made arrangements to carry it out. He procured the clothes of a gentleman for Stepan and provided him with a name and title. He was to be Count Sergius Arkadyevich, and the real count was to be his valet, Peter.

Count Sergius and his valet entered Russia by way of Caucasia, going by the Black sea to the extreme eastern end of that water.

Now, Stepan's idea of the greatness of a count illustrates the adage "Put a beggar on horseback and he will ride to the devil." Instead of imitating his master's uniform kindness to him, he went to the other extreme. This was because he did not approve of a great personage treating one of a lower station with any forbearance and feared that if he showed consideration for his master their true relative positions would be given away.

No sooner had they set sail from Constantinople than Stepan became seasick. Dmitri was a good sailor and was able to wait on his supposed master. Whether it was that seasickness makes one careless as to what happens or Stepan's ability to play his role properly was marred by mal de mer, he ordered his valet about, directing him to do all manner of menial services not only imperatively, but with curses for his remissness.

On the same vessel with this false count and false valet were a couple of American globe trotters who, having tired of civilized lands, were striking out in paths usually unfrequented by tourists. They were going to what was then St. Petersburg by the same roundabout way as Count Sergius Arkadyevich and his valet. The Americans were a Mrs. Henderson of Chicago and her daughter, Jaquelin.

When the ship began to pitch and the spurious count sank upon a sofa in the cabin and began to abuse his supposed valet Miss Jaquelin's ideas of a proper consideration of servants by masters received a shock. All those who were sick were calling "Steward!" and the young lady, pretending to mistake the count's valet for a ship's attendant, sent him for a glass of water. The valet, having noticed her favorably, was not slow to respond and devoted himself exclusively to the girl.

During the rest of the voyage there was a struggle between Miss Henderson and Count Sergius for the attentions of the latter's valet. It was, from the count, "Peter, a towel, and be quick about it," and, from Miss Jaquelin, "Steward, I wish you to take me on deck." Peter preferred to attend the lady, who loaded him with tips and other kindnesses, including smiles. She asked him why he remained in the service of such a brute as Count Sergius and offered to ask her mother to give him the position of courier if he would accept it.

Dmitri said that he was bound to his master by bonds that he could not break. Jaquelin inferred that there was some dark story connected with the service and begged to know what it was. Dmitri, in order to satisfy her, told her that he had been a valet to the count's elder brother, who had tyrannized over him so fearfully that he had killed him. He could not escape his present service without being turned over to justice.

This only added to Jaquelin's interest in the unfortunate man. So fascinated was she with him that she dragged her mother over the same route the count and the valet were traveling. When the two men reached a point near where they were known they suddenly disappeared.

The real count, when he learned that the czar had granted the people a constitution, through a friend made overtures to the government for permission to resume his identity, without fear of persecution. He was promised immunity and announced himself a candidate for the duma, to which he was elected.

One day Mrs. Henderson and her daughter visited the duma and saw the valet of their former traveling companion sitting among the members. Great as was their astonishment, it was far greater when they saw Count Sergius Arkadyevich enter dressed as a lackey and respectfully hand his valet his mail.

Miss Jaquelin Henderson was both pleased and miffed at having been imposed upon. Curiosity came in as to why a nobleman was traveling as a valet to his valet. Not willing that the deception should be all on one side, she sent her and her mother's cards to Count Sergius Arkadyevich and waited to see who would appear, the real count or his valet.

Count Dmitri, thinking that it would be good fun to keep up the deception with her, appeared with his supposed master's compliments and an invitation to visit the Arkadyevich manor house.

"Tell your master," said Jaquelin, "that we Americans have been imposed upon too often by bogus European noblemen for me to be thus entrapped."

With this the count laughed and made an explanation. The lady was only appeased when she knew his story.

Later the Hendersons visited the real count and were sumptuously entertained, with the result that Jaquelin became a countess.

CONVICTED OF TAKING AFFECTIONS OF ANOTHER'S WIFE

SARNIA, Nov.—The Fall assizes of the supreme court of Lambton County opened here yesterday before Justice Middleton. A civil case involving the alienation of a wife's affection was concluded this evening.

Thos Raycraft of North Bay, formerly of Sarnia, charged G. N. Clark of Montreal, formerly of Sarnia with the alienation of his wife's affections, and of inducing her to leave home and family. A. Weir appeared for the plaintiff and J. Bain of Toronto for the defendant. The plaintiff asked damages to the extent of $5,000.

The evidence of the plaintiff and his two sons was taken, and brought out the fact that Clark made several visits to the plaintiff's house previous to their removal from this city and had carried on a correspondence with the plaintiff's wife. Raycraft is a lumberman and was away from home practically nine months of the year.

WIFE'S LETTER ON EXHIBIT.

He first discovered the defendant's interest in his wife upon finding a letter which had been written to Clark and which was on exhibit in court. Raycraft asked his wife about the case, and upon her refusal to answer his questions and obey him he had locked her out of the house, but stated that previous to this they had always lived happily.

G. N. Clark, the defendant in the case, denied all these charges, and stated that he had visited the house on, purely business missions in connection with the sale of a piano, and that he had never carried on any correspondence with the plaintiff's wife.

After the opposing counsels had given their addresses to the jury and the justice had summed up the evidence, the jury filed out and after 10 minutes' deliberation brought in a verdict awarding plaintiff $1,500 damages.

No criminal cases were on the docket and in his opening address Justice Middleton stated that it was a matter of gratification that the number of criminal cases throughout the province was not above normal, and hoped that this county could continue its present record.

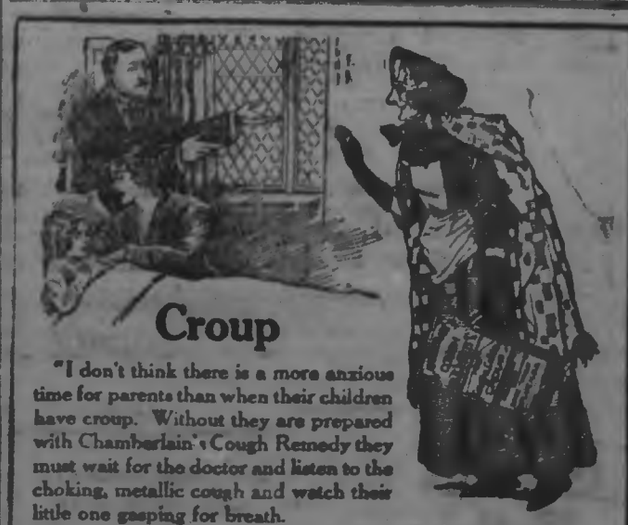
CROPS RAISED ON MARS.

So-Called Canals are Vegetation Says California Professor.

BERKELEY, Cal., Nov. 10.—Dr. Percival Lowell, for twenty-two years head of the Harvard Observatory at Flagstaff, Ariz., in an address at the University of California, announced as his most recent deduction from his study of the planet Mars that the so-called canals were not water channels, but strips of vegetation under human cultivation and undoubtedly watered by artificial canals.

In support of this decision Dr. Lowell said he had determined that the smallest observable spot on Mars would be at least ten miles in diameter. Canals, therefore, could not be seen from earth, Mars, he added, has four seasons much like ours, but longer.

It is absurd to assume, Dr. Lowell said, that our planet is the only one having intelligent inhabitants.



Croup

"I don't think there is a more anxious time for parents than when their children have croup. Without they are prepared with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy they must wait for the doctor and listen to the choking, metallic cough and watch their little one gasping for breath.

You know the great danger of croup is the formation of a false membrane in the larynx, and until this is expelled relief cannot be obtained, and the spasmodic choking continues. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in frequent doses. It will loosen this membrane and cause the child to expel it by vomiting.

"Granny" Chamberlain

is an absolutely safe and certain remedy for croup, and if given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack."

Yours for Health.—Granny Chamberlain

A Message from H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught

One of the significant acts of H. R. H. The Duke of Connaught, before his return to England after a long and honorable service as Governor-General of Canada, was the installation in Government House, at Ottawa, of THOMAS A. EDISON'S wonderful new invention, for perfect re-creation of music,

The NEW EDISON

Thousands of these wonderful instruments have already found their way into the homes of music-loving Canada. They are unlike any other sound-reproducing instrument for the reason that they re-create the voice or instrumental playing of an artist so perfectly that you cannot tell the original from Edison's Re-Creation. The music critics of two hundred of America's leading papers have confessed their inability to make this distinction, even with the artist singing in direct comparison with the instrument.

LITERARY RAMBLES

(By F. M. Dela Force.)

I suppose there is no taste or habit known to civilized beings that offers so many avenues of pleasure as that of reading. The domain of literature is a kingdom in itself. As soon as one enters its confines one commands a most glorious prospect, from the foothills where dwell the compilers and the horde of dilettanti scribblers and poetasters right up to the Olympian heights of the Poets and Philosophers. Thus it is, that although there has been more written on this subject than on any other, there is always something new, something entertaining to be found along its countless by-paths. Lord Rosebery a few years ago likened a library to a cemetery, and drew a gloomy picture of thousands upon thousands of volumes lying hidden away on dust-strewn shelves, their authors long since consigned to the limbo of oblivion, whilst the books, themselves, were uselessly and pitifully displaying their moth-eaten covers to the incurious gaze of passers-by. One of the peculiar features of man's advanced culture seems to be that, if a personage who has secured eminence as a statesman or an orator, delivers himself upon any subject whatsoever, his opinion is bound to be a sound one. One may be pardoned for saying that there are numberless booklovers who differ from this dictum of Lord Rosebery, and who, if asked their opinion, would say that no book, however old, is absolutely valueless. Even in the publications dealing with the arts and sciences, where something new is invented today which renders obsolete what was invented yesterday, there is so much of value, either in relation to the history of the subject or the history of the time as renders its presence on the shelves essential to the student. And the same may be said of volumes of sermons written by the forgotten theologians of past years or of the lives of men and women, whose names to-day are absolutely unknown to the vast majority of readers. It may not be generally conceded but it nevertheless is an absolute fact that there is no greater help to the upbuilding of character in an individual than the study of biography. It has this great advantage over history that it brings out in so much greater detail the faults, foibles or excellencies of the subject than any history can possibly do. In the biographical section of our library there are some 1,000 volumes. Probably half of these deal with persons who in their day, left their mark, but whose footprints in the sands of time have well nigh become obliterated. Let us look into a few taken from the two first shelves of the section:

1.—Ameer Abdurrahmam. To the casual reader the name in itself may suggest nothing. Those of us who are older and have become more or less acquainted with Afghan history, will will remember this potenate as the overthrower of Yakub Khan, the ruler of Afghanistan, during the troublous times prior to 1880, and as the man who more than anyone else helped to bring his country into line with European ideas and ideals. When we consider that Afghanistan is a country larger than Austro-Hungary, with Bosnia and Herzegovina thrown in, we shall see that there is much concerning it which must be of interest to the geographer, the student, and the general reader.

2.—Lord Acton. He died but a few years ago and was one of England's foremost historians. His biography is interesting, not merely on this account, but because of the light it throws on his vast reading, his prodigous memory and his wide acquaintance with almost all the well-known authors of Europe.

3. Amiel's Journal, translated by Mrs. Humphry Ward. This is the journal of a man who, forty or fifty years ago, was regarded in Europe as something more than a writer of daily jottings. He was indeed, a philosopher and a thinker of a high order of intelligence.

4. Lord Auckland. A man not intrinsically great, but he was Governor-General of Indiana at the time of the first Afghan war, and a perusal of his life therefore, is of necessity essential to the leader of Indian history.

5. Sister Augustine. She was a woman widely famed in her day as a follower of Father Dollinger, and was superior of the Sisters of Charity at St. John's Hospital at Bonn. This book is interesting as going very fully into the controversy between the Old Catholics and the Vatican party, and was written by a once well-known Anglican clergyman, Augustus J. C. Hare. Time and space alike forbid a lengthy resume of the others on the list. A small reference must suffice for each of them.

6. Edwin Brainbridge. A young missionary who lost his life during the eruption of a volcano in one of the islands of the South Seas.

7. Albani, the famous singer.

8. Marie Bashkirtseff, the gifted young Russian artist and writer, whose published letters, some twenty years ago, were the talk of a continent, and whose promising career was cut off by consumption at the age of 24.

9. Beaconsfield, the famous statesman.

10. Bebel, the German Socialist.

11. Berkley, the clergyman and philosopher.

12. Bismarck, the wise pilot, who must be looking down sardonically from the heights at the ruin wrought by his whilome sovereign.

3. Blackie, the witty and eccentric Edinburgh professor.

14. Daniel Boone, the great pioneer and true founder of the State of Kentucky.

15. George Barrow, author of the Romany Rye and Lavengro, man of wonderful physique and curious personality, an enigma to his friends, and a terror to his enemies. There is a fine essay on his life, by Knapp, in Theodore Watts-Dunton's "Old, Familiar Faces." Lastly, George Brown, our own Canadian statesman, of whom one hears so little nowadays, but who in his own time occupied a very high niche in the regard of his countrymen.

One could very easily expatiate at length on the life of any one of the men and women mentioned in this article. There is not one name amongst them but stands for something more than mere froth or flutter. Each one left something in the way of character or thought to help on the succeeding generation to a higher level of usefulness or enlightenment. Why should they be allowed to stand neglected on the shelves whilst books of far less importance of far less pleasure-producing power are being read each day with avidity?

INSANITY MAY BE BARRE'S DEFENCE

L'ORIGNAL, Nov. 9. The trial of James Barre, a farmer, from Rose Corner, a farming settlement near Casselman, Ont., who is charged with murdering his wife early on the morning of September 7 by shooting her with a revolver, commenced here yesterday before Judge Byron Britton.

Dr. Gordon Henderson and Nap. Champagne arrived here and are acting for the accused, Mr. R. A. Pringle K.C., is conducting the prosecution.

The plea of not guilty was entered. The evidence produced by the crown so far is much the same as was given at the coroner's inquest and the preliminary trial at Casselman on September 8.

The principle witness this morning was Delima Barre, fourteen-year-old daughter of the accused. Both she and her sister Victoria are here as witnesses.

If the witness-box this morning Delima said that she was awakened by hearing the revolver fired. When she came downstairs her mother was lying dead on the floor. A little later her father said to her: "Mother is dead now I will die and we will be happy."

All the witnesses were cross-examined closely. All testified that Mrs. Barre was of good character and if her husband, the prisoner, was jealous, it was without reason.

In connection with the report that Barre some time before the tragedy engaged a private detective to spy on her, Dr. Henderson, in cross-examination of Delima Barre, brought out the effect that she had seen no strange man around the house.

The trial may last a couple of days, and from the cross-examination which the counsel for the defence is conducting it would appear that a plea of insanity may be entered.

EVERY WAGE EARNER SHOULD ANSWER QUESTION HIMSELF OR HERSELF

WHAT DOES THE FUTURE HOLD FOR YOU IF HEALTH GIVES WAY?

In dollars and cents, what is the worth of the brawn of your arm; what is the value of the staying power that permits continuous labor—what are they worth to you?

Suppose you did something so foolish as to reduce your strength, vitality or judgment one half, and it were impossible to get them back—how much would you pay to regain the lost portion?

When you let yourself run down, you reduce your chances for success in life—if sleeplessness comes you score lower still—should appetite or digestion fail, you are stared in the face by physical bankruptcy.

Don't let it go so far, take Ferrozone, it has cured thousands and it will cure you; it builds up bodily strength, makes muscles like steel, replaces Spring tiredness by energy and new life Ferrozone rebuilds sick folks because it contains the strength-easing elements that every run-down system requires.

Especially before the hot weather comes, everyone needs a purifying tonic—Ferrozone fills the bill exactly—nothing known that invigorates and uplifts so fast.

Headaches disappear, weakness gives way to the vigor that only Ferrozone can supply. Try it, results are guarantee, 50c per box or six for $2.50 at all dealers or by mail to any address if price is remitted to the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ontario.

Auto Tire Plant To Be In Ingersoll

Million Dollar Company Has Decided to Put Up $200,000 Factory.

INGERSOLL, Nov. 10.—That a large plant for the manufacture of automobile tires would be located in Ingersoll was an announcement which created surprise and deep satisfaction among all classes of citizens. The proposed plant, it has been stated, when equipped, will cost about $200,000. The company will have a capitalization of $1,000,000, and will furnish employment for upwards of 300 men, with a daily payroll of more than $1,000. The plant will be one of the largest of the kind in Canada, and should mean much to the business activity of the town.

HOW YOU MAY REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition especially in the present day, when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, do'nt try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orilaea in capsule form and take one with each meal.

Oil of orilaea increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb. per day. Be sure to get oil of orilaea in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it, or can get it. A large size box will be sent on receipt of $2.50 postal note or money order. Address D. J. Some People Prominent in the Public Eye During the Week

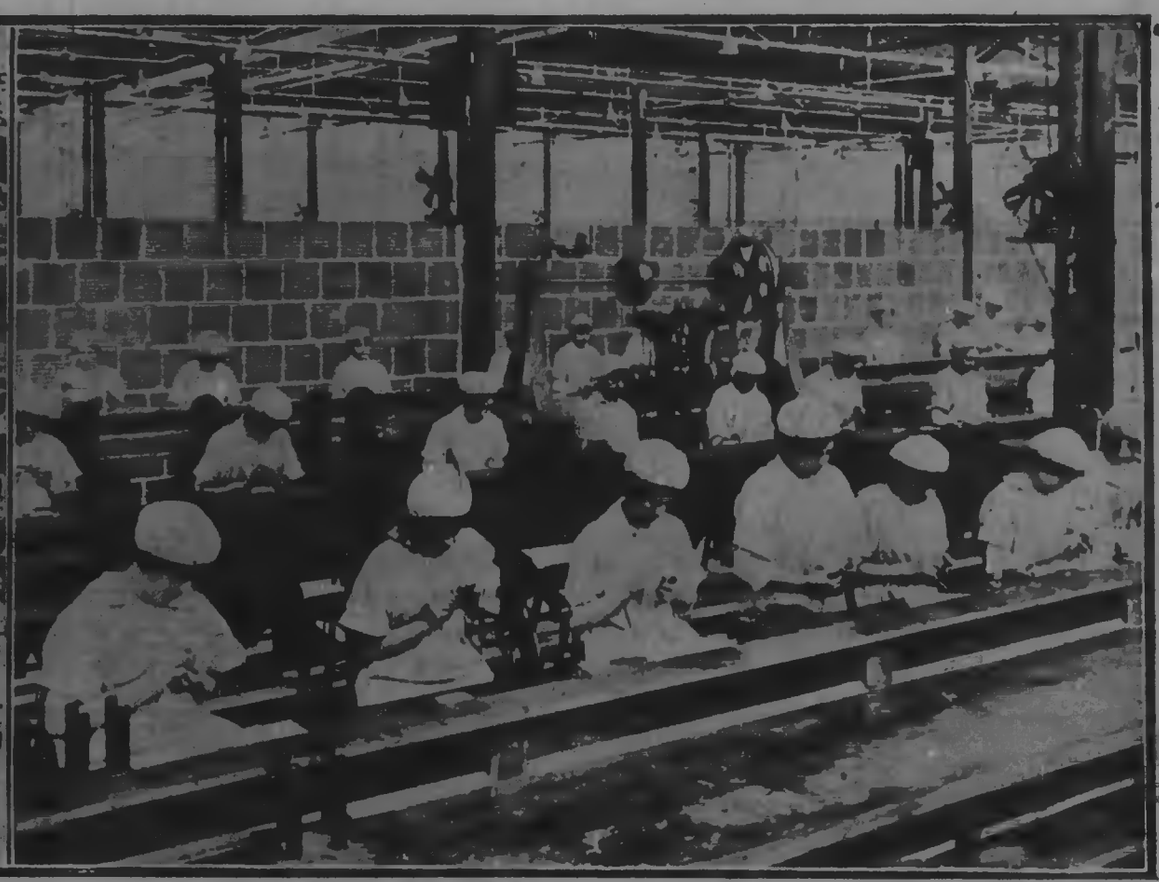
MISS EVA BOOTH, of the Salvation Army, who is very ill at her home in Hartsdale, N. Y., and over whose condition there is much anxiety. Twenty-four hour prayers are to be said in supplication for her recovery.

CHARLES E. HUGHES, latest photograph of the Republican Candidate, taken during his visit to New York City, two days prior to election day.

SIR GEO. BUCHANAN, British Ambassador to Russia. Sir George is one of England's best known diplomats with a very agreeable task of maintaining friendship with an ally.

FRANCE'S ELABORATE SYSTEM OF SUPPLIES:—For miles in the rear of the French front at Verdun and on the Somme front, stretch depots for munitions and supplies and thousands of wagons and autos for the transportation of these needed supplies to the front. Photograph shows a section of this large camp.



WOMEN MUNITION WORKERS OF CANADA:—Many women are making munitions in Canada, some on account of the high wages, others from patriotic motives. Many work for the reason that they are helping the cause, and they donate their pay envelopes to one of the numerous patriotic funds. Photo shows women assembling fuses at a factory in Montreal.

MOBILIZATION OF WASTE PAPER:—The shortage of print paper which has affected every publisher in Canada and the U. S. A. has given tremendous impetus to the business of the second-hand paper dealers in every city, and has provided work for a large force of men and women more or less expert in the knowledge of paper grades. Paper scraps that before the war were thrown away by the street cleaning departments as valueless, are saved, being sorted and bundled and shipped to the mill to be made over. Mostly women are employed as paper sorters. They know first, the kind of scraps that are used in the manufacture of anything from cheap card-board to the finest linen. Besides receiving good wages for the expert knowledge many articles of value are found by the sorters. If nothing better comes out of the situation as it is to-day, it has at least taught the trade the value of conservation. Photo shows scene in sorting room of paper storehouse. In the second picture is shown bales of waste paper to be sorted and shipped back to the mill to help alleviate the paper shortage.

Some Incidents of the World's War on the Eastern and Western Fronts

IN THE TRENCHES ON THE SOMME:—A British Tommy helped by a German prisoner to remove a wounded soldier from a trench. One of the human tendencies of the war is noted in the willingness of either side to help the other—after the fighting is over. German prisoners report "exceptional kindness" as a characteristic of the British Tommy.

BRITISH SOLDIER'S FUNERAL IN THE NORTH OF FRANCE:—This shows a typical peasant hut in the Northern France, where many refugees have fled from the firing lines. A few soldiers on short leave from the trench are here seen attending a funeral of one of their comrades. It will be noticed that all the French women are very much grieved at this pitiful scene.

THE RAILWAY BRIDGE ACROSS THE DANUBE AT CERNAVODA, which was blown up by Rumanians, was in danger of capture by the German troops. This bridge is said to be the only railway bridge over the Danube and its loss will be a blow to Mackensen.

LORD NEWTON:—Member of the English Parliament, through whose efforts an arrangement was made between Germany and Great Britain for the exchange of prisoners of war of the age of 45 and over.

GENERAL RAWLINSON:—Recently promoted to second in command of the British forces in France. In this capacity he acts as Gen. Haig's right hand man. He is one of Great Britain's ablest Generals.

LIEUT.-COL. J. J. GLASS, LINDSAY, ONT.

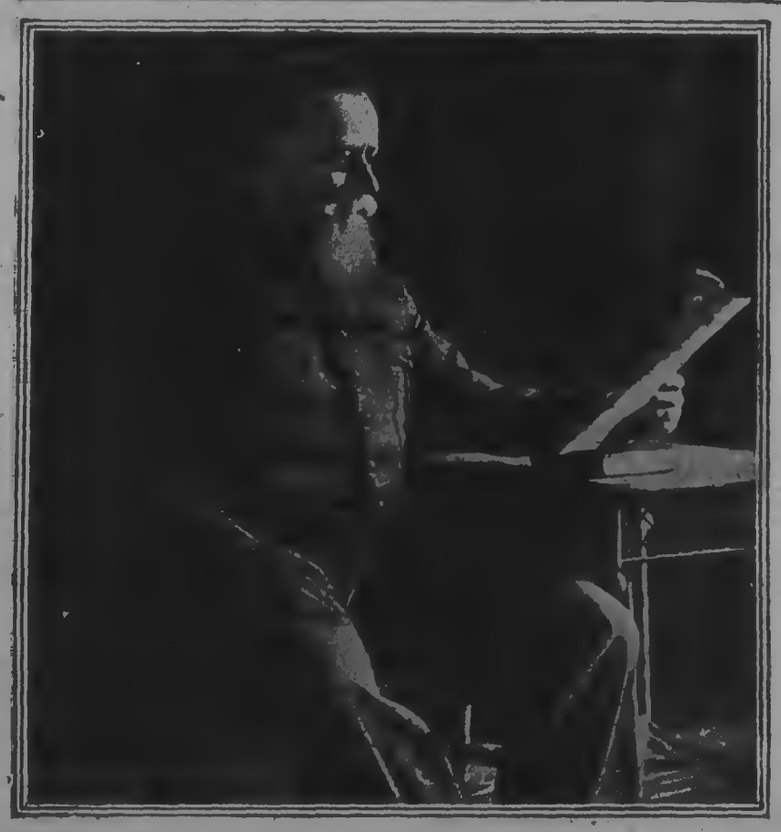
Officer Commanding 252nd Battalion, C.E.F. Col. Glass is Collector of Customs at Lindsay. He obtained leave of absence to help complete the 109th Battalion, and was later given command of the 252nd Battalion, Victoria and Haliburton. To him is due the honor of having first introduced tables for his men when in the old volunteer camp at Barriefield some years ago. Since then the Militia Department has taken up the idea, and of late years they supply companies with tables for the men.

JUMBO, KING OF ELEPHANTS

KILLED ON GRAND TRUNK TRACKS, ST. THOMAS, SEPTEMBER 15th, 1885. The largest elephant ever seen, either wild or in captivity, was killed by a Grand Trunk locomotive on the above date, while P. T. Barnum & Bailey's circus was showing in St. Thomas. Jumbo was bought by Mr. P. T. Barnum from the Royal Zoological Gardens, London, Eng. The sale of Jumbo was the signal for a great public outcry, and was the cause of a bitter law-suit between the Royal Zoological Gardens and some of its members. The Society, however, finally won out, and Jumbo was transhipped to America, where he was a popular idol of great profit to his owners until his death at St. Thomas, as above shown. This photo was taken by Scott & Hopkins, and many of the faces will be recognized by those familiar with the St. Thomas of that day.

METHODS OF WAR for whose introduction Germany is responsible. Asphyxiating gas shells captured by the French in the recent "Big Push."

AN ITALIAN BATTERY. Photographed after eight hours of continuous firing against an enemy position. The splendid artillery equipment of the Italians has been one of the great features in their recent successes.



PRESIDENT CARRANZA, OF MEXICO. This is the latest photograph of the President of this much troubled country.

M. VENIZELOS, the man of the hour in Greece, who is seen seated in the stern of the launch. He is head of the new Provincial Government established in Greece.

MACKENSEN'S RETREAT CONTINUING

Fresh Gains For General Haig's Men

General Mackensen Continues To Retreat in the Dobrudja

Great Fire is Raging in Direction of Cernavoda--British Troops Capture Balance of Regina Trench Portion of Which Was Captured by the Canadians on October 21st --Germans Sustain Heavy Losses in Vain Attacks on French Positions South of the Somme.

DEUTSCHLAND READY TO RETURN

ROME, November 11.—General Mackensen's retreat in Dobrudja, from positions about Cernavoda continues, wireless reports from Bucharest said to-day. A great fire is raging in the direction of Cernavoda, leading to the belief that the Teutons fired the city before evacuating it. The Bulgarian population of Dobrudja is reported fleeing to the Bulgarian border.

British Capture Rest Of Regina Trench

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 11.—British troops in the face of a terrific barrage fire last night stormed and captured the eastern portion of the important Regina trench, a portion of which they had taken October 21, General Haig reported to the War Office to-day. The reports said the British have secured their new positions.

To-day's official statement tells of the British victory as follows: "Last night the eastern portion of Regina Trench, on the northern end of the Somme front, being a continuation of the length of the trench captured by us in our successful assault of October 21, was stormed and captured on a front of 1,000 yards. In spite of a heavy enemy barrage, the new trench has been joined up with the old line and the position secured. Prisoners of two regiments were taken. On the remainder of the front there was no change.

Germans Lose Heavily In Fruitless Attack

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official), November 11.—The Germans sustained serious losses when they were repulsed in attacks on French positions south of the Somme in the vicinity of Deniecourt, the War Office announced to-day. "We maintained all our ground," the statement said. North of the Somme there was spirited artillery duels in the region of Les Boeufs and Sailly-Saillisel. French aviators brought down five German aeroplanes. Two were destroyed by Aviator Goynemer, making the total of enemy machines brought down by him twenty-one.

Deutschland Ready For Return Trip

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

NEW LONDON, Conn., November 11. — With her cargo, said to be worth several millions, stowed snugly aboard, the German submarine merchantman Deutschland is expected at any time to begin her return trip to Bremen. Reports in some quarters to-day were she would begin her dash within forty-eight hours.

Russian Fleet Is Bombarding Constanza

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PETROGRAD, November 11.—The Russian fleet has come to the aid of the Slavonic armies which are fighting in the Dobrudja. An official announcement from the War Office to-day said the fleet has heavily bombarded the Roumanian seaport of Constanza, inflicting great damage.

Constanza is almost due east of Cernavoda, where vicious fighting is now going on between great Russian and Teutonic forces for the possession of the big Danube Bridge. The German General Von Mackensen's left wing rests on the Danube near Cernavoda, and his right wing is on the Black Sea near Constanza.

Little News of The Dobrudja Fighting

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BUCHAREST, November 11.—Despite the great battle raging about Cernavoda for possesion of the Danube Bridge, the War Office to-day was unusually brief in its report on the situation in Dobrudja. "The situation in Dobrudja region is unchanged," said the announcement. "On the Danube the enemy artillary is very active. We repulsed a small force which attempted a landing at the mouth of the Alt River."

THE ASHBURNHAM RED CROSS SOCIETY

Mrs. G. L. Hall wishes to announce that the contributions to the One Cent a Day Club of the Ashburnham Red Cross Society for the month of October amounted to four thousand and seven (4,007) cents, making a total to date of ninety-eight thousand and fifty seven (98,057).

Regulations As To Home Burial of Canadian Soldiers

There is some misapprehension of the military regulations as to the bringing home to Canada for burial of the bodies of Canadians who die from wounds in hospitals. It is permitted, if the friends in Canada so desire, to bring home for interment the bodies of Canadian soldiers who may die in English hospitals, but no home burial is permitted in the case of any Canadian soldier dying in any hospital in France or Flanders.

Shaughnessy's Statement Caused Much Satisfaction

Considered Representative of Canadian Inflexibility Says T. P. O'Connor – Any One Who Ever Whispers Peace is Howled Down

NEW DEVELOPMENTS

by T. P. O'Connor

LONDON Nov. 11.—Roumania gave us several bad quarters of an hour, but it now looks as if the situation was improving: that the stubborn resistance offered by Roumania, helped by Russia and the other Allies, will effectually stay the great German machine until the winter snows postpone further operations, and, with the coming of spring, allow the allies with all the enormous additions to their resources to launch an effective campaign. Following the brightening of the situation on the Roumanian frontier there comes along Lord Shaughnessy's emphatic republication of peace talk which created greater satisfaction as it was considered representative of Canadian inflexibility. Indeed anybody in the House of Commons who even whispers peace, and only two or three cranks attempted, are immediately howled down.

In Ireland the situation has undergone a new development. John Redmond returning from his triumphant reception at Sligo, and other returning Irish members brought confirmation of the tremendous reaction in progress throughout the Yale in favour of the constitutional movement. The removal of Maxwells has helped to alleviate the situation but there enter several new developments which greatly embarass the already embarrassed Chief Secretary and make the problem of governing Ireland from Westminster even more impossible.

Bad Potato Harvest.

There is unrest among the police; there is unrest among the schoolteachers with their starvation wages and above all there is a black cloud over the country of a short and bad potato harvest, accompanied by a gigantic rise in prices. Potatoes which usually can be bought at six pence a pound at this time of the year have soared to two shillings, making their purchase absolutely impossible by the working people with the poor wages they receive in Irish towns. It is also reducing to great straits all the old age pensioners. While thus fortified with the demands of the teachers the police and all servants of the Government for bigger wages, the members of the Irish party find themselves once more back in their old position before the war of active criticism of the Irish government and are holding conferences almost daily with the view to the adoption of measures for meeting the tragic situation in Ireland. Apart from the necessities of the case such a policy of active opposition is the best calculated to bring home to the Irish people the absolute necessity of a strong parliamentary party and to discount all hopeless and futile efforts and other forms of Irish agitation for the redress of Irish grievances. The whole spirit of the party has been transformed from a passing depression incident to the rebellion and execution to one of buoyant self-confidence and restless energy.

WANT OF CONFIDENCE

It is a remarkable fact in the life of the House of Commons of to-day that a majority of the Liberal Party have passed a vote of want of confidence in the Liberal members of the Coalition Cabinet. For that is what occurred when the division took place on Mr Redmond's motion. There were forty-six Liberal and Labour men in his minority; but the minority reached to the high figures of 106 —the biggest minority against the Ministry since the war begun. What is more important is, that there were forty to fifty of the best members of the Liberal Party who abstained; one of those, by the way, was Mr Winston Churchill—while one of those who supported Mr. Redmond by his vote was the no less portentous figure of John

A CENTRAL ORGANIZATION FOR WAR WORK PURPOSES

In the past the city has been working along in a helpful way, doing good and making efforts in the direction of war funds and patriotic objects. These efforts have been the result of the coming together of individuals having the object to be attained in view. As a consequence there has been a very great waste of organization and time.

As we are likely to have such appeals in increasing number it is proposed to form a new and Central Organization, drawn from the city at large, to direct and guide such enterprises. In fact to authorize them, and to supply an organization already at hand, once it is put in operation, to carry on the work. At present energy and time is being wasted.

All could be well, and better, done in another way. Not only major appeals would have guidance but the junior as well. It is hoped that some such course as indicated would help to bring into patriotic work many citizens who now do not do anything, being content to leave it to a few. Nearly all the efforts being made are pushed by a comparatively few, who being willing horses are really overloaded with public work.

A meeting will presently be called to discuss the matter and take action. Should the idea commend itself and the organization be perfected, all appeals for funds to be raised by public subscription, or in other ways, would come before the committee and have approval and assistance.

PTE. PETER WHITE OF PETERBORO' IS KILLED IN ACTION

Well Known Local Boy Who Enlisted With the 80th Battalion Last Spring Met Death at Front---Pte. Fred Sullivan in Hospital---To-day's Orders for the 247th and General Military News.

Another name has been added to the long list of Peterborough men who have given their lives on the battlefield in France fighting for the Empire. Word has been received that Pte. Peter Vincent White, son of Mr. Elleric White, - upholsterer, corner of Charlotte and Aylmer streets, was killed in action on Oct. 29th. The news will be heard with deep regret in Peterborough, as Pte. White was widely known throughout the city and had a host of friends. He was born in Peterborough and had lived all his life here. Before enlisting he was employed as a driver by Mr. R. Denne, and before that was in the employ of the C.P.R., giving up his express business for railway work. Pte. White enlisted only last spring when the 80th Battalion of Belleville made an appeal for recruits here just before the unit went overseas. Pte White was one of the Peterborough men who responded and went overseas with the 80th, afterwards being transferred to another Canadian battalion at the front. He is survived by his father, Mr. Elleric White, four brothers, Eleric of Port Arthur, Joseph and Daniel of Peterborough, and Pte. Harold White, who went overseas with the 59th Battalion and is now in France, and two sisters, Mrs. Claude White of Port Arthur.

Pte White was a quiet, genial young man, who was popular with all who knew him

Pte. Sullivan in Hospital.

Mrs. M. Sullivan Bethune street, received official word from Ottawa today that her son, Pte. Fred Sullivan, previously reported missing, is now reported admitted to No. 2B General Hospital, Camieres, on Nov 2nd. Mrs. Sullivan had received a letter from her son after he was reported missing, saying that he was then in a field dressing station.

KINGSTON, Nov. 10.—Major G I. Campbell, chief recruiting officer for the Third Division, who has just returned from a trip to the lumber camps in the northern part of the district, reports that the prospects for recruiting in that country are not as bright as they were some time ago. He finds that where a year ago able bodied men were only receiving $22 to $25 a month boys are now getting $45 a month. Good men can get as much as $65 a month and their board. The accommodation is also greatly improved. The major is well pleased with the recruiting in certain sections of his district. During the past nine days sixteen recruits have been signed up in Kingston.

Recruits for R. C. D.

The Royal Canadian Dragoons are in need of recruits for cavalry service overseas. This is a splendid chance for young men who are fond of horses to join the crack mounted corps of Canada. The next draft leave about the end of December. Recruits commence training at Stanley Barracks, where they have first-class instructors and trained horses. Pay $1.10 per day, free kit on joining. The daily routine in barracks is as follows: Reveille 6 a.m., morning stables 6:15 to 7:30, breakfast 8, parade for riding school or foot drill 8:45 to 10.30, stables 11 to 12:30, dinner 1 o'clock, afternoon parade 1:45 to 3:30, gymnasium 3:45 to 4:30, stables 5 to 5:30, stable picquet mounts 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. the following morning.

NEW WORK ROOMS FOR OTONABEE CHAPTER I. O. D. E.

Through the kindness of Mr. Jas. Lynch, who is giving the use of a room in his building and also the heating and lighting, the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., is enabled to open a work room in which to make comforts for the Red Cross Society.

This room will be open for the first time on Monday afternoon, Nov. 13, at 2 p.m., and all members of the Chapter are asked to make a special effort to make this undertaking a success, especially in view of the fact of the urgent need for comforts for the soldiers.

There will also be wool for any knitters who wish to help the Chapter in the work of sending socks directly to the trenches.

This room is above Mr. Lynch's store; entrance, two doors west.

HUGHES IS WAITING FOR OFFICIAL COUNT

NO COURT PROCEEDINGS

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Charles Evans Hughes will let his telegram of congratulations to Woodrow Wilson await official count of the votes in California, New Mexico, North Dakota, New Hampshire, and possibly one or two other states. If the official count confirms the Wilson victory apparent now, it is the Republican nominee's wish that there be no contest or court proceedings. The reason the Republicans still are unwilling to concede defeat is that in five states, whose vote is still incomplete, a change of 8,000 votes might mean the shift in the tide of victory in the electoral college votes from Wilson to Hughes, despite the fact that Wilson's apparent plurality in the "popular" vote is about four hundred thousand.

Canvass For The Patriotic Fund To Begin Monday

Teams Who Will Seek to Get the Names of Property Owners in Peterborough Will Meet at 9 a.m. and Go to Work at Once

FULL TURNOUT WANTED

While some work has already been done the concerted canvas for subscriptions in the shape of names of property owners to the petition to Council, in aid of the Patriotic Fund, starts on Monday morning.

The several teams will rally at headquarters, the recruiting rooms, o'clock. It is a busy time, but the o'clock. It is a busy time, but the time must be spared to register a success. If the teams line up for the work, as agreed, there will be none too many to accomplish what is in hand.

So, gentlemen, all be on hand in time. A good showing, all together, will put vim into the work. The weather promises to be fine. Putting this movement on a month ahead of the time of the last two campaigns will take it away from the Christmas trade season, that seemed to interfere.

Three days have been allotted for the canvas. It is expected that with reasonable diligence that the city will have been thoroughly covered. The indications are that the movement will be a popular one. The heart of the people is in it and all recognize that the pledges must be kept. The burden will be fairly distributed over all. It is a part of the cost to us of the war, just as the increase in the cost of foods is another evidence that the real expense is coming home. We have been dodging this final expense for two years, now it is on us. In the same way we will have to meet war expenses. The Patriotic Fund is one way of meeting it, for the men and families must be sustained.

Come to the recruiting room on Monday morning. Lay aside everything else. Any one who can give assistance will be welcomed. Come along.

MEN'S ASSOCIATION WERE ENTERTAINED

Officers Elected by Murray St. Church Organization

The Men's Association of Murray Street Baptist Church were delightfully entertained last night at a supper given them by the Ladies' Aid Society.

During the week all the homes of the congregation were visited by representatives of the Association, with a view to better acquaintances, and to talk over the many matters of interest in connection with the work of the church. The visiting teams reported upon the impressions gained by them through these visits and many encouraging features and suggestions were presented.

The Association was most unanimous in the choice of officers for the ensuing year when it appointed as its new leaders two most faithful and worthy members, namely, as President, Mr. S. Cottingham, and Vice President, Mr. Albert Wray. The Secretary-Treasurer was re-elected.

The kindness and cooperation of the Ladies' Aid Society is highly appreciated as shown by the vote of thanks tendered them.

THE SPECIFICATIONS WERE SATISFACTORY

The Railway Committee of the City Council met last night and endorsed the specifications as submitted by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company for the erection of a foot-bridge adjoining the present C.P.R. railway bridge crossing the Otonabee River.

Those present were Ald. Edgar, (chairman), Ald. Dobbin, Ald Weir, Ald. Evans and Ald. McIntyre.

PRESENTATION TO MR. J. A. ASQUITH

A most enjoyable event took place at the home of Mr. Jas. A. Asquith, Cedar Street, last evening, when a number of employees of the winding department of the Bonner-Worth Co. gathered to express their regret at the fact of his leaving there.

During the evening Mr. Asquith was presented with an umbrella, the presentation being made by Miss Ella Lemay and Miss Matilda MacFadden read the following address:

"Dear Mr. Asquith,—We the employees of the Bonner-Worth Co. winding department, are sorry to learn that you are leaving us. We all have appreciated you as our foreman: you have always been kind and considerate to us.

"We ask you to accept this umbrella as a slight token of our appreciation and gratitude. We wish you every success in your new work.

(Signed) "The Winders."

Say Nickel Is Not Canadian

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Nov. 11.—Government officials here, while declining to make any further official statement in the last cargo of nickel shipped to the German merchant submarine Deutschland, declare that they are confident that it is not Canadian nickel. They contend that anything that the Deutschland may secure must be part of the domestic supply of the United States.

WELCOME THE GREAT DUKE.

The Duke of Devonshire, who succeeds H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, has been sworn in and is now His Excellency the Governor General of Canada. We Canadians welcome him, and if he is not the greatest, he is truly the "Devonshire cream" of Governors-General.

OUR GOOD YANKEE COUSINS.

Whatever may be thought of official United States' sympathy with the cause of the allies in this war, there is nothing but grateful praise for the sympathetic attitude of the people, whose sympathy is expressed in splendidly tangible form. Ever since the war opened our good Yankee cousins have been doing splendid things in supporting the various beneficent agencies called into action by the war. But perhaps the finest achievements have just been tabulated. The Toronto committee of the British Red Cross campaign to-day publishes a list of the United States' contributions to the fund, and the magnificent total is almost three-quarters of a million—$740,000. These contributions, coming from all parts of the United States, and covering every class, are in many cases accompanied by letters of sympathy with, and admiration of, the work of the Red Cross. One contribution of $5,000 is modestly marked "Anonymous." Things like this make the blessed entente cordiale between us and a great people whom we are proud to have for neighbours and fellow workers in the cause of human freedom, and human helpfulness.

CANADIAN NICKEL FOR GERMANY.

The action of the Chamber of Commerce of New London, Connecticut, in entertaining the captain of the German submarine merchantman, or smuggler, the Deutschland, emphasizes the existence of facilities in the United States for permitting Germany to partially and importantly overcome the British blockade, and obtain much needed supplies for carrying on its nefarious war against—as much as anybody—the United States and the world. A substantial and dignified body, like a Chamber of Commerce, representative of the highest interests of the country, wining and dining the comamnder of a practically piratical craft, shows that such a craft enjoys exceptional hospitality with our neighbours, and is provided with exceptional means of procuring supplies and cargo.

This affords additional evidence, if any were needed, that Canadian nickel is finding its way to Germany to be virtually used against Canadian soldiers; and supports the statement of the Providence Journal that Canadian nickel is being placed, as a part of its return cargo, upon the German submarine, Deutschland, now docked under the Eagle's wing, in a United States port—a base of supplies.

The partizans and officials of the Dominion Government say that this can't be true, because there is an "understanding" that the New Jersey Nickel Company is to permit no Canadian nickel to reach German agents on this continent, and we are further assured that the British Government is satisfied with this "understanding."

Both governments may be, and are, mistaken. It is not the first time that the home Government has blundered, and it is not the first time that the Dominion Government has evaded and neglected its responsibility. This Government, being on the spot, should know all the conditions, and is responsible for the fact that Canadian nickel is finding its way to Germany. In spite of all official reservation there is not a responsible citizen of the Dominion, free from party bias, who does not believe and is not morally certain, that Canadian nickel reaches Germany. We know that Canada is the only source of nickel supply on this continent; and we know that at least two German merchant submarines have cleared with cargoes of nickel for Germany. What was its source, if not Canada?

The "understanding" referred to does not for a moment count. What "understanding" can hold, or expect to be respected, that comes under the influence of German intrigue, under the influence of a nation which plighted word written agreements and solemn treaties cannot bind?

The Dominion Government is directly responsible for the fact that Ontario nickel finds its way to Germany. It is to blame for trusting and inveighing the Home Government to trust to a ridiculously ineffective "understanding" that will no more hold water in a figurative sense than a sieve will hold water, in fact. The Government is to blame, because it has failed to adopt the too long neglected and truly national policy of having our nickel ore refined in Canada. Then we should have control of it. We could provide United States munition factories, and also provide that none of it should find its way to Germany.

PREMIER HEARST AND PHOHIBITION.

Hon. W. H. Hearst, Premier of Ontario, has been telling a deputation, that called upon him to congratulate the Government on the passage of the Ontario Temperance Act, that the Government has no thought of receding from the position it took in procuring the passing of the Act. This assurance while gratifying, seems to be superfluous. The Legislature was virtually unanimous in enacting the prohibitory legislation, and there is no doubt that the action taken was in accord with overwhelming popular opinion. This fact conjoined with the further fact that so far the Act has been successful in meeting the objects aimed at, excludes every idea of taking any action that would prejudicially affect its successful operation.

There is no reason to doubt for a moment that prohibition has, so far, splendidly succeeded. It has brought none of the evils its opponents predicted, and it has done far more good, worked far more effectively and smoothly, than its most ardent advocates expected. Of course there are defects in the Act, and the attention of the Government and the Legislature should be directed towards remedying these defects as far as possible. The provision respecting importation might well receive attention. In this regard, especially in the western part of the province, the stars in their courses are fighting for Ontario prohibition. Michigan has adopted prohibition, and excursions across the border in the vicinity of Windsor and Sarnia, will be fruitless. In the east there is not at present much hope that Quebec will adopt prohibition. In the circumstances it is reasonable to hope that the Dominion Government will cooperate with the Ontario authorities in abolishing or modifying the facalities for importing strong drink, one of the weak points in the Act.

The Dominion Government can cooperate very logically for two reasons. The material and moral interests of the province demand it. With eight-ninths of the Dominion under prohibition the Goverament has good warrant for thinking that in taking steps to asist the efficiency of Ontario prohibition, it will be acting in line with public opinion. Besides, if for no other reason an embargo might be placed on inter-provincial and other importation as a war measure. In any event to the lay mind, it is evident that the Dominion, if it will, can do something to improve the provisions of the Prohibition Act to make it practically perfect. This done, the fate of the Ontario Temperance Act after the war is over may safely be left in the hands of the people. The success it has proven will lead to its permanent adoption when the people come to vote upon it in 1919.

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING.

Last night a Peterborough householder paid fifty cents for a pound of butter. This impresses again, and very forcibly, the prevaling high cost of living, and brings into prominence the necessity of effective government action to deal with and, if possible, modify the situation. The government shows a disposition to do this. Yesterday the Examiner printed a despatch from Ottawa to the effect that the government, under the authority of the War Measures Act, had passed an order-in-council, to "take drastic action with respect to the high cost of living." The order confers wide powers upon the Minister of Labour in respect of "investigating conditions connected with the necessities of life—food, clothing and fuel"—and it is made a criminal offence to accumulate any of these commodities, and also penalizes combinations to enhance prices above what "is reasonable and just."

The order-in-council also takes cognizance of a provision urged upon the government by Mayor Duffus, in giving municipalities power to cooperate. It is, however, not quite clear that machinery is provided the municipalities enabling them to deal effectively with the subject. The government, while being entitled to credit in respect of the action taken, incurs no blame for having taken premature action.

To make its order-in-council of any great benefit no time must be lost in putting the machinery necessary to give it effect, into operation. The apparently weak point in the order is that the machinery for prosecution for infractions or disregard, is clogged with a little too much red tape. The order stipulates that when, "in the opinion of the Minister of Labour," an offense is shown under investigation, he may remit certified copies of the evidence taken to the Attorney General of the province, and the latter's consent is necessary to prosecute. This replies of Dickens' circumlocution office in "Little Dorrit is cumbersome and slow and in these regards tends to prevent the prompt and "drastic" action necessary to deal with an emergent situation. What the people want is present relief and if the government is as deliberate in this matter as it has been in helping recruiting, by organizing the National Service Commission, it may be a long time before any worth-while ation is taken; and if the Attorney-General of Ontario shows his traditional deliberation in action demanded of his department, there will be long, long delay in bringing offenders to justice. What is needed is prompt action and business-like methods in the government's dealing with the calamity of the high cost of living.

The government may do something additional. The embargo against the importation of substitutes for butter, of which a good deal of excellent, clean, wholesome quality is produced in the United States, might be lifted, temporarily at least. And the duties upon food products might be remitted. An Ottawa merchant has imported tinned tomatoes from the United States, paying two and a half cents duty on each 3-pound tin, which he retails for 20 cents, while Canadian tins of the same food sell for 25 cents per three-pound tins, that last year sold "two for a quarter." The Canadian canners have put up 2 1-2 lb. tins which can be sold at 20 cents. This is only a sample of the possible relief that can be gained by removing the duties from food stuffs.

Another aid the government can give is that of providing for the assurance of the quality of food goods offered for sale, a big thing. When we pay such sky-high prices, we should have the best. For instance, eggs might be required to be stamped with the date of production—a mere matter of detail. A citizen wanted to get "strictly fresh" eggs for an invalid wife and got them from a farmer as an assurance and with the positive assurance that they were new laid. The first egg cracked was bad. If it had been stamped with its date the responsibility would have been fixed. With the date stamped on eggs, cold storage would show to what extent intriques are put upon the market, and the accumulation penalty under the new order-in-council would be more easily applicable. As to eggs, another relief might be provided—compelling sale by the pound instead of the dozen. This would tend to remove the temptation to the poultry-raiser to give a bonus to the hen producing the smallest eggs. But some power is left to the purchaser, and that is to see that she gets good weight and measure. A few ounces of short weight on the whole range of purchases of food amounts to a good deal. Cases of short weight are of daily occurrence. Two or three ounces of short weight on a roast of beef at 25 cents a pound means several cents loss. If every housekeeper bought a good pair of scales and weighed all her purchases, she would soon make up their cost. It is not asserted that merchants are dishonest, only careless—some of them, but not all of them, for still mistakes are made in weight and measure. If we pay the highest prices we should not only get the best but get full weight and measure.

It is evident the problem of solving the high cost of living has many factors tributary to its solution. Only prompt and thorough investigation can bring out the truth, and settle the point whether the conditions that cause the high prices that strike us all, are capable of remedy or removal, or whether the conditions are due to limited production, or are a result of war conditions.

IS THERE ANY WASTEFUL RECONSTRUCTION WORK ON PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS?

An Ottawa report gives some information concerning the progress of the work of reconstructing the Parliament Building. The thing that is made clearest by the report is that the work is being carried on without adequate preparation, without proper plans and specifications, without any definite idea in the official quarters of what is being aimed at. Most of the things that usually are clearly settled before construction of a large building is begun are evidently in suspense in the case of this structure that is to cost many millions. The work, apparently, is still being carried on by the "Joint Committe of Parliament," which has just had another meeting. It has now, we are told,—only now—been decided that the building is to be constructed of Canadian stone. The Committee, the report says, "have also discussed the question of steel," but whether Canadian or foreign steel is to be used is not mentioned. "Work is being rushed to get the walls up as high as possible before the winter sets in." "It is possible that the new building will be heated by electricity." There are "seven or eight hundred men" on the work. No doubt several hundred more are employed elsewhere in the getting of materials. The architects, the report says, "are perfecting plans for the new tower which will form the central figure of what promises to be as magnificent a structure as is to be found on this continent."

The prospect is in one respect pleasing. But is this the time for such things? "It is magnificent' but it is not war," said Napoleon on a notable occasion. At a time when the Empire's war service is most pressing, when the need of men for military life is most urgent, when the recruiting agencies at Ottawa and elsewhere are almost in despair, when political leaders are moved to issue earnest and eloquent appeals entreating men to enlist, when conscription is gravely proposed in some quarters, when ministers are going about the country crying out for thrift, for production and more production, when there is shortage of labour in all the works of necessity, when in the wheat regions the shortage is so serious that the people are officially asked to suspend God's law by working on the sabbath to save the crop, when there is an overwhelming demand for service in all the things that matter, the Joint Committee of Parliament are taking probably a thousand able bodied men and putting them to work on the erection of a building that, in the present state of affairs, is clearly within the class of luxuries, one that is not needed now since the Houses of Parliament are comfortably accommodated in an excellent public building at the Capital.

It seems hardly possible that public opinion will tolerate this wasteful and worse than wasteful business. It is wasteful in the way of excesive cost of the operations. It is wasteful in the way of diverting men from the important duties of the time. It is wasteful in the way of carrying on work that is not at present needed and that should be reserved for the period of unemployment which is sure to come at the close of the war. If the folly is not stopped earlier, let us hope that the moment Parliament meets and is in a position to speak, somebody will have the good sense to move a resolution for that purpose.—Journal of Commerce.

Notice To Creditors

IN THE MATTER OF THE ESTATE OF DAVID G. LEWIS, LATE OF THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH, IN THE COUNTY OF PETERBOROUGH, FARMER, DECEASED.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, pursuant to Chapter 121 of the Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1914, and amending Acts, that all creditors and other persons having claims against the above named DAVID A. LEWIS, who died on or about the 24th day of July, 1916, are required to send by post prepaid, or deliver to the undersigned Solicitors before the 15th day of December, 1916, full particulars of their claims, their names and addresses, duly verified by Statutory declaration, and the nature of the security (if any) held by each of them, and that after the said 15th day of December, 1916, the Executors will proceed to distribute the assets of the said deceased amongst the persons entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims of which they shall then have had notice, and they will not be liable for any part of the said assets to any persons of whose claims they shall not then have had notice.

DATED at Peterborough, this 7th day of November, 1916.

OTONABEE HEIGHTS

A new neighborhood overlooking the city from its S.E. corner, close to the river and Little Lake, 15 minutes' walk to the street car line. Land on Otonabee Heights, being close to the city, is certain to rise in value.

There is yet for sale one seven-roomed frame house with good barn and one or two acres. There are only three building lots left for sale, each 150 feet frontage by 300 feet deep. Any one of them is a bargain at present prices and terms of payment.

Act now. Do not wait, because sites on Otonabee Heights will never be as cheap or as easily bought as now. Land values will rise at the war's end.

For information and inspection apply on Saturday, November 18, to Mrs. Ryerson Ritchie, 600 Stewart St. or Telephone 26.

Acquitted of Charge Of Wife Desertion

O. C. Howey's Sentence by Magistrate Reversed by County Judge.

WINDSOR, Nov. 10—By a decision of County Judge Smith in Essex Division Court here yesterday, Orval C. Howey, an employee of the Chalmers Motor Car Co. of Ford, was acquitted of the charge of non-support and desertion preferred by his wife.

Howey was arrested a month ago after his child had, he alleged, been kidnapped from his mother's home in London by his wife and brought to Windsor. Judge Smith found that Howey had been ordered from the home of his wife's sister here, and was therefore not responsible for the maintenance of his wife.

When the case was heard before Magistrate Leggatt in Windsor Police Court Howey was found guilty of the charges, but sentence was suspended for ten days. Howey then entered an appeal, with the result that the Magistrate's decision was reversed today by Judge Smith.

Warning To Women Going To England

It May be Difficult to Get Room on Steamers Coming Back.

OTTAWA, Nov. 10—A memorandum issued from the Prime Minister's office calls attention to the fact that all women or other members of families of Canadian soldiers who have gone to England to live, or who contemplate going there, would seriously consider the difficulties which are sure to arise at the end of the war in regard to securing transportation home again. It is pointed out that most of the space in all available trans-atlantic steamers will be needed to bring the troops themselves back to Canada. There will be little if any space available for women or children, and consequently they may find themselves stranded in England for an indefinite period.

German Expulsions Create Panic—Electricity Guards Frontier.

LONDON, Nov. 10—The Echo Belge as quoted by Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent, says that according to the latest news the Germans have transported 21,000 citizens of Antwerp to Germany.

A great panic prevails in Antwerp, and in the surrounding country, adds the newspaper, which reports also that three men who tried to cross the Dutch frontier were killed by shock from the electric wire barrier on the border.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat less meat also take glass of Salts before eating breakfast

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad. Eat less meat, drink lots of water also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a table spoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent should take now and then to keep the should take nw and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

FRESH RECRUITS IN FRENCH AIR SERVICE WIN LAURELS BY DESTROYING PRUSSIANS

PARIS.—The exploit of Captain Boelke, the Prussian army's most fearless aviator, in bringing to earth his twenty-eighth enemy aeroplane has served to bring into prominence again the dramatic and vitally important military work done by the French "air hunters". New men in ones and twos are gradually coming to the front. France seems to have an inexhaustible supply of these aeroplane fighters, in whom qualities of the rarest kind must be combined to make them suitable for the difficult and perilous duties they are called on to fulfill.

Adjutant (petty officer) Dorme who as a special cable despatch a week ago announced, has come to the front with amazing rapidity, having piled up eight victories in about the same number of weeks, has greatly increased his hold on the record of rapidity. This week he has destroyed three more Prussian aeroplanes.

He thus reaches Sub-Lieutenant Nungesser's total of aeroplanes destroyed and comes within one of that of Sub-Lieutenant Navarre and within three of that of the leader, Sub-Lieutenant Guynemer. The first and last mentioned of the trio, however, have also some destroyed observation balloons to their credit, and Lieut. Navarre had achieved several victories before official account began to be taken of his work. He is at present in Paris under treatment for severe wounds received in his last battle. But for his fine physique, the physicians declare, he would not have survived the injuries. While for a moment it was believed that his fighting days were over, but it is now affirmed that he will soon again be in a position to resume his activities.

NAVARRE, THE CAGED EAGLE

This young man, who is high spirited and not easily amenable to discipline, obtained a pledge from those treating him that no public mention should be made of the fact that he had been wounded. The fact, however, was revealed by the lieutenant himself, and in a characteristic way. The "caged eagle" as they called him in the hospital, did not readily submit captivity, so he was permitted to go out in the city of an afternoon.

One evening he entered a public resort, with all traces of his injuries carefully concealed, and, when he was rather roughly jostled he began an altercation with some of his neighbors. A hint was dropped that the place for a healthy young officer was nearer the front, than Lieutenant Navarre then was, and the latter, with a sudden gesture, pulled off his coat, tore open his shirt and bandages and showed the wounds with which his body and his right arm war marked. The crowd attempted to lionize him, but he hurried away.

On the same evening it may be remarked, Sub-Lieutenant Guynemer was dining in a restaurant with some of his relatives when he was recognized and all eyes were turned on him. The young hero blushed like a girl and was obviously ill at ease until he had hastily finished his meal and was able to withdraw.

ACTIVITY OF THE NEW MEN.

While Adjutant Dorne ("Smiling Dorme") as he is called by his fellow air-fighters, has been readily forging into the front rank, he is being closely pressed by Adjutant Lenoir, who, as was told in a special cable, is recognised by his chiefs as one of the most valuable men in the aviation service. An expert airman before the war, has given inestimable services in general utility work in the air, on scouting, bombardment and escort work, and has brought down several Prussian machines that have not been counted to his record, as most of his work is done far inside the Prussian lines. He has now accomplished his tenth official destruction of an enemy machine.

Three new men are now on the 'roll of glory', Sub-Lieutenants Deullin and De La Tour and Adjutant Tarascon with, respectively, seven, five and six victories to their credit. The two sub-lieutenants are close personal friends and were serving together as cavalry officers when the war began. Ten months later they were admitted into the aviation department and each has since given a brilliant account of himself.

When they had each destroyed four Prussian machines they expressed the purpose of trying to bring down their fifth machine together, so as to receive their official recognition simultaneously. They did not entirely succeed in this purpose, but as Deullin brought down his fifth late one evening and De La Tour performed a like feat early on the following morning they were gratified to obtain their first public mention in the same official communication.

SCION OF FAMOUS FAMILY.

A scion of an historic French family, Herbert de La Tour was born in the famous castle of Chalus, in the department of the Haute-Vienne, where history records that Richard the Lion-Hearted was killed. He became a military aviator in the spring of 1915 and has performed exceptionally important work despite an unusual number of accidents and injuries. 'Tourne a gauche' (turn to the left) from his erratic and dangerous habit of starting on a single wheel and on the oblique.

He was put into the reconnaissance service and earned high praise for his work in the battle of Verdun. In that region he was twice wounded, once in a fight with a Fokker and again while destroying an observation balloon which was annoying the French artillerymen.

As a result of these injuries he was left with a stiff arm. He asked to be transferred into the infantry, so that he could continue his military services without interruption. His superiors, however, would not hear of it, but insisted on his taking a rest until his arm should become supple again. Then he was appointed to the fighting air squadron and in brief period brought down six enemy machines, one, however, so far behind the Prussian lines it was not credited to him.

A PUNCTILIOUS AVIATOR.

He is now one of the leading 'chasers' at the Somme front and is conspicious for his good looks and the extreme elegance of his uniform. While Adjutant Lenoir comes back from his fights ragged, torn and soiled, Sub-Lieutenant de la Tour, when he descends and strips off the highly colored woollen outer wraps, appears the same immaculate young officer as was to be seen at the dress parades of his crack cavalry regiment.

Sub-Lieutenant Deullin has the distinction of being France's chief military photographer from the air. He was born in Epernay, in 1890, and in the course of his special work has engaged in many fights and has received many wounds. It is recorded of him that "his skull as a pilot and his audacity are only equalled by his spirit of duty and his self-sacrifice." When not taking photographs over the dangerous points of the Prussian lines he is taking part in bombing expeditions and waging air battles.

On one occasion, mounted on a slow machine, he was taking photographs thirty kilometers behind the Prussian lines when he was suddenly attacked by a fast Aviatik. He fought with fierce energy, and obliged his adversary to descend, and then for half an hour he remained over the same terrain taking photographs, while the enemy anti-aircraft guns from below hurled a tornado of projectiles at his machine. His most dramatic combat was against several Fokkers, one of which he destroyed. He succeeded in putting the others to flight.

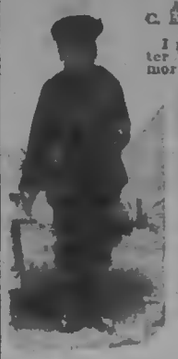
A Genuine Rupture Cure Sent On Trial To Prove It

Don't Wear a Truss Any Longer

Even Soldiers from the Trenches of Europe Write to Tell How the Wonderful Brooks Appliance Cured Their Ruptures, Sound and Well. Sent on Trial to Prove It.

From the battle front in Europe comes a letter written by Private John Carter, whose home address is No. 2 Snow View, Flixton, telling of his complete cure of rupture from wearing the Brooks Appliance.



April 18th, 1915.

C. E. Brooks,

Dear Sir:

I received your letter by first post this morning. I beg to thank you for your Appliance which was instrumental in the way it cured me of my rupture. I have now been in Kitchener's army seven months, and I have gone through all the training, and I have never felt anything and not had the slightest trouble. I remember when I passed the doctor he remarked "There is nothing wrong with you, young man, you are in the best condition," and he sounded me all over, and I again thank you for the same, and I give my consent to use my letter as a testimonial to anyone, as I have been cured. Hoping you and your firm much success.

Yours truly.

Wouldn't Take $100 for Appliance

Cranworth, Ont.

Dear Mr. Brooks—I am pleased to write you and let you know what your Appliance has done for me, I think I am all right now, as I have not seen the first sign of it since last fall. I can now run, jump and lift all I like and I would not take $100 for it if I could not get another. I do not wear it except when at hard work. Your appliance is just as good as ever. You can use this letter as you like for the benefit of others.

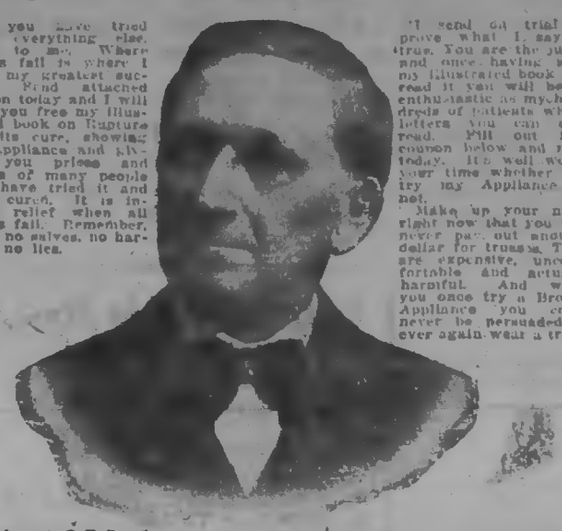
Yours sincerely.

GEO. KENNEDY.

REMEMBER

I send my Appliance on trial to prove what I say is true. You are to be the judge. Fill out free coupon below and mail to-day.

If you have tried most everything else, come to me. Where others fail is where I have my greatest success. Find attached coupon today and I will send you free my Illustrated book on Rupture and its cure, showing my Appliance and giving you prices and names of many people who have tried it and were cured. It is instant relief when all others fail. Remember, I use no salves, no harness, no lies.



The above is C. E. Brooks, inventor of the Appliance, who cured himself and who is now giving others the benefit of his experience. If ruptured, write him today, at Marshall, Michigan.

I send on trial to prove what I say is true. You are the judge and once having seen my illustrated book and read it you will be as enthusiastic as my hundreds of patients whose letters you can also read. Fill out free coupon below and mail today. It's well worth your time whether you try my Appliance or not.

Make up your mind right now that you will never pay out another dollar for trusses. They are expensive, uncomfortable and actually harmful. And when you once try a Brooks Appliance you could never be persuaded to ever again wear a truss.

Rupture Thoroughly Healed

Ingersoll, Ont., Feb. 6, 1914.

Mr. C. E. Brooks:

Perhaps you will be interested in hearing what your Appliance has done for me. I know without doubt that my rupture has thoroughly healed after a term of sixteen years' suffering, and I attribute my restored and healed condition to the wearing of your Appliance, which held the bowel firmly and gentlemly during the healing process. I have not worn it for months—neither do I feel in need of it.

Yours truly,

F. C. NOXON.

Ruptured 22 Years; Now Cured

East Sherbrooke, Que., Jan. 27, 1914.

Mr. C. E. Brooks:

Dear Sir,—I am very glad to hear from you, and happy to be able to tell you that my rupture was cured some time ago by your Appliance. I now need no truss after twenty-two years of torture.

Yours truly,

G. E. LEMAY.

Cured Me Completely

Perth Centre, N. B., April 24, 1914.

Mr. C. E. Brooks:

Dear Sir:—I received your letter regarding the Appliance you sent me. It was a complete success and now I don't know that I ever had a rupture. It has cured me completely and I thank you very much for it.

Very truly yours,

REV. H. A. SIPSON.

And here is a letter from a mother who is thankful because a Brooks Appliance cured her boy so he could go out and serve his country.

2, Orchard Road,
Richmond,
Surrey.

April 11th, 1915.

Mr. C. E. Brooks,

Dear Sir:

A line to thank you for what your Appliance has done for my son. After wearing it from December to the following September I can say he is quite cured and is now serving his country in France at his own trade, a shoeing smith. You can make what use you like of these, my thanks.

I am, yours,

Mrs. E. Whittle

11 Richardson St.

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Mr. Brooks—Just a line to let you know your Appliance has completely cured our little boy and we are very well pleased with it. We had it on him for about three months, and since he has had it off the rupture has not showed at all.

Yours truly,

MRS. C. SUDDABY.

EXCITEMENT OF BATTLE GLORIOUS, WRITES PARSON

COBOURG, Nov. 7.—Lieut.-Col. (the Rev.) W. Beattie, patsor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, here, and senior chaplain of the Second Canadian Division at the front where he has been since the 1st Contingent went into the trenches, in a letter to the Rev. H. R. Horne, acting-pastor of the Church, gives a vivid description of the Canadian bombardment in the Somme offensive.

He says: "We are in the greatest of world battles. We have already done one turn of one week, and are now some fifteen miles back, resting and getting reinforced up to strength. Just now a battalion, or what is left of a battalion, is calling the roll on the opposite side of the street from where I write.

"I have been watching the proceedings. It is pathetic to hear sometimes three or four names in a group called with no response. The fact that these names are on a roll, together, shows that they were in the same platoon, probably chums, who lived together, fought together, and died together.

"Our casualties were, however, not considered out of proportion to our successes. They were rather considered light, compared with the work done.

Serving Hot Coffee.

"I knew the attack was timed for 6.30 a.m. I got up at 3 a.m., after sleeping an hour, dressed, and walked out to a spot where one of my chaplains had a dugout in a shell hole. Here, at the assembly post for wounded just back from the field, he served hot coffee, tea, cocoa, bovril, etc., to them, while they waited for the ambulance.

"At this point, which is now far up beyond the original German front line, I awaited the dawn. Sharp at 6.30, the heavens were illuminated with the flash of many hundreds of guns. A river of steel flowed over our heads, tearing the air with a hellish noise. I was cold and shivery anyway, but when this firing had been going on for three or four minutes I shook from head to foot.

His Wild Satisfaction.

"Every bit of flesh seemed to quiver with excitement not with fear.

"There was little to fear for in such a bombardment the enemy pays little attention to anything but our front line. But oh, the excitement of it all!

"I found myself saying, 'Go to it, this is the day they have been waiting for for forty years. Let them have it now!'

"I must confess it was no small satisfaction to those of us who for twelve months had been compelled to sit tight in the Ypres salient and endure the bombardment of guns from three sides, to feel that at last we had overwhelming superiority in artillery.

"In the air, too, we were greatly supported. One day the Boche had up two balloons in the morning, and none in the afternoon, while we had over a score. Our aeroplanes had complete control of the air. When a Hun plane ventured out he was lucky if he got back. This activity saved many lives, as the German artillery must fire blindly.

Four Battalions Attack.

"I watched four battalions going up to an attack, bayonets fixed and shining in the sun. In four long waves about 300 yards apart they went. It was a bit of old-fashioned warfare which suited this rolling ground.

"The field was pock-marked with tens of thousands of shell holes, and the air filled with the clouds from enemy shells. At one time two or three big "crumps" fell on one of the long, thin, advancing lines, tearing big holes in it. The line advanced with not more than a moments' wavering. What splendid fellows these—mechanics, farmers, clerks, soldiers. And with what fine results they fought that day! They advanced many hundreds of yards, captured a strongly fortified factory, and an important and strongly defended village, also several hundred prisoners.

"It was an optimistic feeling that the sight of so many prisoners created. We had never had the chance to take more than little bunches. This wholesale capture thrilled our men, who went about wearing German helmets, and showing their trophies of war with great pride.

"This minute an orderly arrived in my office, bringing the order of the day, to which is attached a telegram from Sir Douglas Haig, saying:

"The capture by your troops of there he mentions a village, a fortified factory and a farm, the names of which I may not repeat), besides several miles of enemy trenches, during the last three days, is a fine performance, of which all ranks may well be proud. I congratulate you all warmly."

While the coats of the new tailleurs display fullness about the hips and bulk of bodice the fullness is of the kind that is cleverly arranged to suggest slenderness and grace.

ABDUCTION CHARGED AGAINST A COLOURED CHATHAM SOLDIER

Another Colored Soldier Sentenced for Deserting the 186th Battalion.

CHATHAM, Nov. 10.—Pte. Wm. Thompson (coloured), of the No. 2 Construction Battalion, was arrested and in the county police court was charged with having abducted two young girls. He was remanded for a week.

Bernice Hawkins, now said to be Mrs. Thompson, and her friend, Muriel Smith, two young colored girls, disappeared from their homes in the east end of the city. About that time Pte. Thompson, who recently enlisted here, with the colored unit, failed to report for duty. Inquiries were instituted, and Thompson was found to be in Wallaceburg. When Constable Peters arrived there, however, Thompson had left for Chatham. He was arrested by Chief Groves as he stepped off the train.

The prisoner stated to the police today that "Mrs. Thompson" had left for California to visit his mother, though his story is not credited.

Two Years in Mercer.

Marie Shadd, a colored girl of North Buxton, arrested a week ago as she was leaving for New York, charged with having stolen $30 from her father, in the county police court was sentenced to two years in the Mercer Reformatory.

WEEK OF PRAYER TO BE OBSERVED IN THE LOCAL Y.M.C.A.

News of the Big George Street Institution—General Secretary Meserve is Investigating the Problem of Public Bathing Houses Throughout the Dominion.

Rev. Robert Pogue will address the Y.M.C.A. Men's Meeting Sunday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock. Subject: "Prayer." Every man and older boy is invited to attend.

November 12-18 is the Y.M.C.A. Week of Prayer and will be observed in an appropriate way at all of the Association gatherings of the week. It is proposed to have a five-minute address on the subject of "Prayer" before each of the gymnasium classes followed by devotions. The Bible Study clubs will give a portion of their time to a study of Prayer. Any Association worker who desires to use a prayer card during the week can secure a list of subjects at the Y.M.C.A. office.

As both Boys' Secretary Galley and Physical Director Roper are in Toronto attending the Older Boys' Conference, Secretary Meserve is being assisted by members of the Intermediate Gymnasium Leaders' Corps and the members from the Senior Collegiate Club. We trust to receive a great deal of benefit from the inspiration obtained by the thirty-seven young men who are attending the Toronto Conference.

The following names have been added to the Y.M.C.A. Honour Roll: Capt. E. M. Best, Howard Hall, George Read and Lieut. A. P. Stock. These have all been good workers in the Y.M.C.A. and were overlooked in making out the Honour Roll published a few days ago.

General Secretary Meserve is chairman of a committee appointed by the Playgrounds Association to investigate the problem of public bathing houses throughout the Dominion. He has received letters from fifteen Canadian cities bearing on this point and has learned that quite a number of cities in Canada are providing public bathing houses and teaching swimming at public expense. It is hoped that the local City Council will take favourable action to provide bathing houses during the coming year.

Considerable interest is being taken in the proposed membership canvass to be conducted November 20 to 30. We trust that every Y.M.C.A. member will be an the job and seek new members.

There will be a meeting of the Church bowlers at the Y.M.C.A. Monday evening, November 13th, at 7:30 o'clock. All bowlers desiring to represent Sunday School clases or other Church organizations, are asked to be present as it is hoped as a result of this meeting that several leagues will be formed giving an opportunity to beginners as well as experienced bowlers to participate.

BOARD OF EDUCATION DECIDES TO CONTEST AMOUNT OF BARTLETT CLAIM

The Board of Education held a little chalk talk—to appropriate a rugby term—last night in preparation for the hearing in the High Court of his claim of $1,200 against the Board for services alleged to have been rendered in the construction of the Queen Mary and King George schools. The Board has already paid into court $762.50, which they believe to be in excess of what they actually owe. But in the hope of a settlement they had offered a sum sufficient as they thought to satisfy Mr. Bartlett. Mr. E. A. Peck, solicitor for the Board, reviewed Mr. Bartlett's claim and entered into the details of them with the members and the conclusion reached was that the Board had a strong case, and that they should contest Mr. Bartlett's claim in court. Mr. Ackerman and Mr. Peck were given full power to proceed with the action as representatives of the Board.

RUSSELL HILL AND HIS TWO SISTERS WERE DISCHARGED

Russell Hill and his sisters, Katherine Hill and Mrs. Clarence Sampson were discharged this morning by County Magistrate Langley. No evidence had been presented against them, and pursuant with clause 687 of the Criminal Code, he discharged them. They had been charged with complicity in the cattle stealing on four charges of which Davis Hill was committed for trial a few days ago. Crown Attorney Hatton asked that Russell and his sisters be discharged but their counsel, Mr. G. N. Gordon, argued for their dismissal.

SIX BIG SONG HITS IN 'SEPTEMBER MORN'

There are six emphatic song hits in the season's greatest musical festival "September Morn," which Le Comte and Flesher will present at the Grand Opera House, Monday night, November 13th. The title son. "September Morn" has proven the sensation of the decade and "In Paree," "When a Little Boy Loves a Little Girl," "Beautiful Dreams I'm Dreaming," "A Spare Rib from the Butcher Shop of Life," "Where is the Pleasure in Wine and Song if the Woman is not There?" follow closely as popular favorites. Ruth Wilkins, whose piquant personality has made her a reigning favourite, will be seen as "Argentina," the tango dancer. William Moore, will appear as Rudolph Plastric, the professor of art, his funniest creation in years. Among the other well-known favorites are Maud K. Williams, Valere True, Billy Murphy, J. J. Patton, James Baber, Leslie Jones and a wonderful chorus. Seats now on sale at the box office.

COAL'S DOWN IN NEW YORK

Drop of Several Dollars a Ton as the "Panic" Has Subsided

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The tension in the coal situation has eased in the past few days, and wholesale prices have dropped several dollars a ton, according to statements by trade authorities here. Anthracite, selling recently at $12 to $12.50 a ton wholesale, may now be purchased for from $8.50 to $10, coal men said.

Arthur F. Rice, president of the Coal Merchants' Association, attributed the lower prices to the milder weather and to the fact that the public had recovered from its recent "panic" during which householders filled their bins through a fear that prices would rise still higher. Mr. Rice said he believed the cost of coal would not go up again this season, especially as the closing soon of navigation on the Great Lakes would insure more coal for the retail market.

PARIS PUTS BAN ON "GLAD RAGS"

Nobody Admitted to the Opera Who Wears Evening Dress.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—An official decree issued provides that until the war is over no person shall be admitted to the Opera Comique, the Comedie Francaise or the Odeon, which are subsidized by the State, except those attired in ordinary day costume.

"Those dressed otherwise will be rigorously excluded," the decree says.

Hitherto evening dress has been worn at the opera, except by those occupying the cheaper seats.

Obstinate Coughs and Colds YIELD TO DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

All obstinate coughs and colds yield quickly to "Dr. Wood's" containing as it does all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree combined with the soothing, healing and expectorant properties of other excellent herbs and barks.

Mrs. H. F. McCormick, Rodney, N. S., writes: "I had a severe cold one winter, and had been coughing for a month. I could not sleep at night, nor could I speak above a whisper.

After I had taken a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I felt better so I took two or three more and was entirely cured. I have three children and I always give it to them when they have a cough or cold."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup has been on the market for twenty-five years and we claim that it is the best cure for a cough or cold you can possibly procure.

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c. and 50c. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

IT'S A SHAME

To see so many people in the City of Peterborough suffering from backache, kidney trouble and rheumatism when they can be relieved by using a medicine of undoubted value. Instead of describing your ailments and having a sorrowful story to tell to your friends, just as soon as you can, after reading this notice send or telephone to Lynch's Drug Store for a bottle of Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills. You will be genuinely surprised at the good they will do you.

Young men save your money to pay on a Y.M.C.A. membership during the ten-day contest Nov. 20-30. It will be your best investment of the year. 3d-109

You Sign for the Man Who Left His Family Behind

AS PROMISED, we come back to the promotion of the campaign now before the ratepayers, that signatures be gained for a petition to the City Council praying that a grant be made, by by-law, of $60,000 to the Patriotic Fund. It is to be hoped that in this third year of the war that it is not needful to explain the function of the Fund nor that we are pledged to help those left behind.

And you are asked, as sensible and thoughtful people (for the property owner is generally so), not to allow stories and remarks "that these women are getting too much money" and that they "are not spending it as they should." Will you believe that the Committee know very much more about those matters than you can ever know. That while the Committee admit that there are some indiscretions, that the very much larger and greater number of the women are loyal, thrifty, economical and careful. Only a very small percentage are reckless in the handling of moneys. This tendency is driven with and repressed wherever possible, restrained in many ways. Try and remember the errand the man has gone on, for you, and that you are at home and able to go on with your occupation or business BECAUSE HE HAS GONE. Don't forget that.

This feature is only referred to here in order to stand off remonstrance and to anticipate any reluctance to signing. People will seldom refuse to sign without putting forward what they call a reason. This is more often only an excuse, and generally a pretty poor one at that. So when the canvasser looks you in the eye, brace up, do your duty, do it cheerfully and heartfully, and be a booster.

For two weeks the American friend has been forecasting as to a certain election. He has been all astray in predictions. But we are going to do a little forecasting on our own account. Just to show you how the wind is blowing. Mr. H. G. Walker, team captain of three campaigns, a man whose car, countenance, credit and cordiality is ever at the use of the Fund, has completed the canvass of two of the polling sub-divisions in the North Ward. Stayed home, or in the city, on purpose to do that job. He reports his district thoroughly covered. Only one man refused, and he was a woman. Did not understand, but will be persuaded. Met with the heartiest encouragement. All approved of the plan and project. Those two divisions are no doubtful states. Solid for the good work.

We are convinced that this will be the record all over the city on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of next week. Has to be the record. The Finance Committee knows no such word as fail. It has assumed the duty of raising this money, as much for you as for themselves and their responsibility in the work. So back the Committee up, with your signature, that is all.

Just to meet the statement of the owner of a house, or houses, that the tenant, under the arrangement proposed, will get off without paying the sum put on the taxes roll. Now most landlords are astute individuals. You think yours is at any rate. Likely is, in fact. Are we to suppose that he will let the next twenty years pass by and not try to recover the amounts of increased taxes that will be levied? As a matter of fact we haven't as yet begun to pay for the war. We have only heard the crack of the whip. Never a taste of the fall of the lash. But that will keep and come. In the analysis of events the charges will work back to the tenant, as they should, that he pay a share. Besides, there is this arrangement. Where a house rents for $10.00 per month, make the first (or one month) $11.00 and the other eleven $10.00. The dollar will pay the tax on an assessment of $2,000.00.

Side by side with the petition and its mission to raise the sum required is considered other sources of income. The man with investments must be looked after. His house assessment might cost him, for the Fund, say on an assessment of $5,000, two dollars per year. This is too small. That man, and there are more than several of him, will be waited on and have the case presented in the best of the King's English. A personal subscription will be in order and received. It is in the mind of the Committee, and will be carried out, to request the Council to pass through a by-law, coupled with a request to the Legislature for power to make the income taxes amount, where levied, not less than ten dollars, for the war year of 1917. This to levy on the young man, neither tenant nor owner, who enjoys all that we have and does not contribute, or only to a trifle. If a considerable sum can be so realized, then the debentures need not be sold, at least to that extent, or held for a further time.

It was written in the heading of the first appeal that you "Do Your Bit" for the nation. Here is a brilliant instance of how not to do it. One of our scouts, thinking to secure a few signatures, spent an evening going to homes. Found a mechanic at home. Asked him to sign. He refused. Said he was doing his bit. Asked to explain, said he was working at munitions work and making shells. His average wage is $23.00 per week, an Englishman, too. A man, making $23.00 per week, and refused to undertake to pay forty-two cents per year for his country! Truly he was on the safety-first line. He was told where he got off at.

Don't forget, Monday and following days. This thing must go through. For ourselves, and that we want to convince the county that it must do likewise. Working together, as the county loyally is, the Fund will be secure for 1917.

THRILLING STORY OF THE HEROISM SHOWN BY 21ST BATTALION

Every Man Offered His Life as a Sacrifice in the Terrible Inferno of Fighting When Eastern Ontario Battalion Captured the Sugar Refinery and Pushed on to Courcelette.

A most thrilling and graphic account of the glorious part the 21st battalion took in the recent Somme fighting has been received from one of the officers of the battalion, and will undoubtedly be of decided interest to Peterborough people in view of the number of Peterborough boys in the battalion. As is already known, no fewer than seven of the gallant officers of this fine battalion were killed and fourteen wounded, nearly all seriously, in the two days fighting. The account is as follows:

2ND DIVISION MADE ADVANCE

"You know, of course, that it was the 2nd division which made the advance in the fighting of Sept. 15 and 16th.

"The 4th and 6th brigades received orders to attack, the 5th Brigade to support them. In the 4th Brigade the 18th, 20th and 21st battalions were to attack and the 19th to hold the line. The 21st battalion was ordered to take the fortified point in the enemy defense on their front, the 18th and 20th taking the trenches running from it. This strong position which is known officially as the Sugar Factory, was heavily held by the Huns and having been fortified as were the lines running from it.

"At six o'clock in the morning the three battalions went over the parapet. An officer of the 21st telling the story said: We plunged forward into a perfect hell, shells bursting all about us, and a murderous fire to go against. Our own artillery kept a rain of fire ahead of us to help clear the way and it was an effort to keep the men from running into our own barrage of fire.

SAW SHEPHERD FALL.

"I saw poor Shepherd fall in the first rush and the men seemed to be literally mown down, it was with a feeling of surprise that I realized how many had reached the Factory, then our turn came. It was a terrible hand to hand fight and we hewed our way in—neither side showed any quarter, both realizing the importance of the strong points in the line. But nothing could hold against us and at seven o'clock one hour after we started we held the factory. It was with a feeling of dismay that we counted the cost and with the news that we held the fort, went a call for reinforcements. Of course you understand we carry our telephone with us every place. There was great rejoicing at headquarters when our victory was known and the base company was dispatched to our assistance. It was in their rush across that the two Ottawa officers, McGee and Fraser were killed.

WORKED LIKE MAD.

"We worked like mad consolidating our position and it was while working at the guns that Norton Taylor, one of the finest officers in the battalion, got his. At three o'clock in the afternoon we were asked could we advance to the sunken road connecting Courcelette and Martinpuich as it had been decided owing to the success of the Canadian attack to try and push farther. Off we went leaving part of the battalion in the factory. Less than one hundred men, including officers reached the road, but again we started to consolidate the position, while anxiously calling for reinforcements.

"It was a night of fearful anxiety. Again and again headquarters called to implore us to hold, that reinforcements were on their way, and to tell us strong points were being consolidated in our rear.

"It was not until three o'clock on the afternoon of the 16th that support reached us and we learned that between us and the main lines, there was nothing but the shell swept land of death. To our help had come part of the 5th Brigade consisting of the 22nd (French Canadians) and part of the 24th, 25th, and 26th. I think also more of our own gallant men who had joined in at the sugar factory to mix some of the fight.

ON TO COURCELETTE.

"We now swept on to Courcelette, but as soon as the Huns realised that we were in the village they fought a defensive fight, vacating the village, and finally being driven back to their next line, the 22nd clearing some of them who had taken refuge in a small wood out of it.

"Here we held until our wins were all consolidated, and we knew a great victory had been won.

ORDERS TO RETIRE

"Then the order came for the 21st to retire but even the thought of hot food, so badly needed, could not carry the exhausted boys back on the way they crept in twos and threes into any safe shell holes and slept the sleep of bitter exhaustion some for twenty four and some even for thirty-six hours.

"There is only a remnant left of the smart battalion but the name 21st is writ in imperishable glory in the roll of honour of the Somme

EVERY MAN A HERO.

"The medals which will go to some of the officers and men, are no index to the work of the battalion, for every officer and every man offered his life as a sacrifice in the terrible inferno."

"SLAVES OF THE MILL."

The story of capital and labour was told in a very clear and comprehensive manner last night at the Grand Opera House, when the Royal Alexandra Players repeated their opening play the 'Slaves of the Mills.' A good sized audience appreciated every line of the play, especially the second act, which represented the superintendent's office at the mill, and where the big strike argument takes place. The scene, while it naturally appeals to the masses, is as fair an argument as could be advanced by either side, and when the curtain fell at the conclusion of the act the company had to respond to numerous curtain calls. All the roles were well handled and the bill was cast to the best advantage.

For to-night this popular company, responding to the numerous requests that have been made for a reproduction of the gonspiracy, have decided to repeat this wonderful detective comedy drama. This will be the last chance that Peterborough will have of seeing this play, as the Royal Alexandra Players are the only company playing it in Canada. The conspiracy was produced by the late Chas. Frohman and was having a phenomenal run at the play house, New York, when Mr. Frohman was drowned when the Lusitania was sunk off the coast of Ireland by a German torpedo. Mr. Frohman was en route to England to finish making arrangements for the English production of the conspiracy at the time he met his untimely death. When the news of his death was received in New York the company that was playing the conspiracy was closed and the play, after Mr. Frohman's estate was adjusted, was released for stock. The Royal Alexandra Players secured the playing rights for Canada and produced it at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto, when the summer season closed there and they went on the road, the conspiracy was one of the plays they decided to keep, because it contained all the elements that go to make a successful play, love, mystery, comedy and melodrama.

THE PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY COLUMN

In the October number of the Red Cross Society Bulletin appears the following message to the women of Canada:

The Executive committee of the Canadian Red Cross Society, having taken in review the amount of stores now in hand in England, France and Canada, and the great demands on the society for its own undertakings, and for the assistance of our allies, assures the women of Canada that, although the latest information from France and England states that further supplies of roller bandages and surgical dressings are not needed at present, yet, the demand for socks, shirts, pyjamas, dressing gowns, hospital suits, etc., is urgent and practically unlimited, and the Executive committee calls upon all Red Cross branches and auxiliary societies to continue or increase their efforts for the Society's work.

The seriousness of the above appeal, has apparently, as yet, not made its imprint on the minds and hearts of all Red Cross workers, to judge from the following incident: a visitor called at the headquarters of the Red Cross in Toronto, not long ago, to make inquiries as to what work would be required during the winter. She was told that the most desirable articles were socks, shirts, dressing gowns, pyjamas and such articles, together with comfort bags and housewives. She asked whether her workers could not make surgical supplies and was told that they were not required, as the supply was, for the present time, sufficient. "But my workers do not like to make shirts and pyjamas," she said. "You see the sewing machines drown the conversation."

The formal opening of the Brixton Special Hospital took place on August 17th, when Her Grace, the Duchess of Devonshire, performed the inaugural ceremony. Among the audience was Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia. The hospital is situated close to the Duke of Devonshire's estate at Chatsworth. This ambitious unit now publishes its own "organ." The Canadian Red Cross Special, with illustrations. The O. C. is Major F. Guest.

The following extracts will illustrate the valuable kind of work done by the visiting and newspaper departments of the Canadian Red Cross Society, Information Bureau

About three weeks ago, a message came from one of the large London hospitals, "Can you find someone who will come every day for a little and try to teach a Canadian officer how to speak and to spell again?" The lady who has since gone daily has just handed in her report: "It was during the first week in August that I was introduced to Capt. —— by Dr. F. in these words, 'Here is someone to be a mother to you.' A piece of shrapnel had pierced the jugular artery just below the left ear at the base of the brain, leaving a tiny splinter, which was barring the blood from the left side of the brain, causing a paralysis of the right side and depriving him completely, at least for the time, of the power of articulation. At that date, the only word he could say unprompted was 'No,' and that with great difficulty. For the first week I practised him only in the simplest words of one syllable and in repeating the alphabet. He began to show decided dissatisfaction and it took me two days to understand that he 'wanted work,' meaning the putting together of sentences. It was a wonderful morning when, with a little prompting, he could say, 'I can ring my bell for my nurse.' After that, I bought a delightful First Reader. Many words now he can pronounce without help, but in each sentence there will be at least one or two sounds which he can make only after repeated effort. The nurse and doctor both say that it is in the making of that effort that the power of speech will come back to him. As his right arm is utterly paralyzed, he is learning to write with his left hand, so every morning after his reading lesson, he has an exercise in writing, and enjoys the writing out of part of his reading lesson. His understanding is only slightly and one may hope, temporarily impaired.

The work of the newspaper department is somewhat spasmodic apparently, owing to the irregularity of the mails. Sometimes no mail appears, then 78 or 80 bags at once. The ladies of this department distribute local Canadian newspapers to the men according to their place of residence, so that the men may as far as possible to get news of their own homes.

To Get Rid of Wrinkles And Bad Complexions

It is more important now than during the period of profuse perspiration, to keep the pores clean. All commotion clog the pores. In cool weather this interferes greatly with elimination of waste material, injuring instead of aiding the complexion. Ordinary mercolized wax serves all the purposes of creams, powders and rouges, giving far better results. It actually peels off an offensive skin, at the same time unclogging the pores. Minute particles of pearl skin come off day by day, causing not the least discomfort. Gradually the healthy, younger skin beneath peeps out, and in less than a fortnight you have a lovelier complexion than you ever dreamed of acquiring. Mercolized wax, obtainable at any druggists, to spread on nightly like cold cream and washed off mornings. One ounce usually suffices.

For removing wrinkles, without stopping the pores with pasty stuff, here's a never-failing formula: One ounce powdered saxolite, dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel. Bathe the face in this daily for awhile; every line will vanish completely. Even the fine expression-lines surprising results.

MR. W. A. CARSON TAKES LINDSAY POSITION.

Mr. W. A. Carson, who has been for the past three years head salesman with the Peterborough Hardware Company, leaves on Monday to accept a responsible position with Cinnamon and Allen, hardware merchants, Lindsay. In his local service Mr. Carson proved himself a courteous and efficient hardware salesman, and with the prominent Lindsay firm he should continue his success. He was a member of the George Street Methodist Church choir for the past two years and a half, and will be otherwise missed by his departure to Lindsay.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

In the early stages kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone, rheumatic pains and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. RALLY NIGHT WITH THE I. O. F. MEMBERS

The semi-monthly meeting of Court Chemong, 530 I.O.F., was held on Thursday evening in the W. O. W. hall, George street. The meeting was presided over by Bro. G. W. Spring, S.P.C.R., who conducted the duties of chairman in his usual able manner.

The Court was again favoured with another visit from Bro. S. B. Lynde, D.S.C.R., who has been successful in securing about twenty-five new members since he came to the city, and a number of these were initiated and given the secret work of the Order in a manner that reflected great credit on Bro. Lynde's ability as an orator and examiner.

The meeting then took the form of a social evening and card games were engaged in by a number of the members.

Special features of the evening's entertainment were the two musical instruments which furnished music throughout the evening to the delight of all present. The leanaphone being operated by Bro. Roy Powell and the graphaphone by Bro. S. E. Dureal. Splendid addresses were made by Bro. G. W. Powell Bro. A. H. Webb and Bro. S. B. Lynde.

The committee in charge of the arrangements were Bros. W. G. McKee W. Brown, J. W. Buyers G. W. Powell, Miss Eva Rhodehouse, Mrs. A. Bradshaw and Mrs. A. Reid.

Refreshments were served by the ladies, to whom hearty votes of thanks were tendered.

On Dec. 14th the officers will be elected and on Jan. 11th, 1917, they will be installed, and the meeting will take the form of a social evening.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAMES SUTHERLAND)

St. James 1st chap., 4th vs.: "Let Patience have her perfect work; that ye may be perfect and entire wanting nothing."

The writer of this Epistle appears to have been James the son of Alphæus, or Clopas, called the brother, or near relative of our Lord. Gal. 1st chap., 18th and 19th verses. St. Paul says, But other of the apostles saw I none save James the Lord's brother. He is also called James the Less, to distinguish him from James the brother of John, who was put to death by Herod Agrippa. Acts 12th, 2nd vs.

He appears to have been early appointed President or Bishop of the Christian Church at Jerusalem, and was distinguished among his brethren for his piety, and surnamed "the Just." He suffered martyrdom A. D., 62. The Jews demanded of him a public declaration concerning Christ—he avowed his faith that Jesus was the Messiah. The enraged Jews at this threw him from the battlements of the temple, and as he survived the fall, they killed him by blows with a club while praying for his murderers.

The apostle James is called by the evangelist the brother of our Lord, yet it was his glory to serve Christ in the spirit rather than to boast of his birth. To be a servant of God and of Christ—we should prize this title above all others in the world. We cannot serve our Father unless we are the servants of the Son, confessing that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father.

The salutation of the apostle is addressed to the twelve tribes; though scattered abroad by various calamities he specially addresses his message to the Christian Jews, knowing their afflicted and persecuted condition. He exhorted them to esteem their trials a cause for rejoicing. Human nature finds this a hard thing to do, and only clinging to the promises of God with firm and patient faith can help us to do this. Then the Christian can say: All things work together for good to them that love God. We know how hard it is to suffer under bereavement and sorrow. When Jesus was in Gethsemane bearing the sins of the world, bowed down under human suffering, He prayed to His Heavenly Father, If it be possible let this cup pass from Me, but My will but Thine be done. The Jews knew from the word of God and their own experience that the trial of their faith when proven, would bring them to a state of meekness and patient waiting upon God.

Philosophy may instruct men to be calm under their troubles but Christianity teaches them to be patient, meek and trustful in the will of God. By suffering patiently in the ways of righteousness we serve the interests of our Lord on earth. Our trials in the way of our duty will brighten our graces now, and our crown at last, but to get benefit from these trials. Patience must perform its perfect work. Believers must rely on God's promises and obey His commands.

The faith spoken of here as tried by affliction consists in the belief and the promises of God, and in fidelity and constancy to the Lord Jesus. Christian patience must work. Apathy and Christian patience are widely different; by the one men become in some measure insensible of their afflictions, but by the other they become triumphant in and over them. Let us take care that in time of trial that patience and not passion are set to work in us; let patience have the saying and the doing of it. Let us not allow the indulgence of our passions to hinder the operations of patience. Let us give it leave to work and it will work wonders in times of trouble, when we bear all that God appoints, in humble submission to His divine will, without murmuring, or complaining, then patience hath its perfect work.

When the work of patience is complete then the Christian is entire—wanting nothing. It will furnish us with all that is necessary for our Christian race and warfare and will enable us to persevere to the end, and then its work will be ended and crowned with glory. Prayer is recommended to suffering Christians and we have the Divine assurance from the Saviour's own words, as found in Matt. 21st chap., 21st and 22nd vs., speaking to His disciples about the fruitless fig tree withered away. The text says, And Jesus answered and said unto them, Verily I say unto you, if ye have faith and doubt not ye shall not only do this, which is done to the fig tree, but also if ye shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed and be thou cast into the sea, it shall be done. Verse 22nd. And all things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer believing ye shall receive. The passage in St. Mark's Gospel referred to repeats His promises, which is the richest mine that the Christian possesses when he complies with the conditions. Have faith in God. Not all the riches in the world, such as gold and silver, rubies and diamonds, honor, and wealth and power, can be compared to this small word of five letters, (faith) in God—Praying in the will of God, when we are there, we have reached a high rung in the ladder of Christian perfection, and are rich far beyond what the riches of this world can give us.

This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. This is what we need in this awful world crisis, when men's hearts are failing them for fear. Tragedies are being enacted all the world over. Every wave of ocean's billows brings us messages of some of our friends who have crossed the bar; but if we have the comforting assurance that they died in the faith all is well. We do not sorrow as those who have no hope, for if we are faithful unto death we shall meet them again to part no more. Religion is the one thing needful. It goes with us to church and prayer meeting, even where two or three are gathered together, in the shop, in the home by the wayside, by the seashore (where Jesus preached to the multitude from a fishing boat), on the mountain sides.

Religion pure and undefiled before God and the Father is this: to visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the world. Godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come. Let us add to the Christian virtues whatever our condition in life and lay up treasure in heaven so that when earth's trials are over we shall have an abundant entrance into the Kingdom of God's dear Son.

Was Anaemic FOR OVER A YEAR

Anaemia, or blood turning to water, is caused by the heart becoming deranged, and if the heart becomes weakened it cannot pump the blood as it should. As a result the blood becomes impoverished, and it loses its nourishing qualities. The face becomes pale and thin, and the lips bloodless. There is a weakness, tiredness and loss of weight.

When those suffering from thin or watery blood start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills they can see a change from the outset.

Every dose introduces into the blood those vital elements necessary to make it rich and red. The pale cheeks take on the rosy hue of health, the weight increases, and the whole being thrills with a new life.

Mrs. R. J. Grey, Fredericton, N. B., writes: "When I was a girl working at general house work I overtaxed my strength and became completely run down. For over a year I was very bad with anaemia. A friend told me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I got a box and when it was done I decided to get six more. When I had taken them I gained not only in strength, but in flesh and colour, and best of all was good health."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box; three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Will Your Children Have the Joy of Music this Winter?

MUSIC that breaks like sunshine through the long, dreary days of winter. Home takes on a more endearing meaning when music is there to gladden the stay-at-home hours.

Just as you would insist that your little girl or your little boy should have the best in other matters of education, so in choosing a piano for your children, you unquestioningly select the famous for the Williams possesses that pure singing tone which assures you that your child will acquire the true and correct sound of every note.

Williams Piano

Endorsed by Great Musicians

The Williams is more than a life-long enjoyment. It is an instrument for whose enduring worthiness your children—and those who follow—will grow to cherish and love.

Why not bring the enjoyment of good music into your home and their little hearts NOW.

SUNDAY READING FOR A THOUGHTFUL HOUR

Prepared for the Examiner by a Local Church Worker

SHALL WE PRAY?

"The mind is wonderful, but no less real are the intuitions of the heart. Let us have a clear intellect, but it is an arid world that shuts out the intentions of the heart."

The men who are and have been the greatest forces in society, the men whose lives make history, are the men who have not shut out the intentions of the heart, divinely made accessible to all, though unused by the many.

Calyle says that "Man's unhappiness comes of his greatness, because there is an Infinite in him which he cannot quite bury under the Finite." There are few who do not believe in God and the unending life beyond.

The one who accepts God as revealed in Jesus Christ must pray, for prayer is communion, it is keeping in touch with the source of these heart intuitions, it is the hiding in the presence of the Father, it is the recognition of the Infinite in the Finite.

"Why therefore should we do ourselves this wrong?
Or others—that we are not always strong;
That we are ever over-borne with care,
That we should ever weak or heartless be;
Anxious or troubled, when with us is prayer,
And joy and strength and courage are with Thee?"

This hold on the Divine through prayer changes that which comes into life as a devasting flood, into sources of enrichment, and holds the soul with steady poise through times of upheaval like the present, when the forms by which truth has been grasped and the moulds into which society has been run, are being shattered—yes, but shattered that bigger and better conditions may appear.

Shall we pray? Yes; for so the song comes in the night: "Tell the nations that the Lord reigneth and righteousness and judgment are the foundations of His throne."

Tell the sad and lonely:
"God is love."

"I hear it singing in the night
When out across the bar,
The moonlight falls in shimmering white,
And calls the barque afar;
It sings to me when Vesper bells
Steal softly from the deep,
And through all nature sings and swells—
He loves thee—rest and sleep."

And when the dread message comes across the seas, and the stricken heart is numb with agony, one needs to be in touch with the Divine source of all hope and comfort, to see "the stars shine through the cypress trees."

Shall we not pray? When on the "far-flung battle line men of many tongues and widely divergent ritual, are bending together in prayer over the grave of the fallen comrade, and thereby revealing the brotherhood of hope and sympathy that is Christ-like.

One knows not how, one only knows that strength and courage come in answer to prayer. When in the thick of the fight, facing fearful odds prayers dart up to God; help comes—one knows not how.

"To pray is right—be not afraid to pray. Pray in the darkness, if there be no light."

One treads softly as one approaches the sacred plane of the prayer life of the Christ. It is so mysterious and yet so human.

He called Himself the Son of Man, and it is written "In all our afflictions He is afflicted." There must have been something wondrously appealing in the prayers of Jesus, for the disciples asked Him, "Lord, teach us to pray." They did not ask to be taught to work miracles, or to unfold doctrines. It is enough—one must follow the Master in the prayer life.

The Archbishop of Canterbury said in his sermon before the National Mission of Repentence and Hope started in England: "When we speak of a National Mission we mean a call which is to force home on individuals their personal share in, and responsibility for, common deadness, common selfishness, common standards of purity, or a public spirit intolerably low."

Shall we not pray? When we, too, in Canada are guilty of intolerably low standards of moral responsibility, both individually and nationally.

Pray till the white light from the Throne of God, sets our national sins before us as darkly cut mountains in the way of the progress if the kingdom of righteousness, and our individual sins—the real progress of all social low standards.

One must needs pray—

"Pray without ceasing;"
Or mighty Friend, forever near!
O, heavenly Help, so soon forgot,
So oft rebelled against and grieved,
Unthanked, distrusted, disbelieved!
Forgive us all, and hold us fast
Till dawning lights the dark at last."

MOTHER'S PRAYER.

When mother prayed, then all the air
Grew tremulous with music rare;
Love's earnest pleading for its own
Was wafted heavenward to the throne

"God bless my children," thus the prayer;
"Keep them unspotted everywhere;
O, Father, God," in softest tone
Echoed the whisper upward borne,
When mother prayed.

O, dread the day when mother's prayer,
Breathes out no more her heart's fond care;
For blessings rich from heavenly zone
Came angel-like from heights far-blown,
When mother prayed."

—From "A Heart's Garden."

The cry of anguish went up unto God:

"Lord, take away pain—
The shadow that darkens the world
Thou hast made,
The close-coiling chain
That strangles the heart, the burden that weighs
On the wings that would soar—
Lord, take away pain from the world
Thou hast made,
That it love Thee the more!"

Then answered the Lord to the cry of His world:

"Shall I take away pain
And, with it the power of the soul to endure,
Made strong by the strain?
Shall I take away pity, that knits heart to heart,
And sacrifice high
Will ye lose all your heroes that lift from the fire
White brows to the sky?
Shall I take away love that redeems with a price
And smiles at its loss?
Can ye spare from your lives, that would climb unto Mine,
The Christ on His Cross?"

VENEZELOS.

The greatest statesman in Europe today.

In a few years he has revealed one of the most remarkable personalities in the political history of Europe.

He is in temperment, what one may call a positive, a man of sympathies, rather than antipathies, winning by the affections more than by diplomacy or cunning.

He exhibits a simple candor and directness, so unusual as to be almost incredible.

It is the mark of a man great enough to be himself, to declare his purposes, to live always in the light, fearless of consequences.

He is a native of Crete, the son of an Athenian.

But he is not a Crete nor a Greek only, he is a great European.

KING GEORGE.

Sketches of Prominent Men, from Pillars of Society, by A. C. Gardener

King George, the sailor, has been fitted to enter into the life of the common people by his training on the quarter deck of a vessel. He was trained not for a throne, but for a ship.

He belongs to the middle classes and moves among the working people, not as a stranger, but as one to the manor-born.

In Cornwall he dons the overalls, and explores the working of the mine.

In Lancashire he goes through the mills and foundaries, looking at the machinery with the eye of a mechanic.

He visits the race course perfunctorily. It is part of the traditional business of his calling, and he will not shirk a duty.

When he wants to enjoy a day, he spends it at the General Post Office, British Museum, The Radium Institute, or Garden Suburb among the people.

His comradeship with the people springs from a genuine fellow feeling.

It is the heritage of his long apprenticeship to the sea. He is the first king of Greater Britain.

The foci of his father's orbit were the courts of Europe and high politics. Ceremonies and acts of grace were the things that filled his official life.

King George is all British. The first king who has ever seen the Empire upon which the sun never sets.

King Edward belonged to the old world; King George belongs to the new.

The King has the frankness of the sailor, much more than the restraint of the monarch.

King Edward was all diplomacy; no one uses the word tact in regard to King George.

He is not what Johnstone would call a clubbable man, his friendships being few, but firm.

He is a plain, direct, straight speaking man, taking his office seriously, hating display and flummery. He is governed by a strong sense of duty, thoroughly obedient to the traditional constitution of the Monarchy.

Our King—God bless him.

—Fidelis.

DAVID LLOYD-GEORGE.

David Lloyd-George, as a fatherless boy, learned the rudiments of knowledge in a little village school where he led his school mates in a revolt against the catechism.

At the age of 21 he became a qualified solicitor, and fought the battle of the village folk against the tyranny of the Anglican parson who refused the dying wish of a Dissenter to be buried in the grave of his child.

Lloyd-George—the man who has arrived, is possibly the most baffling figure in politics—the man perchance who holds the key of the future.

He is without fear—he sets. He is not handicapped with a classical education, which keeps you under the dominion of authority and awe of the past.

His mind is of the swiftest in action, and he thinks best when on his feet.

He brings a fresh, untrammeled mind to the consideration of every problem.

Mr. Lloyd-George will succeed in proportion to his fidelity to the inspiration, not of Westminster, with its intrigues, but of Wales, with its simple faith.

—Fidelis.

A YOUNGSTER'S RECRUITING POEM

The bugle call was sounded,
Yet early in the morn;
But thousands heard distinct the note,
That on the breeze was born.

By thousands gallant officers
And men filled up the ranks;
The doctors soon gave their name,
And got, the woundeds' thanks.

So brave they started side by side,
To help with heart and soul;
Are you the one thats, bit, not, done,
Leaves England in the hole?

Have you no shame? Let's see your name?
It's you we're after "Jim":
I never thought you such a coward,
Till Miss. (Truth) came running in.

You'd let the Germans shoot your race?
You'd let such through?
Edith Cavell stood facing hell,
With heart so brave and true.

And yet you slum the street young man;
You let such things go past:
Such shame should never spoil the world,
But they'll be paid at last.

RUSSIANS GATHERING GREAT FORCE FOR NEXT SUMMER

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Russia will save Roumania from the Teuton menace this autumn and winter, and next spring will have the strongest army she has had since the war began. General Brussiloff told Stanley Washburn, the Times' correspondent at Russian headquarters on the Carpathians front yesterday. Brussiloff commandes all the Russian armies that made the great sweep into Galicia in the summer.

"I speak with authority when I say that from the common soldier up, the united sentiment of Russia is that Roumania should be protected, helped and supported in every possible way," he said. "The Roumanians must feel faith in the great heart of the Russian people. They must know that in the efforts we are making to save them this sentiment is the dominant factor, not merely a question of our own self-interest to protect our left flank.

DEFEATS ARE BUT INCIDENTS

"Roumania is now feeling for the first time the pressure of war and the bitterness of defeat, but Roumania must realize that defeats are but incidents of a greater campaign. Behind her stands great Russia, who will see that her brave little ally, who came into the war for a just cause, does not ultimately suffer for daring the espouse the cause for which we are all fighting.

"The war is won to-day, though it is merely speculation to attempt how much longer will be required before the enemy is convinced that the cause for the sake of which they have drenched Europe in blood is irretrievably lost.

PERIOD OF GERMAN DEFEAT

"Personally, never since the beginning hive I believed that the enemy had a chance of winning. While they are able to continue successful offensives it is difficult for them to realise that they are not approaching a successful peace. This summer's operations mark a definite period of defeat. That period dates from the time when the allies, co-ordinating their programmes, seized from the enemy the capacity for continuing the offensives and dictating their strategy to us.

RUSSIA NOT AT ZENITH.

"If there remain any Germans who are still hopeful of their cause let them realise that to-day when the Central Powers already have lost the initiative and are finding difficulty in refilling their ranks, Russia has not yet reached the zenith of her power. Surely, no intelligent German can expect victory. It is simply a question of how long they are willing to continue the war, of which the end is absolutely foreshadowed to-day.

"Russia's full power will only be approached next year, when we shall have the largest and best army since the beginning of the war. Even this year we have been obliged to conduct our offensive with an inferiority of material and heavy guns. Next year we shall have material in equality with the enemy, and a superiority in human resources which will steadily increase as long as the war endures.

MORALE OF PEOPLE RISES

"The morale of the Russian people has been slowly rising for two years. It is my absolute personal conviction that if it were possible to take a vote of the entire population, 99 out of 100 Russians to-day would demand the continuation of the war to a definite and final victory, regardless of its price. Our new levies each year are equal to the best troops. I believe they are far superior to anything which the enemy can find to send against us in next year's campaign.

REGRETTABLE BUT TRIFLING

"The recent temporary reverse of Roumania must not be considered as having the slightest significance. The enemy's trifling advance in the Dobrudja, though a regrettable incident, will have no bearing upon the greater issues of the war. It would have been serious had the Germans been able to pierce the Carpathians and enter Roumania, but I believe this last attempt of theirs to regain the initiative somewhere is doomed to perish as all other attempts of the summer campaign have perished."

BUTTER AND POULTRY WERE HEAVY AT THE MARKET CLOSE

Butter sold at from 45c to 46c a pound during the first hours of the market to-day, but at noon one sale comprised sixteen pounds at 45c, and there was then a considerable quantity of butter unsold. Some of the "farmerines" were passing the twelve o'clock point with butter in their baskets and it was 45c butter. With them there was no thought of giving and taking except as they dictated, and having set the price all the way from 45c to 48c they had it screwed to the sticking point, or at least most of them had.

Eggs were decidedly scarce and sold at 48 cents. It is to be hoped that those who purchase eggs on the market for the quality of freshness will not meet with the experience of a Peterborough resident who taking home a dozen all of which were sold as fresh eggs found the first one he opened so ancient that it must have been layed during the warm days of July. When will purchasers awaken to the fact that they are at a decided advantage when buying eggs which afford no outward visible sign of their inward grace or gracelessness as the case might have been. Eggs should be stamped by the farmer and with indelible ink on the day they are collected. Growers may be fined for selling adulterated foodstuffs but there is no means of controlling the trade in eggs. In every business the burden of how safe is placed upon the salesman, but here are millions of eggs being sold every year in this country without any guarantee of their age.

POULTRY PLENTIFUL.

Fine fat ducks sold at 60 cents each about noon and chickens were being offered at 40c each and there was a considerable quantity of them left. A pair of chickens for seventy-five cents was a decidedly favourable price. Geese ranged at various prices from $1.40 beyond $2.00.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I noticed an article in your issue of yesterday signed "For the Good of the Cause." To those who are willing to know the facts, the letter smacks with rank hypocrasy. For three reasons:

First. At the beginning of this letter the writer professes to be in sympathy with providing comforts, socks, etc., for Peterborough soldiers; but before getting to the end, the real purpose of the letter is revealed, viz., to "knock" other societies in the city who will not "come under" the opinion of faultfinders, such as the writer. The particular club referred to can take care of itself; it stands justified by its works. Newspaper articles are cheap.

Second. Upon inquiry I find that this church society did not send "a big parcel of comforts, representing the united work of the ladies" to a Queen's University boy who was the son of one of its members. The writer begins by saying "I heard so and so" and then in the next sentence following states "so and so are facts." That Peterborough boy is under shot and shell day and night without even his knitting, on the battle-line, where, if the home gossipers and fault-finders were, the peace "of the good cause" would be better assured.

Third. Upon further inquiry I find that this church society sends part of its work to the trenches, such as comforts, socks, shirts, etc., and the other part direct through the Red Cross to a Canadian hospital, overseas, and detailed reports of such work and acceptance of same by the Red Cross finds their place regularly in the daily press of this city.

Honest criticism has its place, but half-truths, misrepresentation, and inaccuracy ill serves the sham pretence "the good of the cause."

Onlooker.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In your issue of November 6th there appears an item under heading (Mr. Bishop's Complaint Already Considered).

I wish to have the readers of your valuable publication understand some of the facts in connection with the complaint referred to and also to know of the amount of consideration same has received. I object to having my two children Stanley and Muriel Bishop branded as liars by their teacher, Florence Stewart and the Principal, J. F. Vondee of the Queen Mary school when I know they are not guilty of lying.

I also take exceptions to the insulting conduct of the Principal when approached, regarding the matter by Mrs. Bishop and myself. Under instructions of the Inspector, Mr. Mowat, and at his suggestion I placed in the hands of the chairman of the investigating committee a request for an investigation. This investigation never took place to my knowledge and if it was held not one member of my family was present. On March 2nd, 1916, I received a letter from Mr. John Crane, the chairman of the investigating committee, informing me that he would do as much as possible to expediate matters and on April 10th I received another letter informing me that I might send my lad as he called the boy to South Central School, but that the girl was to return to the Queen Mary School under the same teacher and principal. This I could not do as a true parent to my child because of the fact that the Principal had instructed Mrs. Bishop to take them from school, if she was not going to believe their lies, and the child objected to being forced to go back to her school-mates branded as a liar. I have tried to get the girl back to school and asked that she might be permitted to go to the South Central School. This has been refused several times. I also tried to send her to the Convent School but was barred on account of an arrangement between the two School Boards and I therefore was denied that right.

Again after waiting nearly two terms and after a number of appeals had been made to the Chairman and the Inspector not only by myself, but by my friends, that the girl be permitted to go to the South Central School along with her brother I decided to ask the School Board as a body for an investigation.

Your report of November 6th explains the actions of Mr. Crane and Mr. Denne a gentleman who is not capable investigating committee and who had admitted to me that he knew nothing of the matter. I wish to say that the interviews carried on by Mr. Crane did not include Mrs. Bishop or my two children and that no investigation was held at which I was permitted to make statements or produce evidence; thus I have formed the conclusion that the Chairman and Inspector must be unwilling to have my request granted, apparently fearing that the facts might be let in on the condition of affairs at the Queen Mary School that would not be the Principal or Teacher any credit.

At some future date I will publish a detailed sworn statement of the whole trouble and thus allow the parents of children attending Miss Florence Stewart's room under Mr. J. F. Vondee as opportunity of learning true conditions.

Thanking you for your valuable space I am,

H. M. BISHOP.

SOCIAL EVENING AT LILY LAKE

Last evening a basket social was held under the auspices of the Lily Lake Sunday School. Considering the nature of the weather, the event was fairly well attended. Fire Chief Howard acted as chairman. Following is the programme:

Solo—Miss Cuffe.
Recitation—Miss Dorothy Thompson.
Dialogue—"A Rose and a Thorn."
Solo—Miss Ferne Johnston.
Recitation—Miss Hazel Ackison.
Solo—Miss Cuffe.
Dialogue—"Have a Shine, Sah?"
Monologue—Mr. Ernie Hopwood.
Solo—Miss Ferne Johnston.
Recitation—Miss Dorothy Thompson.
Dialogue—"The Train to Mauro."
Solo—Miss Cuffe.

The baskets were auctioned off by Chief Howard.

Mr. Bert Middleton, superintendent, moved a vote of thanks to Chief Howard and all taking part in the programme. The audience responded by a hearty clap.

The proceeds, which amounted to $34.50, will be devoted to the Red Cross Society and the Sunday School.

WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR AND ITS FOOD VALUE

Many readers of the Examiner may not realize the great food value of whole wheat flour and the saving in the price of bread-making which can be made by its addition or whole use. In an interview with one of the Quaker Oats staff, it was found that this flour is not sold generally, but should a sufficient quantity be ordered it would be handled locally. The price of the flour is $1.25 for 24 lbs., compared with $1.40 for bread flour, and as none of the food Value has been taken out of the wheat flour in the refining process the whole wheat has more nutriment per pound.

Mrs. Scadding has very kindly offered to publish her recipe for the use of whole wheat flour in this paper on request.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH WOMEN'S ASSOCIATION

The annual meeting of St. John's Church Women's Association was held on Friday afternoon in the Guild Room, when a fairly large number of the members were present. Reports were presented by the Secretary and Treasurer, which showed a large amount of work done by the Society. The following officers were then elected:

President—Mrs. T. D. Mulholland.
Vice-President—Mrs. J. A. Aylmer.
Treasurer—Mrs. A. H. Stratton.
Treasurer—A. H. Stratton.
Convener Entertainment Committee—Mrs. Hopwood.
Convener Decorating Committee—Mrs. Morphet.
Convener Hospitality Committee—Miss M. English.
Executive Committee—The above officers and Mrs. A. W. Turner, Mrs. C. Brewer and Mrs. Jamieson and Mrs. Young.

Rev. C. D. Johnston Has Passed Away

Special to Examiner:

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 11.—Rev. C. D. Johnston, Methodist, died here this morning after a long illness.

SHAUGHNESSY'S STATEMENT

Burns. An analysis of the vote of the majority which supported the Ministry against Mr. Redmond will show that if you take away twenty-five officials, there are not more than seventy to eighty Liberals who supported the Ministry, and many of these I was told by one of themselves when they met next day, bitterly regretted that they had not had the courage of their opinions and supported Mr. Redmond. Thus has the Liberal Party declared its disapproval of Mr. Asquith's Irish policy.

But assuredly the strongest condemnation of the policy of the Government came from the lips of its now most prominent and powerful figure—Mr. Lloyd George. He used this extraordinary language—extraordinary from a Ministry describing his own department: "Some of the stupidities which sometimes looked like malignities, which were perpetrated at the beginning of the recruiting in Ireland are beyond belief." At last the truth is coming out, of the kind of spirit which reigned in the War Office in the early days of Lord Kitchener. Kitchener was an extraordinary creature—especially in his attitude to Ireland. On the one hand, he was accustomed to insist on the fact of his birth in Ireland. He often spoke of himself as an Irishman. I remember when I was at Cairo some years ago being told that when the Irishmen in that city thought of having a St. Patrick's Day celebration, Kitchener not only consented, but insisted on presiding. He himself told me at an interview which I had with him at Cairo in his palatial and gorgeous residence that he was especially gratified by being made a Knight of St. Patrick—a comparatively small addition to the already long list of orders which he was entitled to wear.

KITCHENER OPPOSED SCHEME

This fact that he considered himself an Irishman had something to do with the lamentable delay in putting the Home Rule Bill on the Statute Book at the beginning of the war. For Kitchener not only opposed that being done, but he insisted that his knowledge of Ireland convinced him that it was inadvisable. The situation was summed up in his quaint way by Mr. Birrell, in the laughing statement that they would be all right in the Cabinet about Ireland if it weren't for that Irishman Kitchener.

This extraordinary idea of Kitchener's that he knew Ireland well came out in a historic interview, the details of which were made public only within the last few weeks. On the very day after the declaration of the war, Redmond, Dillon and Devlin paid a visit to the War Office to make suggestions to Kitchener as to the best methods of recruiting the forces of Ireland on the side of the Allies. The very first proposal was that the Irish Volunteers, who had not yet split asunder—as they subsequently did—should be drilled and equipped by the War Office. It has been revealed that one of the men who were in favour of that policy was John MacNeill, the subsequent head of the Sinn Fein Volunteers—now serving a term of penal servitude. I need scarcely point out that of the advice of Redmond and the other Irish leaders had been adopted, there would have been no Sinn Fein Rebellion. A majority of the Volunteers, once they had been trained, would undoubtedly have transferred into the regular army; the remainder would have been disciplined in a favourable atmosphere, and Sinn Fein would have found no recruits. But Kitchener would not hear of the proposal. He turned down every other proposal that was made by the Irish leaders; until at last Dillon, unable to keep silent any longer, made the remark to Lord Kitchener that he had been too long out of Ireland to understand its conditions to-day. Then, as Dillon humorously tells the story to-day, "Kitchener turned on me his basilisk eye and said, 'Mr. Dillon, I know all about Ireland.' As a matter of fact, he knew nothing about Ireland.

I have heard numerous accounts from those who visited the front which prove to me that the Curragh Camp spirit still survives there among those who took part in the old attempt of the Army to defy and override Parliament or Home Rule. One of the figures who took a prominent part in that campaign is regarded still as having acted heroically, and is the idol of the old officer. But for the moment the danger from them is over. They have got their warning and they must obey. For Lloyd-George is not a man to stand any defiance of the civil authority. But the danger will revive perhaps after the war. It is more than probable that for some time at least the British Parliament will be a khaki Parliament. No man in any constituency will have a chance against a soldier with a brilliant military record. The probability is that the House of Commons will be of the purely reactionary soldier type.

STRONG LANGUAGE USED.

This is the peril which is present to the mind of Lloyd-George, and which accounts for the strong language he used, and also for the almost pathetic appeal he made for an immediate settlement of the Irish question. He does not want to expose Ireland to any chances and dangers from the Parliament after the war, and I believe he is as ready as ever he was to put his service as the disposal of any man who will try to bring the Irish feud to an end.

The dilemma in which all the parties find themselves at this moment is this: That Ireland is under coercion in the shape of Martial Law, and the resurrection of many of the old methods and many of the old men of that dead-and-gone, as it was thought—phase of Irish life. So long as that lasts, Ireland will be too irritated and too resentful to look at any proposal. But on the other hand, every Englishman, with few exceptions, wants this business brought to an end (for his sake as well as for the sake of Irishmen.) The first thing to be done is to remove quietly all the men associated with the hideous carnival in Dublin. The Ministry find it difficult to do any thing which would look like a disavowal of Maxwell or other men, who, of course, are responsible for the successful though insane methods by which the rebellion was put down. But all these men of the old day will gradually disappear. Then the Irish question will be taken up anew, I have no doubt. It is hard to foretell the issue; but with so much determination on all sides to succeed, success ought to come.

A WELSH BRIGADE.

He knew as little about Wales. When Lloyd-George made the proposal that there should be a Welsh Brigade, Kitchener obstinately refused. At that time his prestige was so high that no Ministry thought itself powerful enough to have an open quarrel with him. And Kitchener was to the end of his days imbued through and through with the pipe-clay, barrack-room spirit of the old army—a spirit of course quite inapplicable to the new army which is a nation in arms. But Lloyd-George fears no man, with the result that after the controversy had gone on for some time, Lloyd-George brought it before the Cabinet. I am told that there never was such a scene in a British Cabinet, for the fiery and fearless Welshman played around the head of Kitchener with his lightning for twenty minutes on end, and while a panic-stricken and dumb Cabinet looked on in amazement. At the end of the twenty minutes the fight was over. Lloyd-George got his Welsh Brigade.

What is the explanation of this and other extraordinary events preceding the perfectly insane methods of recruiting in Ireland? It is very simple. In spite of all the changes in the army when it was raised from a quarter of a million to five millions, the same little band of pipe-clay officials continued to hold control. Amid all this band, what I may call the Curragh Camp spirit prevailed. There were several Irishmen among them, Irishmen of course of the most bitter and narrow school of Orangeism. It was they to whom Kitchener listened, for, au fond, he was a strong Tory soldier. That spirit survives even somewhat to this day, and the remarkable words of Lloyd-George which I have quoted were intended I have no doubt by that daring spirit to be a warning to them that he at least would have none of their tricks.

VOTE OF THANKS.

To the Captains of Districts and Committees, Tag Day, from the Executive of the Board of the Children's Aid Society:

I esteem it a special favour, as well as a pleasure, to have the privilege of extending to the Captains of Districts, also committees and young girls, who so heartily co-operated and ably contributed to the financial success of the Children's Aid Tag Day, a hearty vote of thanks from the Executive Board of the Children's Aid Society. Sincerely yours,

M. D. Knox.

A TEA OF THE ALLIES

This afternoon, through the courtesy of the Turnbull Company, the ladies of the Kitchener League are holding a most delightful "Tea of the Allies" in the Tea Room on the 4th floor. Booths cleverly decorated to represent the Allied nations are in charge of the following ladies, who are in costume suitable to the country they represent:

England—Mrs. Clements.
India—Mrs. J. Knox.
Japan—Mrs. Stocker, Mrs. W. Hartley, assisted by little Miss Earnestone Macdonald.
France—Miss Perry, Mrs. Dunsford, with little Miss Dorothy Knox.
Italy—Mrs. Kimberley and Mrs. Mabee.
Russia—Mrs. Wotten.
Belgium—Mrs. Doup.

The young ladies in charge of the floor are Miss Elva Jackson, as Scotland, and Miss Vera Knox, as Ireland.

Mrs. Mabee is in charge of the Victrola kindly loaned by Mr. Greene

Children Will Be Brought To The Shelter

Mr. C. A. G. Spence and a County Police Officer Will Visit George Emery on Monday Armed With a Search Warrant

Mr. C. A. G. Spence, inspector for the Children's Aid Society, has taken out a search warrant in the case of George Emery of Belmont Township, who, on Thursday, with the aid of a gun, refused to permit Mr. Spence and Mr. Wm. Henry, both representing the Society, to remove five children to the Shelter. On Monday, accompanied by a County Police Officer, Mr. Spence will again visit Emery and demand the custody of the children who will be removed to the Shelter until such time as Emery is in a position to properly care for them. If Emery declines and offers resistance, he will be placed under arrest. As it is, Emery could be charged with a serious offence, having held up two officials of the Society with a gun. Mr. Spence believes that Emery was unaware of the enormity of the offence and for that reason is not desirous of instituting legal proceedings.

"One of the worst cases that has been brought to the notice of the Society in a long time," is the way one of the officials describes the case. Five children have been living in a tent with their parents There is not even as much as a board floor in the tent. It is difficult to imagine five young children, the oldest of whom is nine years, living in a tent at this season of the year.

REV. FATHER COTE LEFT LAST NIGHT FOR OVERSEAS DUTY

Hon. Captain the Rev. Arthur Cote was entertained at a farewell dinner by Rev. C. J. Phelan, Rector of St. Peter's, at the Cathedral Presbytery last night, prior to his departure overseas to serve as a chaplain with the Canadian forces.

The invited guests included His Lordship Bishop O'Brien and priests of neighbouring perishes. It was an informal gathering, affording his fellow priests an opportunity of felicitating Capt. Cote upon his appointment, and wishing him a bon voyage and safe return. He left on the 9 p.m. G.T.R. train for Belleville, and will report in Halifax on Monday morning. Capt. Cote is one of the five Catholic chaplains recently appointed from Ontario dioceses for overseas duty.

To-morrow in Mark Street Church

An unusually interesting Sunday is promised at Mark Street Methodist Church to-morrow. At the morning service Rev. Dr. Endicott, General Secretary of Foreign Missions for the Methodist Church of Canada and for many years a missionary to China, will be the preacher. He is considered by many the most eloquent speaker of that cause in Canadian Methodism. In the evening Mr. C. E. Weeks, B.A., of Lindsay, a prominent layman and well-known as an eloquent and forceful speaker, will deliver an address. He also will assist in the musical part of the services.

Pope's Decision Has Made An Impression

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The correspondent at Milan sends the following:

The Pope's decision to exclude all Austro-German candidates from forthcoming consistories, while showering signal favours on the church in France, has created a profound impression in ecclesiastical circles in northern Italy, where this action is widely interpreted as marking a changed trend in Benedict XV's policy.

It is pointed out that the coming elevation to the Cardinalate of three French prelates will bring the number of French Cardinals to eight, which is unprecedented in the history of the Gallican church. On the other hand Germany has only a single representative in the present College of Cardinals, in the person of the Archbishop of Cologne. This state of things is all the more remarkable in that no fewer than four Austro-Germansees usually occupied by a titular cardinal remain unrepresented.

Peterboro Cheese Men Gave Nothing Belleville $3000

Belleville Cheese Board recently realized $3,000, representing the value of one day's make of cheese from every factory for patriotic purposes. This is a rather painful contrast with the inaction of the Peterborough Cheese Board, which disposed of the remnant of a patriotic day last year and closed this season without even a suggestion of giving a day's make of cheese for the patriotic demands of this winter and next spring.

The Bondsmen Were Accepted

At a meeting of the Property Committee of the City Council, held last evening, it was recommended that Mr. John M. Gemmell and Mr. Michael Donoghue be accepted as bondsmen in connection with the contract awarded to E. K. Graham for garbage removal for 1917.

Sanitary Inspector Cooper was instructed to see that the garbage collector lives up to his contract by making the necessary collections in the centre of the city.

The matter of considering amendments to the scavenging by-law was referred to the committee of the whole Council, with a view to having a system devised that will be satisfactory and less expensive.

This is the doctor's first service in Trinity. Come and hear him. All welcome. Special music.

PROGRESSIVE CLUB'S REPORT FOR THE MONTH

The report of the Progressive Club for the past month has been given to the Examiner, and is as follows:

To the Moore Barracks Hospital, 20 bales, containing:
356 pads 6 x 7
160 pads 9 x 12.
600 compresses.
4,760 sponges.

The society has also sent a large number of magazines to Capt. Layfield and will ship another next week to Moore Barracks Hospital.

Dr. Robinson, Charlotte street, has kindly donated to the Progressive Club a colt, which will be raffled in the near future. Here is an easy way to secure a splendid horse at a small price.

MISSIONARY ANNIVERSARIES

To-morrow, missionary anniversary services are being held in the Methodist Churches throughout the city. In St. James' Church the special speakers for the day will be Mr. A. C. Weeks, of Lindsay, in the morning, and Mr. F. E. Flynn, of Belleville, in the evening.

In George Street Methodist Church Mr. T. F. Harrison, of Cobourg, will preach in the morning, and in the evening the Rev. W. S. Reid, B.A., ex-president of the Saskatchewan Conference, will preach.

UP GOES THE PRICE OF LEATHER

There have been two additional advances in the price of leather made during the last two weeks. The first raise was for twenty cents, and a week later a further boost of fifteen cents was made on the price per pound. The selling price a year ago was about 33 cents, while at the present time it is around the dollar mark. The only reason given is that the immense war orders for leather use up the most of the supply.

SERBIAN TROOPS CAPTURE 1,600 PRISONERS

BIG OFFENSIVE IS LAUNCHED BY THE RUSSIAN TROOPS

Important Gains Made By The Serbian Troops Advancing On Monastir

After Severe Fighting the Serbians Capture Polog and Iven Together With Over Sixteen Hundred Prisoners and Large Quantities of War Supplies—Russians Open Up a Big Drive—The War on All Fronts.

ROUMANIANS ARE HOLDING OUT

LONDON, November 13.—Serbians continue advance on Monastir taking one thousand six hundred prisoners. Continuing their pursuit of the retreating Bulgarian forces, which were driven out of Polog in the Cerna front fighting, Serbian troops have captured Iven, north of Polog. The fighting in this sector has been continuous night and day, the official statement which told of Iven's capture said. Bulgarians, time after time, attacked and gained temporary advantage which they failed, however, to maintain.

Fighting was particularly fierce along the Monastir-Florina Railway.

HEAVY FIGHTING CONTINUES ON ALL BATTLEFRONTS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 13.—Russians, Roumanians, French and Serbians are continuing their hammering against the lines of the Central Powers on every eastern and southeastern front to-day.

At some points the Germans and Austrians are attacking fiercely, but according to advices from all the capitals, the larger successes are being won by the arms of the Entente Allies.

French troops are to-day co-ordinating the trenches and positions they wrested from the Germans yesterday at Sailly Saillisel on the west front, at which point sporadic German attempts to recapture the positions are going on with increasing intensity.

A comparative lull maintains on other sections of the western front.

The fighting about Cernavoda for possession of the great Danube span that forms the longest bridge in Europe, continues.

Bulgars, reinforced after Friday's Serbo-French successes on the Cerna front, apparently have failed to stem the advance.

Killing the Calves—All sorts of excuses are offered for the high price of beef, the most plausible being the alleged demand for veal—"the killing of calves which should be allowed to grow into regular beef." You cannot have beef if you eat it as "veal," but you can have Shredded Wheat Biscuit which contains more real nutriment than beef and costs much less. Shredded wheat biscuit is the whole wheat steam-cooked, shredded and baked. Make it your "meat" for ten days and see how much better you feel. "CREPE ON DOORS OF HELL TO-DAY," IS BILLY'S MESSAGE

Evangelist Wires to Friends in Michigan—Bryan Also.

DETROIT, Nov. 9.—In response to telegrams from friends here advising him that Michigan had gone into the prohibition column, Evangelist Billy Sunday, from his home at Winona, Lake Indiana, sent the following typical message in reply to-day:

"I am overjoyed with the result. Couldn't sleep much last night thinking about dear old Michigan. She certainly did hit the booze crowd a solar plexus blow. I am sure there is crepe on the doors of hell to-day—praise God from whom all blessings flow.

(Signed) "W. A. SUNDAY."

A telegram also came to the "dry" headquarters today from William Jennings Bryan at Lincoln, Neb. He wires:

"Michigan has done splendidly; accept congratulations. With Montana, South Dakota, Utah, Florida, and Alaska also adopting prohibition we now have 24 states and out territory dry."

CARING FOR DISABLED.

Over 2,000 Soldiers Being Attended by Military Hospitals Commission.

At the beginning of this month 2,081 disabled Canadian soldiers were under the care of the Military Hospitals Commission, according to statistics issued from headquarters at Ottawa.

Of this number 426 were at sanatoria for tuberculosis, 1,628 at convalescent hospitals (622 of the latter being out-patients), while 30 members of the force were in asylums for the insane. Of the 426 cases of tuberculosis almost half were discovered in time to prevent them leaving for overseas.

Up to October 5 the number of soldiers sent back to Canada because of medical unfitness was 6,208. Of these, 961 were suffering from wounds shell shock or the effect of gas; 122 were insane; 245 were afflicted with tuberculosis; while the remainder, 4,880, were suffering from other diseases and disabilities.

CANADIAN NICKEL IN DEUTSCHLAND'S HOLD

And More Stowed Away for the Next Submarine—Was Bought in 1914 and Came From Sudbury—U. S. Officials Conceal Ship's Manifesto—Willehad Wireless Not Really Sealed.

LIVELY EFFORT TO HIDE IT

PROVIDENCE, R. I., November 13.—The Providence Journal says:

The German submarine Deutschland is now ready for sea, or can be made ready at an hour's notice. Every possible precaution has been taken to prevent the knowledge of the contents of her cargo becoming public property. The Journal, however, has received all details concerning this cargo. It consists of nine carloads of nickel, averaging forty tons to a car, and ten carloads of crude rubber, averaging eighteen tons to a car, making a total shipment of five hundred and forty tons.

In addition to this material the Deutschland now has in her hold three carloads of a chemical known as chromium and one carload of vanadium, both used in the process of hardening steel.

MORE OF IT IS HELD FOR NEXT SUBMARINE.

There still remains in the warehouses of the Eastern Forwarding Company of New London a consignment of over four hundred tons of crude rubber and two hundred tons of refined nickel, which is apparently stored for export by another submarine.

All the nickel aboard the Deutschland is part of a large consignment which was purchased in November, 1914, from the International Nickel Company at Communipaw, N.J. The Journal discovers that this consignment was taken by the purchasers, ostensibly German-Americans, but really men acting for Dr. Heinrich Albert, Fiscal Agent of the German Government in this country, and transported to the storehouses of Nassau Smelting & Refining Company, foot of West 29th, North River, New York.

LIVELY EFFORT TO HIDE IT.

The nickel was then transferred at various times to the New York Dock Company in Brooklyn, where it was stored in warehouse No. 104, and placed in casks weighing from nine hundred to fourteen hundred pounds. The metal was partially in ingots, and largely in the form of about the size of buckshot.

Just before the arrival of the Deutschland last July the parties supposed to the controlling this nickel became active, and every effort was made to cover up the source of supply by a series of rapid shipments to various points. The last of the shipments took the consignment intended for the Deutschland at Baltimore to Pittsburg over the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. The cars containing this nickel remained in the yards at Pittsburg for four days, and were then re-shipped to Baltimore, being ultimately shipped to the docks of the Eastern Forwarding Company in that city.

KNEW PORT TO WHICH DEUTSCHLAND HEADED.

The next movement of the nickel which remained after the first departure of the Deutschland came in the beginning of last September, and soon afterwards a number of carlots were received by the Eastern Forwarding Company in New London. Two of the cars arrived in New London on September 14th, one on the fifteenth, and four on the eighteenth.

On September 25th two cars containing both nickel and rubber reached New London, and these were followed on September 29th by another containing both nickel and rubber. On October 11 another car containing nickel was received, and during the next eight days twenty-nine cars of rubber, three cars of chromium, and one car of vanadium were received.

NICKEL AND COPPER COMPANIES.

All this freight was transferred immediately on arrival, over a spur track, to the warehouses of the Eastern Forwarding Company on the State Pier at New London. It was unloaded by employees of the company.

Immediately after being placed in its warehouses, the nickel was transferred from casks to shot bags, in which form it has been placed aboard the Deutschland for its approaching voyage.

A large quantity of nickel which reached the New London docks in ingots is still stored in the warehouses there. The metal, which was purchased from the International Nickel Company, reached that corporation from Sudbury, Canada, through the Canadian Copper Co.

U. S. AUTHORITIES EASY, SEALED WIRELESS WORKS.

Every previous effort that has been made to ascertain the facts concerning the cargo of the Deutschland has failed. The Journal's request to the Treasury Department for this information was referred to the State Department, which ruled that the publication of manifests is purely an international matter without international character, and the Treasury Department was free to do as it saw fit, whereupon the Treasury Department ordered the suppression of the manifest.

Treasury officials have stated to the Journal that the manifests of these submarines would never be made public. Representatives of the Journal have been aboard the steamship Willehad during the past week. They report feverish activity in the effort to load the Deutschland in the shortest possible time, and every indication that, for some reason, she is to leave port at the earliest moment.

TRICKED UNITED STATES CENSOR.

It has also been ascertained that since the arrival of the Willehad at New London, although naval officers and Government inspectors sealed that vessel's wireless apparatus, the captain of the Willehad has sent messages over his wireless to sea several times within the past few weeks. The part of the apparatus known as the "machine" was sent to New York several weeks ago by the captain of the Willehad, ostensibly for repairs, but really in order to throw United States naval officers off the trick and to make it apparent that her wireless could not be operated until the return of this machine.

As a matter of fact, the wireless operators of the Willehad have rigged up temporary instruments, which can send, through they cannot receive. On both Wednesday and Thursday nights of the last week such messages have been sent from the Willehad through this temporary apparatus to some unknown vessels off Fisher's Island and Long Island Sound.

A SAVINGS BANK FOR SOLDIERS' FAMILIES

Soldiers' Wives' League Will Open Headquarters at 281 Wellington Street—Big Meeting Yesterday.

OTTAWA, Nov. 9.—A savings bank branch, where even the smallest amount may be deposited, is about to be opened at 281 Wellington street by the Soldiers' Wives' League, and entirely for the accommodation and benefit of the families of soldiers. Here, too, club rooms will be comfortably equipped and the wives and mothers of soldiers will always be made welcome. Every day an officer's wife will be in charge, and an information bureau, on a small scale, also registry office, will be conducted. The League will act as a medium between the women and the bank. Many of these women are reticent about entering these large financial buildings, and besides, their savings to them seem too small for consideration from a banking institution. However, difficulties will be overcome by this new scheme. The Bank of British North America will be at the service of the League and every depositor will be provided with a bank book.

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Mrs. Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations the throat and bronchial tubes.

TOMATO SHORTAGE IN THE U. S.

New York, November 10. — If the reports from southern commissioners are true, there is scarcely anything left at the canneries in the way of tomatoes, for although the domestic trade has not been buying extensively in the last few days, Canadian buyers have been in the market and have taken about all that was left. Most of the business has been at $1.35.

VOTING THRILLS WOMEN

Jane Addams and Others Call It an Impressive Experience.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.— Characterizing their experience as "impressive" and "thrilling," the women of the city to-day, for the first time, voted for President of the United States.

Governor and Mrs. Dunne, with their daughter, Miss Mona Dunne, went early to a polling place, where Miss Dunne marked her first political ballot of any kind and Mrs. Dunne her first ballot for the Presidency. Mrs. Dunne and her daughter were in the booth less than a minute. The Governor took considerably more time in marking his ballot.

It was Miss Harriet E. Vittum's first opportunity to cast her vote for the Presidency, and she cast it for Hughes.

"I never felt my responsibility as a citizen more than when I cast that ballot," said Miss Vittum. "The act of voting for President makes women as never before an actual part of their country."

"It was indeed a thrilling and impressive experience to be voting for President," said Miss Jane Addams after she had cast her vote for President Wilson. "I believe that every voting woman in Chicago is feeling moved and thrilled by the experience, which is one of deep significance."

According to declarations of Mrs. Raymond Robins as she cast her ballot for Hughes the vote of the women will show to politicians of other States the keen interest women are taking in politics, and will prompt them to aid in the passage of such legislation in their own States.

CANADIAN REVENUE UP

Increase of About Four Millions in Past Month.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 10.—Canadian Revenue in October shows another large increase. The total was $18,158,128, as against $14,440,338 a year ago. Seven months of the fiscal year produced $121,747,808, compared with $87,863,848 during the same period of 1915. War expenditures in seven months aggregated $127,478,147 and are now running at the rate of $24,000,000 a month. The total net debt on October 31st was $696,778,516. A year ago it amounted to $492,538,472.

SUFFERED WITH BACK FOR TEN YEARS

Women are the greatest sufferers from weak, lame and aching backs, owing to the continual stooping, bending and lifting so necessary to perform their household duties.

The cause of the backache comes from some derangement of the kidneys, for were there not something wrong with the kidneys the back would be strong and well, and without a pain or an ache.

Doan's Kidney Pills will take out all the stitches, twitches and twinges, limber up the stiff back, and give perfect relief and comfort to all poor, weak backed, suffering women.

Mrs. Chas. Thibeau, Church Point, N.S., writes: "For ten years I suffered with my back, and was so weak I could not do my washing or any hard work, just a little around the house. One day a friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and they helped me so much that after I had taken two boxes I could do my washing and since then I have been in perfect health.

Doan's Pills are the original kidney pills. Do not accept any substitute put up under similar names. See that you get the oblong grey box, the trade mark a "Maple Leaf."

Price 50c, or three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Specify "Doan's" if ordering direct.

Business Methods Have Made the French Army a Well-Oiled War Machine

Just behind the firing line the business and the industry of war are being carried on by France with an earnestness and thoroughness that no one can imagine who has not seen the various French army service at work. This war is a vast business enterprise. The Germans invented it and the French have had to copy it.

France had everything to improvise since the war began but now her war machine is perfect, complete and well oiled in every part. It has been built, put together and set army men as by business men. army men as by busines men.

For instance, military stations just behind the Somme front, which have been created from nothing for the purpose of the Somme offensive were entirely built, not by soldiers, but by plain business men with practical experience of large commercial enterprises in peace time.

And the mere business than has carried the job through efficiently and quicker where official enterprise would have succeeded less well or would have taken twice the time to do the work.

In every branch of war work just behind the front the intelligent professional or business man of peace time is the man who has forged for the French army the weapons of victory.

On the railways, in transport, in supplies, in aviation, in big guns, the man who has been invaluable is the professional business Frenchman, who was mobilized as a reserve lieutenant or captain when the war broke out.

Trains lorries, ammunition parks, aviation organizations, are managed by young officers who were architects, engineers, bank clerks, artists, before the war.

Behind The Lines.

Behind the lines, the French army on the Somme resembles nothing so much as the switch yards and freight terminals of a great American city. But instead of railway men exclusively one meets soldiers, young and middle-aged, of all walks of society, who were before the war clerks, lawyers, bankers, artists, tradesmen, sculptors and even actors. I met yesterday morning at the head of a great lorry Forrain and Abel Trudet, the famous caricaturists, and Guirand de Scebola, the well known romantic painter.

The great lorries in columns of twenty and thirty, jolted along laden with shells. The traffic is thick as that on Broadway. The congestion seems inextracable. But in this tremendously and magnificently organized business of war there was no confusion. All was organized enthusiasm and a supreme confidence.

As fast as the army advances, the French, with incredible rapidity, built railroads and side tracks to carry munitions to the front. This is the more necessary as heavier and heavier shells are used all the time.

Shrapnel and shells of ordinary calibre are useless against an enemy entrenched behind concrete and sand and protected by dugouts sometimes 30 feet below the surface.

Great Guns Forgea.

But guns of the largest calibre have been forged and all the munition works of the world are turning out shells weighing three, four and five hundred pounds each. These literally destroy the earth over the heads of the German army. The twenty-five miles or so of high road between Amiens and the front is literally one long stream of motor lorries bringing ammunition and supplies to the front and returning to fetch more.

The ammunition teaches this front from all parts of France and from the United States incessantly loaded on the light railway trains and incessantly sent on to the big guns.

A joyous elderly artillery captain, who speaks English so well that he sometimes speaks English by mistake to his own men, now commands the station after spending eighteen months fighting at the front. It is good to hear and see his enthusiasm and to be shown by him every new trick in gunnery and ammunition that is invented by the French almost daily.

Wandering about the station, in and out of shells stacked up in millions, one suddenly comes across a group of German prisoners.

French Dominant in Air.

In aviation the Germans have ceased to count on this front. In number the French now have perhaps five times as many aeroplanes as the Germans. This superiority has made it practically impossible for German aviators to venture over the French lines, because French machines so speedily concentrate on an attack.

The French have invented methods of photoraphy, the efficacy of which is marvellous. "Don't the Germans do the same?" I asked.

"No," said a young captain of a French aviation camp, "we now outnumber them so that they do not dare to cross our lines."

In August fifty German aeroplanes were brought down by the French attacking squadron.

These new attacking machines invented by the French have extraordinary speed. They carry one pilot and two machine gunners. Some of them have lost a gunner, killed, but they have not yet lost one of these new marvellously swift machines.

There are three kinds of aviation service, each entirely different from the other. The attacking aeroplane squadrons are the daredevils and adventurers of the air. Second come the infantry aeroplanes, used as scouts, leading an attack and hovering over the soldiers as they leave the trenches for the attack, and from minute to minute sending down information.

"Eye of the Army."

The aviation photographic service, the third department, is the real eye of the army. It is this service which, by means of photographs, keeps the fighting line informed from hour to hour of the German positions.

Think what this new service means. An aeroplane flies out at 10 a.m. over the German trenches. At 10.20 a.m. maps reproducing the exact plan of the trenches are made. The method is so perfect now that twenty minutes is all that is required.

The aviator carries special cameras. In five minutes, if he has had practice enough, he has taken the photographs he wants and goes back to camp. The photographs are developed quickly by electricity. The lines of trenches are reproduced on a map. The map is printed by hand to the requisite number of copies. In a quarter of an hour copies reach the commanding officer concerned.

There is nothing like this aviation camp in the world, and it has all been created since the beginning of the war.

"Thanks to one of these photographs," said the aviator captain, "we took the Souville trench. 900 yards, losing only five killed and 25 wounded. This is the result of making business of war.

The fighting aviators are wild young chaps who in the intervals of risking their lives like heroes, amuse themselves furiously. There is nothing to be done with them when off duty and everybody gives them leeway.

Fly Quite Low.

The infantry aviators who watch an attack and report step by step the advances and the obstacles to be met, are steadier, more methodical than the attacking chaps of the air squadron. They fly quite over the foot troops as the latter advance, and often go down to less than two hundred yards from the ground. The information they send down gives the commanding officers assurance and confidence which could be equalled by no other means.

Thanks to the absence of German aeroplanes in sufficient numbers on the Somme, the French now peacefully pile up stacks of ammunition in open fields, and have ceased bothering even to hide them.

A few miles from the firing line artillery and ammunition are now absolutely safe. If a German aeroplane could come over, it could in a few minutes give information to the German artillery which would paly havoc behind the French lines. But on the Somme at least the Germans are obliged to fire blindly. They fire over and over again at the same place upon which their guns have been trained but they no longer have air scouts to direct their fire. So the French are now working their great war machines in almost perfect security.

Moreover in the amount of ammunition apparently available the French are firing at least ten times as many large pieces as the Germans. The methodical slow advance of the French battle fronts must continue as long as this disparity exists.

SELECT MEDICINE CAREFULLY

Purgatives are dangerous. They gripe, cause burning pains and make the constipated condition worse. Physicians say the most ideal laxative is Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Buchu Nut; they are exceedingly mild composed only of health-giving vegetable extracts. Dr. Hamilton's Pills restore activity to the bowels, strengthen the stomach and purify the blood. For constipation, sick headache, biliousness, and disordered digestion, no medicine on earth makes such remarkable cures as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Try a 25c box yourself.

U. S. PRESS COMMENT ON THE ELECTIONS

Boston Evening Traveler: It was not enough for republicans to meet the issue, belatedly as they did, with the assertion that Hughes, if elected, would keep the nation out of war and regain the nation's self-respect while doing so.

Los Angeles (Cal.) Express:—We believe that Mr. Wilson's re-election in great degree is to be attributed to the horror and detestation the American people feel toward war. That is not merely academic conscious ness but a deep rooted sense of abhorrence that found expression at the polls.

Baltimore Evening Sun:—Whether the President has been re-elected, as now seems likely, or whether he is beaten by a narrow margin, Woodrow Wilson has achieved one of the most remarkable personal triumphs in all the history of American politics.

Cincinnati Free Press:—Our Eastern States, the industrial districts, considered the future as the deciding factor, while the farmer in the West felt satisfied with the present and the high prices paid him for his products as the result of the immense export.

Cincinnati Volksblatt:—High prices for wheat and hogs were to the advantage of Wilson and may secure election for him. This would appear to introduce the new feature in American politics that principles of ethics and economy no longer determine the political activity of the people, but that the hog is the great deciding factor.

Atlanta Constitution:—"Whichever way the final count proves the Presidential election to have gone, the national voting has developed this fact, and unmistakable, that the old traditional dependence of the South upon New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, the vice versa, to procure national democratic success has been broken up."

New York World:—If New York is ever again to be a great democratic city, it must have a democratic organization that can command the support and confidence of the democratic rank and file. The democratic party cannot live in New York if it is to be obtained to a body of death—and Tammany is dead.

New York World:—To elect a President without the sordid assistance of New York and the hardly less sordid assistance of Illinois would be a double triumph. Even to lose the Presidency by a small margin in such circumstance as would be a moral victory that Mr Wilson could always remember with pride.

New York Times:—It is not impossible that disputes may arise and contests be begun that for some time will keep the country in doubt as to which candidate has been elected President.

Further Advances In Grocery Prices

All Dried Fruits Are Dearer—U. S. Canned Goods Imported

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer this week

The past week in the grocery markets has been one of generally steady and upward tendencies. Manitoba flour has advanced 20c per barrel and feeds $2 per ton. Sugar advanced 2c per hundred to Ontario points due to increased freight rates. Butter is up one cent per pound and cheese advanced 1-2c. Eggs in the best grades are generally firmer owing to their increasing scarcity. Live and dressed hogs and poultry are two exceptions in which there have been declines. Both live and dressed hogs are down, the amount of decline in former being 45c and in latter 50c per hundred. Chickens and hens have been coming to the market in such numbers that commission men have been forced to reduce the prices being paid by 1c per pound in order to try and slacken up the supply. Farmers object strenuously to feeding poultry with present high cost feeds.

All dried fruits are dearer. New prices have been named on seeded raisins and these are 1c pound higher than former quotations of California Association before prices were withdrawn. Prunes, peaches and apricots are all firmer in price, with advances recorded in some instances. Tapioca continues in a firm market with possibility of still higher prices. Teas have advanced in the primary market in London and there is a generally firmer tendency for future teas. Beans are firm and advancing. Canned goods in some instances have recorded advances. Potatoes have advanced in price.

Reports from Quebec province indicate that business continues brisk. The principal increases in foodstuffs during the week have been in the provision line. Fruit and vegetables have also moved towards higher levels. There is a good demand for canned goods despite the high prices. Some wholesalers have fairly good stocks of last year's packed canned goods. In a few cases canners have bought back goods from the wholesalers at enhanced prices in order to fulfill contract obligations. Considerable quantities of American canned goods have also been brought into Canada, and include mostly tomatoes, corn and peas. American canners have been advanced slightly in price during the week. Beans are firm and higher prices are expected. The French embargo on walnuts has raised and supplies can come forward for the Christmas trade.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearances, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

GERMAN WAR LOAN FABLE.

Story Which Gave Rise to the Potsdam Plate Contribution Tale.

Just a column on the front page is devoted by the Kolnische Zeitung to an interesting fable concerning a certain Herr Shirker, who would not help to bring up bricks and timber when his Fatherland was threatened by a gap in a dam.

When the work was finished and the dam repaired, and "at last the high tide was over and the sun was shining again on the fields covered with flowers and fruit," the neighbours who helped to repair the dam could only express disgust by spitting when they met Herr Shirker, who had refused to work even when offered an excellent reward.

This is one of the hundreds of heart-rending appeals which are flooding the press to Herr Shirkers who refuse to fill the gap in Germany's financial sea wall by contributing to the war loan.

Side by side with the war loan there is running a scheme for voluntary gold collection, to which the Imperial family have just given a fillip by contributing gold plate from Potsdam. The Empress has ordered all the gold plate and other articles which can be replaced by less precious material, and which have no "historical or art value," to be handed over. Many objects of a more personal nature belonging to members of the Imperial family have also been given. The Frankfurter Zeitung hopes that this excellent example will be followed by the other German courts. — London Chronicle.

LINDSAY, Nov. 11.—A big mogul engine left the track at the C.P.R. station. The engine, which was hauling a big string of cars, did not "take the frog" at the switch, with the result that the engine left the rails, the tender, however, remaining on the track.

The cars completely blocked the traffic to the east ward, and also delayed the 3.30 train for Toronto for about two hours, when an engine arrived from the main line to remove them. Two engines were required to haul the derailed one back on the track, which was done without much difficulty. The damage done was slight. The cow catcher of the engine was twisted and a couple of rails were badly bent.

Severe Headaches And Pains in the Back

Resulted From Deranged Kidneys and Constipation of the Bowels

It is in vain to try to regulate and restore the healthful action of the kidneys until the liver and bowels are set right.

And just here is where so many kidney medicines fail. Kidney derangements almost invariably begin with constipation and torpidity of the liver. The whole work of filtering the blood is thrown on the kidneys, and in time they fail to stand the strain. The poison in the system gives rise to severe headaches, pains in the back and tired, depressed feelings.

Because they act directly on the liver and bowels, as well as on the kidneys, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are eminently successful in the treatment of kidney derangements.

Mr. William Loney, Marysville, N. B., writes:—"I am glad to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to anybody who is suffering from kidney trouble or constipation. I suffered for a long time from kidney disease and pains in the back, but have found that by using one pill a week the kidneys and bowels are kept in good order, and I do not have any more pains in the back or head like I used to have. I was also a great sufferer from piles, and could get no relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. This ailment is entirely cured now, and we always keep both the pills and the ointment in the house for use when they are needed."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. F. Saunders, Town Marshal, who writes that Mr. Loney's letter is true and correct.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Remember that imitations only disappoint. The genuine bear the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt oBok author.

HEAD MUST RULE MEMBERS OF BODY

Christ the Great Head of His Church.

Inharmony in Human Body Unless Head and Members Are in Unison —The Head the Controlling Power—So Should It Be in the Body of Christ—Members That Will Not Respond to the Head Will Be Cut Off — Closing Thoughts.

[This matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Pastor Russell prepared the following sermon, taking as his text Hebrews 12: 25: "See that ye refuse not Him that speaketh; for if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape if we turn away from Him that speaketh from Heaven." The Pastor wrote:

These words are not addressed to the world, but to the members of the Body of Christ, those who have left the world and entered into covenant relationship with God. The Apostle has just been describing the scenes enacted at Mount Sinai, when God by His angel spoke to His typical people Israel. He then declares that if sore punishment came to all in Israel who disobeyed the voice which then gave them commandments, much sorer shall be the punishment of those Spiritual Israelites of the Gospel Age who, after having come into vital relationship with the Son of God as members of His mystical Body, shall then refuse to hear and obey.

In order to have harmony in the human body each member must respond promptly to the dictates of the head. Suppose that my hand were afflicted with St. Vitus Dance, so that when my brain instructed the hand to lift a glass of water that I might drink, the hand would twitch, tremble, suddenly throw the glass over my shoulder, and spill the contents. What would be the trouble with my hand? It was a sick member; the connection between it and my head was interrupted; and thus the hand refused to obey the mandates of the head. Or suppose that my limb were paralyzed; and that when my head directed it to move, it would remain motionless and refuse to carry my body. The connection between this member and the brain had become interrupted, and the message from the head was not received. What confusion and trouble would thus be caused in my body!

Thus it is with the Body of Christ. If any member of that Body become spiritually sick, if the perfect harmony between the Head, Christ Jesus, and any member be interrupted, there will be trouble and distress throughout the entire Body. If the connection become altogether destroyed, the member is thence forth useless, and is cut off from the Body. Our Lord pictures this matter when He called Himself the Vine and the members of His mystical Body the branches, and declared that every branch in Him that failed to bear fruit would be cut off.—John 15: 1-6.

The Head the Most Important Member.

What carefulness this thought should inspire in each member of Christ. We should realize that of ourselves we are nothing. We are only the humble instruments that God is using in the outworking of His wonderful Plan. Not one of us is at all necessary to His purposes. It is a very great favor that the Father permits us to co-operate in His great work under the Headship of His Son Jesus Christ. God formed the Plan, and is carrying it out according to His own purpose. Our Lord Jesus is the important factor in the accomplishment of God's designs. We are invited in, not to be rulers, but to follow instructions, to be obedient. The greatest blessing which we can have is to be permitted to co-operate with our great Head, who under Jehovah, the great Head over all, is guiding the work.

Through experience and observation the thought has impressed itself that there may be a considerable number cut off from membership in the Body of Christ, and not only so, but cut off from all hope of future life. There can be no place, now or ever, in God's family for one who is wilful and refractory, one who will not be guided by the Lord, one who wants his own way and who thus refuses Him that speaks from Heaven.

In Hebrews 10: 28, 29 the Apostle declares that those who disobeyed Moses "died without mercy." Then he speaks of those who will receive a much "sorer punishment." Israel being a typical people, the death penalty visited upon them for certain offenses was only a type of the death penalty to be visited upon those of Spiritual Israel who wilfully disobey the voice of God speaking to us through His Son. The penalty suffered by refractory members of Natural Israel was but a temporary one; for during the Millennial Age they will be awakened and have the opportunity, with all the remainder of the world, of accepting Christ and coming under the terms of the New Covenant, then operative. But those who during the present age have been enlightened and begotten of God's Holy Spirit, shall, if they fall away—renounce allegiance to Christ—come under the penalty of the Second Death—total annihilation.

This, then, is the "sorer punishment" to which the Apostle refers. This penalty of death without any hope of recovery will be inflicted also upon those of the world at large who, during their time of trial in the next Age, shall wilfully disobey the voice of God speaking through the great Mediator of the New Covenant—The Christ, Head and Body.

Evil Effect of Rejecting Light.

The Apostle's argument is, Look back, brethren, to the history of Israel in the past. See how from time to time they were negligent of the messages which God sent to them at the mouth of angels and of Moses, the servant of God; and how disasters often came upon them for their disobedience and neglect, many of them even suffering the death penalty. If the penalty was so severe for negligence under the Law given through Moses, what would be the result of neglecting and of doing despite to the words of Him who now speaks from Heaven, of counting the blood of the Covenant by which we have been sanctified an unholy thing, a common thing, and of doing despite to the Spirit of grace?—Hebrews 6: 4-8; 10: 26-31.

There are some who have never made a full consecration of themselves, who have never enlisted upon the Lord's side, and yet have had considerable knowledge of the Truth. They have heard the true Gospel Message; they have felt its power, its reasonableness; they have realized in their hearts that it was God's Message. They have felt a certain measure of drawing toward it. Yet for some reason these have turned away from the Heavenly Voice. These are not the class addressed by the Apostle in our text, however; for like all of the Apostolic Epistles, that to the Hebrews is addressed to the "holy brethren" (Chapter 3:11), "the saints."

But all who have heard the Gospel Message with a measure of understanding and appreciation have thereby some responsibility concerning it. To turn away from any degree of light brings a hardening of the heart. It would seem that whoever has rejected the Message after a measure of understanding of its import would never again be drawn to it in the same degree as before. The Message would not seem so wonderful as at first. Whoever gets a glimpse beyond into the future, whoever hears now of the goodness of God and is not melted by the thought of his own imperfection and his need of a Saviour, may never accept God's favor, even during the next Age, when the opportunity for Restitution is opened to all mankind. This is a thought which all who hear will do well to consider.

No one becomes fully responsible, however, until he has entered into the spirit-begotten condition, for no one can be tried for eternal life until first he has gotten free from the Adamic death sentence. The first death sentence must be removed before anybody can be put on trial for death again. Thus we see the wonderful mercy of God in providing that those who would come now into Christ are not put on trial from the moment when they hear about Christ, when they learn that there is a door of return to God open now to all who will comply with certain conditions.

Christ Suffering in the Flesh.

Whoever endeavors to draw near to God will find that every step nearer will bring him a blessing; for he is going in the right way—toward justification by faith. But he has not yet come into full trial, full testing. As he continues to draw nearer, learning more and more about God, cleansing himself more and more from the natural filthiness of the flesh resulting from the Adamic fall, he finally comes to the parting of the ways. He finds that he cannot go forward unless he makes a full consecration of himself to God. He learns that he can have no standing with God unless our Redeemer Himself accept him and present him to God; and that our Lord Jesus will not accept any one who does not give himself fully and unreservedly to the Father through the Son.

So he has reached the point of decision. Whoever reaches this place and then gives himself unreservedly is accepted of the Lord Jesus, in harmony with the Father's Plan. Immediately after He has accepted the one presenting himself in consecration, He imputes of the merit of His sacrificial death to the one offering himself and counts that one as His flesh. Then the Father also accepts that flesh, and begets the person to a new, spiritual nature. Thus the flesh of Christ has been in process of being offered in sacrifice throughout this Gospel Age. First, our Lord Jesus offered His own flesh. Then, when He had finished that work, He appeared in the presence of God and made satisfaction for the sins of all who would follow in His steps—the Church.—Hebrews 9:24.

As soon as our Lord had made satisfaction for His followers, the Father immediately accepted their sacrifices, as was indicated by His giving them the Holy Spirit at Pentecost. So all other believers throughout this Age have received the begetting of the Holy Spirit as soon as the Father had accepted them through the great Advocate of the Church. The flesh of these consecrated ones having been counted as the flesh of Jesus (Acts 9: 4, 5), Christ has been suffering in the flesh all down the Age. Thus we perceive the fulfilment of the Scripture which declares that we are filling up "that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ."—Colossians 1:24.

Various Scriptures tell us that now is the time for suffering with Christ, and that afterward will come the time for sharing His glory. St. Peter says that the Prophets of old spoke of the sufferings of Christ—Jesus the Head, and all the members of the Body—and of the glory to follow. That glory will follow promptly just as soon as the sufferings are accomplished. Whoever shares in the sufferings now will also share in the coming blessings of glory, honor, and immortality—the Divine nature.—1 Peter 1: 10-13; 4 Timothy 2: 11, 12; Romans 8: 17; 2 Peter 1:4; 1 John 3: 1, 2.

Phases of the Body of Christ.

The Lord Jesus counts the flesh of His Body members as His flesh. So we now have before our minds the thought that the human bodies of the Church as constituting a part of our Lord's flesh, in the larger sense. Then there is the present spiritual Body of Christ, composed of the spirit-begotten new nature of the New Creatures in the Christ Company dwelling in these earthly tabernacles and seeking to bring them to the sacrificial point in every respect day by day. Then there is also the thought of the glorified Body of Christ, to be composed of the "more than conquerors" only, after the two companies shall have been eliminated who have failed to make their calling and election sure.

The Scriptures inform us that those who compose the Body of Christ in the flesh will finally be divided into three classes, after the testings and provings have been applied by our Lord. The first class will constitute the Body of Christ in glory, the "more than conquerors" mentioned by St. Paul in Romans 8: 37. The second class will be composed of those who have not been wholly faithful to the covenant of sacrifice which they made with the Lord, and who must consequently lose their places in the Body. Later, these will come up out of the great tribulation with which this Age will close, and will make their robes white in the blood of the Lamb. Then they will stand before the Throne, with palm branches in their hands, instead of sitting on the Throne, wearing crowns. (Revelation 7: 9-17; 3:21; 20: 4, 6; 3: 10.) The third class will be composed of those who repudiate their covenant with God, and who therefore will suffer the penalty of the Second Death.

During the Gospel Age God deals only with those who constitute these classes. He does not receive anyone who has not come to the point of full consecration for it is the New Creature, not the flesh, that is on trial for life or death. Whoever becomes a New Creature bears the voice of God in a special sense; for the spirit-begotten class receive, as it were, a new hearing and a new sight, so that as New Creatures they can understand spiritual things, can hear and see as never before.—1 Corinthians 2:14.

Sanctified Through the Truth.

It is very important that all of the spirit-begotten keep their hearts so loyal, and their walk in life so consistent, that they shall be of the Body of Christ in glory. To this class our Lord still speaks; and it is for each of them to see that he refuse not anything that the Head says to His Church. The will of the Head is to be done in the Body.

In His last prayer with His disciples our Lord prayed for them: "Sanctify them through Thy Truth: Thy Word is Truth." (John 17: 17.) We cannot be sanctified with-

HER HOME NO LONGER CHILDLESS

Operation not Necessary after Taking the Great Medicine for Women.

Miller's Falls, Mass.—"Doctors said I had displacement very badly and I would have to have an operation. I had a soreness in both sides and a pulling sensation in my right side. I could not do much work the pain was so bad. I was also troubled with irregularity and other weaknesses. My blood was poor. We had been married four years and had no children.

After using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier I became well and strong and was saved from the operation. We are now the parents of a big baby girl and I praise your remedies to others and give you permission to publish my letter."—Mrs. JOSEPH GUILBAULT, Jr., Bridge Street, Miller's Falls, Mass.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is famous for restoring women to normal health and strength. When this is done wives no longer despair of having children.

A woman should be reluctant to submit to a surgical operation until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. If you have a case that needs special advice, write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

Human Tissues in Vitro" (in glass jars), which appears in the current issue of the Journal of Experimental Medicine, published by the Rockfeller Institute for Medical Research. He refers to the earlier experiments in tissue cultivation carried on by Dr. Alexis Carrel, Mr. M. T. Burrows, himself and others, the majority of which have been described in The Times.

These earlier experiments were not as successful as could be desired, Dr. Lambert points out, owing to the difficulty in hitting upon the right culture medium. In nearly every case the fibrin in the blood plasma which was used as a medium would liquefy, and when the new cells wandered out from the tissue they would not find any framework upon which to build. Consequently, the tissue would die.

Two experimenters, Dr. J. R. Losee and Dr. A. H. Ebeling, added a fluid called Ringer's solution, and, also taking a hint from Dr. Carrel, added some tissue extracts to the plasma. This mixture delayed the digestion of the fibrin in the plasma, and, by making transfers of human tissue to fresh plasma every day or two, they were able in one case to propagate it as long as sixty days. They emphasized the shortcomings of their technique, however, and stated that they experienced many failures, which they attributed to the early liquefaction of the culture medium. It is this drawback that Dr. Lambert has overcome. Here is a part of his report:

"It may be noted that it is not the ability of human tissue to digest fibrin, but rather the susceptibility of human fibrin to digestion which is the basis of the trouble, for we found that human tissue did not liquefy the fibrin of foreign plasmas, while it was observed that human fibrin was readily digested by the ferments of practically every foreign tissue.

"It was noted that fowl and pigeon plasma were never liquefied except in the presence of particular types of bacteria. Since earlier experiments had shown that tissues from certain parts of the lower animals could be cultivated in plasma from foreign species, it occurred to us that this property of fowl and pigeon plasma to resist digestion might be utilized in growing human tissues.

"It seemed possible that chick fibrin might be made to serve as the framework of the culture medium with human serum or plasma added to supply the necessary nutritive substances. A medium was therefore prepared by mixing a small quantity of chick plasma with a considerably larger quantity of human serum. Various human tissues (lymph gland, spleen, skin, etc.,) obtained at operation were put up in this mixed medium. No liquefaction was observed, and active progressive growth was seen in the majority, of the preparations where soft friable tissue was used.

These are two of Dr. Lambert's conclusions:

"1. Unmodified human plasma is not a satisfactory culture medium for human tissues owing to the susceptibility of human fibrin to digestion by tissue ferments. The necessary framework is thus destroyed before the cells begin to migrate. The difficulty can be overcome by adding to human plasma or serum a small quantity of fowl or pigeon plasma, the fibrin of which is highly resistant to digestion. Human tissues have been propagated in this medium for several months through subcultures, and growth in vitro can probably be maintained indefinitely.

"2. Human tissues show no greater sensitiveness to changes in temperature and mechanical injury associated with preparation of cultures than those of lower animals. They may be preserved in an ordinary icebox at 10 to 15 degrees Centigrade as long as six or eight days. Tissues obtained at operation give best results, but pieces of organs removed at autopsy one to four hours after death sometimes show active growth."

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash the poisons and toxins from system before putting more food into stomach.

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside-bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head or have furred tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, sallow complexion, others who have bilious attacks and stomach or constipation are assured of pronounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.

HUMAN TISSUE CAN LIVE ON FOREVER

Dr. Robert A. Lambert, working in the pathological laboratory of the Presbyterian Hospital in New York, has so improved the method of cultivating human tissue after its removal from the body, by modifying the culture medium, that it will grow and multiply indefinitely. In other words, human tissue would live forever, if properly attended. Whether or not, the experiments are likely to have any value in the direction of conserving human life the investigator refrains from stating.

The physician reports the results of his experiments briefly in an article entitled "Technique of Cultivating

TO INSURE WAR WORKERS.

Britain Will Safeguard 1,500,000 from Unemployment After War.

Under the caption, "Safeguarding 1,500,000 Workers," the Official Press Bureau in London has issued an article in which it is stated that in anticipation of a wave of unemployment which may follow the war the British Government has decided to extend the operations of the State Unemployment Insurance act. The statement reads in part:

"In certain trades specially affected by the demands incidental to the supply of munitions and in which there is, therefore, a grave risk of serious dislocation on the cessation of war demands, all workpeople are to be insured whether they are individually employed on war work or not. These trades are the manufacture of ammunition fire works and explosives; chemicals, including oils, lubricants, soap, candles; paints, colours and varnish; metals and metal goods; rubber and goods made therefrom; leather and leather goods; brick, cement, and artificial building materials; sawmilling, including machine woodwork, and the manufacture of wooden cases.

"Apart from workpeople in these scheduled trades the act insures all munition workers as such. Briefly this means that all workpeople engaged in making or repairing any kind of article for naval or military use for the Allies will be insurable. This will include men and women engaged in making uniforms, brushes, tents and an infinite number of things which complete the equipment of soldiers and sailors.

"The temporary scheme of insurance embodied in the new act will remain in operation for five years from the present date or for three years after the termination of the war, which may be longer. The rates of contribution and benefit are the same as in the original act of 911, which applied to the building, engineering and shipbuilding trades. Contributions at the rate of ten cents a week will be paid by means of unemployment insurance stamps affixed to an unemployment book by the employer, who may then recover the workman's share by deduction from his wages. The benefits amount to $1.68 a week up to a maximum of fifteen weeks in any twelve months. On and after Sept. 4 it will be an offense to employ workpeople in any of the trades mentioned above or on munitions work without paying the unemployment insurance contributions due."

THE WILL OF FRANCE AT THE DECISIVE HOUR

The Reply of Senator Berenger to the Confident Assertions of German Press and Public Men

By HENRY BERENGER, Senator of France and Secretary of the Army Commission. Translated From the Matin.

The great events which are passing in Europe are not the result of circumstance. They are the reward of will. It was because our armies willed that they did not perish on the Marne, later on the Yser, and finally before Verdun. It is because we have willed to survive victory that we have established behind our armies an arsenal commensurate with our armies, which, no more than they, can either be destroyed or exhausted. It is because M. Aristide Briand willed the unity of front and unity of action that he has been able successively to rally under our flags, by this lucky symbol, all the free people of France.

It will be an historic honour to our President of the Council to have given, by the clairvoyant force of will, to our country the diplomacy for her war—a diplomacy capable of inspiring heroism in our soldiers and work in our factories.

Those who, like us, for many months, have exercised upon his acts the parliamentary control with the independence and energy which belong to it, should to-day especially render to M. Aristide Briand that homage due the complete statesman of our warring France. Hence, we are able to place full confidence in the head of our government and should even encourage him to inspire anew among all that indomitable will to win which is already, for any enemies, the token of their defeat.

But the task is yet far from being completed. The more the completion seems favourable the more should we redouble our efforts to advance it.

However glorious the sun may rise, in 1917, not a Frenchman should forget that in October, 1916, the invader is still in France; that the Boches are still twenty leagues from the capital, and that they still blacken by their infamies ten of our departments.

Nor should we ever ignore the fact that Germany goes on extracting from her mines and ores more coal for her engines and factories, more iron for her cannon, her shells, and her rails.

If they lack bread and meat they do not lack oil and steel. Nor do they lack labourers, for they have our prisoners and our outraged population.

We must expect assaults of fury still more violent, as their self-deception becomes more bitter.

Their angry declaration of war against Roumania, their grotesque celebration of the return of the Deutschland, their fetichistic supplanting of Falkenhayn by Hindenburg, and their endless manifestoes concerning universal annexation, all proclaim among those disappointed barbarians the supreme crisis of Pan-Germanic delirium.

To become convinced of this it is only necessary to read the enemy's papers—the Tag, which advertises a great offensive in the west in order to impose "a German peace"; the Frankfurter Zeitung, which announces for Germany "the end of the great period of the strategic defensive" and the advent "of positive operations"; the Deutsche Tageszeitung and the Tagliche Sundschau, which comment in the same pricise manner on the declarations of the chief of the German General Staff on the Somme.

The time is not, therefore, one which should alone keep us strictly vigilant; it should still more cause us to redouble the activity in our chancelleries, in our general staffs and in our making of the materials of war. We should ask our Governments to press home, without delay, our advantages of the entire eastern front as well as those on the western. We should profit by the daylight which is still long, and let the great guns of all our armies speak—those of Saloniki and the Strypa, like those of the Alps and the Somme.

No isolated front, no independent considerations, whether in the Balkans or elsewhere, should either obscure or obstruct the general conduct of the operations of the Entente.

How can we forget that in a few weeks the port of Archangel will be closed, and that it is of the greatest importance to the Entente—to every member of the Entente—to have established, before this period, between Russia and us the Mediterranean supply line for food and munitions?

The concentrated Roumanian and Russian armies, the army of Saloniki—so powerful to-day with more than 400,000 troops, supplied with guns and all necessary material, trained and drilled during long months in its intrenched camp—ought to be fully ready to realize the most just and decisive views of M. Aristide Briand by co-operating without delay with the general operations of the Entente.

More than ever we should impose everywhere on our enemies that diplomatic and military initiative which all recognize as the superiority of a force indomitable in its right.

We must bring to their knees those who have boasted that they would force Europe to hers. The people of Paris and of France—this great people, one and inseparable since the memorable days of the Marne—have well understood the lesson of the eleventh hour.

In these days of anniversaries France does not forget her great dead in the renaissance of life which represents the European coalition to-day very nearly complete.

Without those who sacrificed themselves in the days of threatened catastrophe, where now would be the munitions of the factories, the treaties of diplomacy, and the successful results of the alliances?

More now than ever before may their example be present among us! May each and of us remember that the final decision will alone belong to the best armed and to the best organized!

Austro-Germany is already vanquished diplomatically. It remains to achieve this in a military sense.

If to bring this about we must make more guns and shell, and if to make them we need more workers and more machines, and if we have to send forth more soldiers, workmen, and tools, why, let us ask of our civil and military chiefs what we have asked of them before—the decision, always the decision!

WINS ALL FRENCH HONORS

Aviator Nungesser is Known in France as Prince of Pilots.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—Aviator Nungesser, of the French Flying Corps, known as the "Prince of Pilots," today had the distinction of having won all the military medals awarded by the French Government. He has been wounded innumerable times, but has always insisted on returning to the battle front. On several occasions it has been necessary to lift him into his aeroplane when he started on a raid.

At the beginning of the war, Nungesser was a cavalryman. He was promoted for distinguished service, but refused to accept the promotion, declaring that he wished to become a military aviator. During his first three months in that branch of the service he took part in fifty-three bombing expeditions with the utmost daring and reckless bravery.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S HOUSE DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

A proper autumn model for practical wear is shown in this illustration. It indicates that the interest in the dress with a separate blouse to be worn outside the skirt is being gradually revived. Those in sympathy with the Russian blouse will perhaps class this model as really better than a house dress, and accordingly, choose a material that will take it out of the commonplace.

The blouse, as pictured, is made with the body and short sleeves in one section, but it may be made with set-in long sleeves. The collar, sleeve cuff, belt and pocket are of material in opposing color, to suit the prevailing mode, but, all one material will give a neat effect. The upper portion of the blouse is semi-fitting and below it is finished with what appears to be a gathered peplum, but which is really a continuation of the blouse belted in at normal waist line.

The three gore gathered skirt, measuring in size 36 2¾ yards at the lower edge, flares and ripples ideally. You can reproduce the design just as you see it pictured, with the pattern before you.

The dress pattern, No. 9491, is cut in sizes 36 to 42 bust measure. To make in size 36 will require 6¼ yards of 36 inch material and ¾ yard of contrasting goods (or 6 yards all one material).

To obtain the pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

240 DEATHS TO 100 BIRTHS, POLISH RATIO

WASHINGTON.—Throughout the Kingdom of Poland there is a ratio of 240 deaths to 100 births, declares Henryk Sienkiewics, the distinguished Polish author of "Quo Vadis" in a leading article in the American Red Cross Magazine for November, entitled "Behold Our Poland!"

"The present war has inflicted injuries on nearly all the peoples of Europe," said Mr. Sienkiewics, "but on none of them have the calamities pressed so heavily—with a weight as intolerable—as on the Poles, a people of twenty-odd millions, divided between Russia, Austria and Prussia.

"Belgium and Serbia were devastated by sword and fire, but the storm which passed over these two countries was of short duration, and the Belgian and Serbian soldiers had, at least, the consoling thought that they were giving their lives 'for altars and firesides' in defending their own rights. To the Poles such a consolation was denied. Nearly two millions of Polish soldiers have been drafted in three armies, and, in consequence, have been forced into a fractricidal struggle.

HARDEST BATTLE IN POLAND

"Even if Polish territory had not become the theatre of war, this fact alone would constitute a crown of misfortune. But it is precisely on our territory that the struggles have been the most intense, where they have endured the longest, and are again to be renewed. To prevent the rationing of belligerents, the villages and towns have been burned, crops in the granaries and in the fields destroyed and cattle driven off.

"They have razed the factories, and those which are standing have been forced to suspend operation in default of raw material and because their machinery has been taken away. As an inevitable consequence, desolation, famine and epidemic prevail throughout Poland.

"In addition to cholera, and typhus fever, which, in certain districts, notably in Galicia are decimating the population, a new malady has made its appearance in our country—the terrible malady of hunger—whose symptoms preceding death are the bloating of the body and the blind ness. Dr. Strauss, of the German Government ,has given a precise description of this malady in the Zeitscript fur artaliche Fortbildung. When the Russians in retreat, pressed by the Germans, took along with them the civil population inhabiting the right bank of the Vistula River, a majority of the children died of hunger, fatigue and malnutrition. The same happened in the concentration camps of Austria and Prussia.

"For remedying, even in part, this horrible situation, a General Aid Committee for the Victims of the War in Poland was constituted in Vevey, Switzerland, January 9, 1915 under my direction and that of M. Paderewski.

"Our appeal was not without echo. It was supported by Catholic churches throughout the Christian world. From January 9 to July 1, 1916, we had collected the sum of 12,571,276 francs ($2,514,253.10), of which amount we had sent, up to the latter date, the sum of 12,137,044 ($2,427,408) for aiding in Poland the population deprived of shelter and those suffering from hunger, without making any distinction between the religions.

GERMAN BAND PLAYED IN FACE OF GRIM DEATH

Chicago, Nov. 10.—Strains of "God Save the King," played by a German band in a German saloon, gave pleasure to Sandy McTavish, a Scotchman from Canada, if to no one else in the crowd. He hired the band in revenge for having previously been ejected from the saloon.

When McTavish first dropped into the saloon, which is on South Clark street, some Germans were toasting Captain Hans Rose of the U-53. The Scotchman refused to drink the toast.

"My nam's McTavish—Sandy McTavish—Wee Sandy, they call me, and I'll give ye a toast," he shouted.

"Here's to King George!"

It took five Germans and the potter to put Sandy out.

Two hours later he was back with the little German street band, and led it into the saloon. The musicians played the British national air four times before the Germans recognized it. After that it was the street for Sandy and his band.

BIG EXTRAS FOR KELLY.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 11. — The Galt Commission has reached the Kelly contracts. Hugh Phillips, Crown lawyer, says they necessitated an unexpectedly large amount of preliminary study. The firm obtained the main contracts totalling $1,483,790. Its extras on these contracts amounted to $440,073, approximately 50 per cent. For construction of the Dormitory building, Thomas Kelly and Sons, were awarded the contract at $580,-700. [illegible] on the job amounted to $280,670.

AGED KINGSTON WOMAN

Tells How She Recovered Her Strength.

If the elderly people in Kingston could only realize what Vinol would do for them we would not be able to get enough to supply the demand. Following is a letter received from Mrs. A. E. Carson of this town. She says:

"I am 69 years of age and had been ailing for a long time with indigestion. I got run down, was weak, dizzy and could not sleep at night. I consulted two doctors who said I had hardening of the arteries and at my age could not expect to be strong again. My daughter would give me no peace until I tried Vinol, as it had done so much for her. I have taken five bottles and my health and strength have come back, so I am able to do all the house work for my family of four, and I am recommending Vinol to all my friends."

The reason Vinol is so beneficial to old people is because it contains the very elements needed to replace declining strength with renewed vigor, viz., beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates, glycerophosphates and a mild tonic wine.

We want to ask every elderly person and every weak, run-down or debilitated person in Peterborough to call at our store and get a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that we will return your money if it fails to benefit.

BURGLAR GOES "FIFTY-FIFTY" WITH VICTIM.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 10. — After taking $40 from Miss Jean Marshall, of Washington, D.C., a burglar, who entered the girl's room in the Colonial Annex Hotel, Sixth Street, and Penn avenue, the other morning, divided the booty with her, giving her $20. Before making his escape the burglar refused to take Miss Marshall's jewelry, but bade her good morning, and disappeared down the fire escape.

"Keep quiet, girlie—nothing wrong, and I am sorry to disturb you," he said, according to Miss Marshall.

"How much money have you got?"

"My purse is on the dresser," explained the frightened girl.

The burglar walked over to the dresser and opened the purse, taking out two $20 bills.

"This all you got?" he asked.

Miss Marshall said she explained it was all that she had with the exception of 11 cents.

"Well, girlie, I'll be fair, and we'll split fifty-fifty," was the burglar's proposition, as he walked over to Miss Marshall and placed a bill in her hand, pushing the other $20 in his pocket.

"Good morning, and I'll leave the way I came," were his last words Miss Marshall told the police.

MAINE POTATO CROP GOES TO FEED SOLDIERS.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 10.—The State Board of Agriculture reports that the great scarcity of potatoes is due to the heavy purchases for the warring nations of Europe. A large part of the Maine crop, it is declared, has been bought up by the agents of the belligerents.

The price in this market has more than doubled since a year ago. Secretary Wilfrid Wheeler says: "The foreign governments are buying the Maine potatoes in large quantities, and are having them dried and put into a condensed form on this side of the Atlantic, and they intend to ship them to Europe as flour or some such substance."

WHAT EUROPE NEEDS.

Great Demand on World's Forests for Rebuilding Towns.

"Europe will need a billion dollars' worth of lumber the first year after the war," asserted Dr. Edward Ewing Pratt, chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce, in an address before the Forest Industry Conference at Portland, Ore. "There will not only be an opportunity to sell lumber there wil lbe a duty that should not be shirked.

"If the war should end in December, which is hardly likely, and lumber imports into Europe should in the meantime show no increase, there will be a duty that should not be mated deficit in the normal European lumber supplies of some $460,-000,00.

"This is entirely outside of the great additional needs for lumber due to the actual destruction of the war. No one knows at present the amount of lumber that will be needed by France, Belgium, Poland and other countries which have suffered direct from the war, to replace ruined buildings, railroads, and bridges.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S.

"I was a great sufferer with eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Haas, Lanesboro, N. S. "Five years ago three cakes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is as soft as a baby's now, and I always say a good word for this Ointment."

2 AVIATORS BLOWN TO BITS AS BOMB EXPLODES IN AIR

UP 1,000 FEET OVER PROVING GROUNDS.

Lieutenants Welsh and Bronson Are Victims in Experiment at Indian Head.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 9.—Lieutenants Luther Welsh and C. K. Bronson, U.S.N., were killed by the explosion of an aeroplane bomb which they were testing during a flight over the Indian Head (Md) naval proving grounds.

The acroplane was at an altitude of about one thousand feet at the time of the accident. Officers observing the test said Lieutenant Welsh launched the bomb, which appeared to strike against some part of the machine as it fell. The aeroplane was broken in two by the explosion and fell into the Potomac River. The men apparently were blown to bits.

A searching party was sent immediately to drag the river, but according to their latest reports hardly any parts of the bodies of the officers have been recovered.

J. Wilfrid Madigan Guilty of Negligence

JOHN CHIVILO WAS KILLED IN COLLISION IN KING STREET SUBWAY.

TORONTO, Nov. 10.—Not guilty on the charge of manslaughter, but guilty on the count of criminal negligence, was the verdict of the jury at the Assize Court, after a three-hour deliberation concerning the indictment of the Crown against J. Wilfrid Madigan. Madigan was driving a motor car on King west on September 12th, and just west of the subway his car crushed John Chivilo against the rear end of a street car, causing his death. Madigan, who was represented by Mr. I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., and Mr. W. K. Murphy, was remanded by Justice Latchford until this morning for sentence.

ECZEMA ON FACE
WAS SO BAD HAD TO STAY IN HOUSE

All skin diseases such as eczema or salt rheum, itching or burning rashes, eruptions, ulcers, boils, pimples, etc., are all caused by bad blood, and while not usually attended with any fatal results, may sooner or later develop into some serious blood trouble and the entire system become affected.

Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and well-known remedy, will cleanse the blood of all its impurities, and by this means cure all skin diseases and other blood troubles.

Mrs. Ernest Andrews, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "My face was covered with eczema and was so terribly bad I had to stay in the house. I had ten different doctors but got so tired of their treatment that I went and bought a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it helped me, so I kept on taking it. Now I am cured, and have a lovely skin.

"People who used to see me when I was so bad and see me now will not believe it, but I always tell them that nothing cured me but Burdock Blood Bitters."

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL ADVANCE BY BRITISH

THE ALLIES VICTORIOUS ON SEVERAL FRONTS

Russians Cross Danube At Two Different Points

Mackensen's Retreat is Continuing With One-third of His Effectiveness Lost---Teuton-Bulgar Forces Are Falling Back in Disorder Before the Serbs---British Take Positions on Both Banks of the Ancre.

MANY PRISONERS WERE CAPTURED

LONDON, November 13.—The Russians have crossed the Danube into Dobrudja at two points south of Tchernavoda, and the Russian fleet has renewed the bombardment of Constanza.

Field Marshall Von Mackensen is reported continuing his retreat with demoralized forces, and with one-third of his effectives lost.

ENEMY RETREATING BEFORE THE SERBIANS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 13.—The Paris War Office announcement confirmed the report from Serbian headquarters, saying the Teuton-Bulgar forces wer driven from the village of Iven, and the French official statement added that the retreating armies are "falling back in disorder." The Serbian pursuit continues despite five counter attacks.

The enemy's losses were serious, the statement added. "Somewhat to the west the Serbians have further progressed north of Veliselos. Since September 12, the enemy has lost six thousand prisoners, 72 guns and 50 machine guns."

BRITISH WIN ON BOTH BANKS OF ANCRE

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 13.—A considerable number of prisoners were taken when the British troops captured German positions on both flanks of the Ancre River, General Haig reported to the War Office to-day.

There was considerable artillerying by the enemy in the regions of Les Boeufs and Gueudecourt during the night.

GERMAN FLEET SHELLS FINNISH COAST TOWNS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PETROGRAD, November 13.—The German naval forces bombarded the Finnish coast Friday under cover of a fog. The statement said a number of vessels had been sunk.

The Russian official statement on naval activity in the Baltic says a flotilla of German torpedo craft entered the Gulf of Finland in a fog, bombarded the Baltic coast, killing many civilians, including women and children, but fled hurriedly on the approach of Russian war ships, which chased them and sunk many. The remainder were pursued close up to German waters.

Hot Fighting On Roumanian Front

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BUCHAREST, November 13.—On the right of the Alt Valley the Roumanians have been forced to yield ground in the region of Saracibete, the War Office announced to-day. Enemy attacks to the left were repulsed.

"In the Cerburai Valley, two enemy attacks were repulsed," the announcement said. "We also maintained our positions about Dragoevcle after a battle that lasted throughout the day.

"In the Jiul Valley enemy pressure continues to be strong. Southeast of Orsova violent fighting has occurred and there were lively combats on the right bank of the Cerna River."

ANOTHER TERRIFIC BRITISH ADVANCE

General Haig's Troops Smash Forward at New Point Capturing Villages of Beaumont, Hamel and Saint Pierre Divon—2000 Prisoners Already Captured by British---Are Now Fighting For Possession of Serre.

Special to Examiner:

LONDON, November 13.—General Haig's forces struck another terrific blow at the German lines about the Ancre to-day. After thunderous artillery preparation the infantry took German positions to the depth of a mile, the War Office announced this afternoon.

The British troops, dashing irresistibly forward, captured the villages of Beaumont and Hamel, just north of a deep bend in the Ancre, and about seven miles due west of Bapaume, the objectives of the great English offensive.

LONDON, November 13.—The British have captured the towns of Beaumont, Hamel and Saint Pierre Divon, according to the correspondent of Reuter's Telegraph Co., at the British headquarters.

Fighting is still going on between the German and British troops around the town of Serre, about two miles north of Beaumont and Hamel. Two thousand prisoners have already been taken by the British.

The Boys Want Letters From Home

Writing to The Examiner from West Sandling Camp, Capt. J. E. R. Munro, adjutant of the 93rd Battalion, says: "On behalf of the men I might state that nothing is appreciated here more than mail—news from home. Tobacco can be bought and also socks (if you have the price), but news from home cannot be bought, and as the mails are so irregular, letters should be more regular and numerous."

Duke of Devonshire And Party Have Arrived at Ottawa

Their Excellencies Are Given a Hearty Reception as They Reach the Capital—Typical Winter Weather Greeted Them

STATION WAS PACKED

OTTAWA, Nov. 13.—In typical Ottawa winter conditions, Their Excellencies the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire and Lady Maud and Lady Blanche Cavendish, their daughters, arrived in Ottawa at eleven o'clock this morning. A heavy snow during the night had carpeted the ground with white, and a sharp wind gave the first taste of winter. The station was packed with invited guests and the civic authorities.

The train pulled into the Central Depot at 11 o'clock sharp. Sir Robt. and Lady Borden, accompanied by Col. Henderson, the new Military Secretary, entered Their Excellencys' car, and in a few moments reappeared. The Governor-General's foot guards acted as a guard of honour.

The Duchess of Devonshire shook hands with the members of the Cabinet and their wives, some of whom were able to recall the fact that they met the Duchess when a young girl at Rideau Hall.

His Excellency looked big and bluff with a heavy red moustache and hair almost white. Her Excellency wore a seal coat, trimmed with ermine, and a broad black hat with wing effect. The Ladies Cavendish were also attired in sealskin coats and toque hats.

At the conclusion of the inspection Sir Robert Borden called for cheers, which were heartily given.

Mgr. Stagni and Archbishop Sinnot represented the Papal Legation and the Catholic clergy, and Lieut.-General Sir Sam Hughes and many others were there, including Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who chatted pleasantly with the Duchess, whom he had known as a little girl at Rideau Hall during the Lansdowne regime.

From indications to-day they will be popular members of Ottawa society.

His Excellency assumed the duties of his new office without delay, making his first visit to the Governor-General's office in the east block this afternoon with the object of meeting officials and signing a number of recently passed Orders-in-Council.

Installed at Halifax.

OTTAWA, Nov. 13.—It was announced to-day that the formal installation of the Governor-General took place at Halifax, in the historic Council Chamber of the Legislature of old lower Canada, when the oath of office was administered by Hon. Sir Louis Davis, K.C.M.G., Judge of the Supreme Court.

Another Peterborough Boy Is Reported A Prisoner of War

Pte. H. P. Laing, Formerly Given as Missing Now Unofficially Reported In German Hands---News From the 93rd Battalion Men in England and France---Recruiting Drive in No. 3 District--To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Another name has been added to the Peterborough list of prisoners of war. A message from Ottawa received yesterday stated that Pte. H. P. Laing, Murray-street, Peterborough, who was previously reported missing, is now unofficially reported a prisoner of war at Dulmen, Germany. Pte. Laing is the fortieth Peterborough boy on the list of prisoners.

All ranks of the 247th Battalion are on recruiting duty. The city has been divided into five districts and each of these will be thoroughly combed in search of the available material. On Saturday five recruits presented themselves for examination, but only two of them were successful in passing the test. They were:

Omer Sanders, Havelock.
James Willis, Pontypool.

Pte. S. G. Dunk, a Young's Point member of the 93rd Battalion, is reported dangerously ill.

DAILY ORDERS.

Lieut. Johnston—Parnell, Lake, River and Smith.

Lieut. Shaw—North side of Smith, west of river.

R. B BROOKS, Lieut.

A member of the 93rd Bugle Band, writing to one of The Examiner Staff, gives some interesting news about the Peterborough Battalion. He says: "After we sent four drafts to France, what was left of us, cooks, batmen, N.C.O.s, bands and a few privates, received orders to move to West Sandling Camp on October 6th. This was the day that the 93rd was smashed to pieces. When we reached West Sandling Col. Preston, of the 39th Battalion, told us that the 93rd Battalion was no more, and that we were part of the 39th Battalion. All our N.C.O.s had to revert, the company sergeant-majors and quartermaster-sergeants to sergeants, and the rest to privates. We men had a medical examination and a number of us were turned down and were put in C Company. The ones who passed were put in A Company, which is a draft company, and a number of them leave to-morrow for France. The rest are to leave when they finish a course in shooting.

"I am in the ranks with the rest of the bugle band. We have plenty of bayonet fighting, physical drill and route marches. We have three route marches a week, so I think by the time we get out of this we will be real soldiers. The brass band are doing all the fatigue work and they do not like it all, but we must expect all these things in the army."

An 93rd Boy in France.

A member of the Examiner staff has received the following interesting letter from Pte. P. D. Ryan, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and is now in France with the 5th C.M.R.:

Somewhere in France, Oct. 28, '16.

Just a few lines from one of the 93rd boys. How is everything going in good old Peterborough these days? Don't I wish I could just drop there and have a look around. The battalion has been absolutely broken up and the boys have been drafted to units all over France.

Some were drafted to the 5th C.M.R.'s another bunch to the 1st Canadians a third to reinforce the 18th, 19th and 20th Battalions, and a few to the 52nd Battalion, so you can see we are all over the place. The 5th C.M.R. draft were the first to go to France, the majority of them being taken from A company. The trip across was a bit rough and there were quite a few sick in those few hours that there were coming from Canada to England.

We reached Havre early in the morning and had a long tramp to the training camp. Arriving there we were given the remainder of our equipment, and it was done in double quick time, too.

At the training camp we had almost everything that was used in actual warfare from trench digging to the gas, and I do believe we learned more in two weeks than we did in our previous eight months' soldiering, as the instructors had the experience in the earlier part of the war.

"After about two weeks there we were sent off to join our unit, our pouches filled with ammunition and carrying everything we owned. We camped for a few days just outside the town, in which our unit had their billets and joined them as soon as they came out of the trenches. My they were in an awful state, plastered with mud, as it had been raining for two days and as the trenches were Both Flanks of His Thirty-five Mile Front Are Under Attack and His Centre is Being Steadily Pressed Back.

IS FACING DISASTER

LONDON, Nov. 13.—While Russian troops are battling on the western bank of the Danube for possession of Cernavoda bridge, the Russo-Roumanian forces are continuing their steady advance, southward in the Dobrudja. From the west and the north hostile forces are closing in on Mackensen's army.

The Russian units west of Cernavoda advanced to the bank of the Danube before they met a sufficiently heavy enemy fire to compel their retirement toward Dunarea, according to yesterday's communication from Sofia. Though few details of the battle in this sector have reached London, it is believed by observers that the forces transported across the Danube by Mackensen must soon retire. Their position grows more dangerous as the Russo-Roumanian army moves toward Cernavoda from the north.

Evidently the forces landed by Mackensen near Dunarea, either by monitors or over a newly constructed bridge, were too small to make any headway along the railway to Bucharest.

ROUMANIANS COME BACK

Part of the Russo-Roumanian army got across the bridge before it was blown up; the remainder retreated "to the wild region of southern Dobrudja." The troops that crossed the bridge made their base at Fetesti, at the Roumanian end, 12 miles from Cernavoda. Now they are coming back.

The Entente troops in the Dobrudja have occupied the villages of Tepel and Ghiedarechti, 12 miles north of Cernavoda, and are pressing ahead with little resistance. To-day they reached the Topal-Ivancsema-Kurasu railway, where they took 100 prisoners. Large fires are reported in Cernavoda.

The cause of the Cernavoda fire is not known, but it is assumed that the Bulgarians have given up hope of retaining the city in the face of the double enemy drive and are destroying it before retreating. There are constant rumors that the Bulgarian population is fleeing over the Bulgarian frontier line.

Led into a blind alley and unable to cross the Danube marshes, the Prussian commander was obliged to return the way he came, pursued by an army that was constantly being reinforced from the north. Now at Cernavoda he is menaced from the west bank of the river and at the end of his right bank, Constanza, on the Black Sea, is being rendered untenable by the guns of the Russian fleet. With both flanks of his 35-mile front under attack and his centre being steadily pressed back, he is facing serious disaster.

SENDING PRESENTS TO SOLDIERS OVERSEAS BY THE PARCEL POST

For the information of those sending parcels to soldiers in England or at the front, The Examiner publishes the rates of postage as follows: To England, the rate is 12 cents a pound, or any fraction thereof. Limit weight on parcels to England is 11 lbs. To France or Belgium the rate is 24 cents for parcels any weight up to three pounds; from three pounds to seven pounds (the limit), the rate is 32 cents, not 32 cents per pound but 32 cents for any weight from 3 to 7 pounds. Any letter or parcel for any soldier in a hospital (even if the hospital is not known to the sender), having the word "hospital" marked across it, will be delivered. A customs declaration must be attached to each parcel, for which application should be made at the stamp window of the post office.

Canucks Took German Trench In Moonlight Charge

Many of the Troops Engaged in Capture of Regina Positions Were New Arrivals at the Front But Attack Was Entirely Successful

ON HALF MILE FRONT

TORONTO, Nov. 13.—A Canadian Associated Press cable published here, to-day, says in regard to the Canadians' operations at the Regina Trench victory: "Soon after midnight, Friday, in bright moonlight, the Canadians delivered an entirely successful attack on a portion of the German ground, east of Regina trench, not far from Courcellette, the result being that our trench system in this quarter was advanced about four hundred yards along a length of something over half a mile. The operation, of course, was a minor one, but goes to prove that there is unlikely this winter to be the system of stagnation, such as the Canadians, with the rest of the British forces, have had to endure in previous winter months.

The Canadians who made the attack were, many of them, newly arrived from England.

It was conducted on lines now familiar, namely, a preliminary bombardment on the point chosen for the attack.

Twelve Degrees of Frost Recorded

The minimum temperature recorded throughout the night was between eleven and twelve degrees of frost. This is not unusual for this season of the year. Last year the first snowfall equivalent to the one that sent a shiver through many a Peterborough citizen this morning was on November 22nd.

It was a hard day for horses due to the slippery condition of the pavements.

Hughes' Lead In Minnesota Cut to 202

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 13.—A big error in Faribault, discovered on the official count, with small but consistent gains for Wilson in other official figures, including votes by mail and the soldier vote from 13 counties, cut Hughes' lead in Minnesota at noon to 202.

The Gull Lake Club Returned

The Gull Lake Hunt Club, composed of D. Windover, W. Graham and Dr. Pulkinghorn, returned home from the North on Friday with their number of deer. The deer are very plentiful in this section, but hard to get on account of water in the swamps.

BRITISH OR GERMAN?

In a recent address in Toronto Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, darkly referred to the presence in Canada and a sneaking element of German intrigue aimed at obstructing Canada's share in war help. It is hoped he was mistaken, but in absence of the knowledge of what he specifically meant, if he directly meant anything obscurely definite, he may be justified if he referred to conditions in Kitchener, Ontario, the people of which, recently removed the handicap of a German name from a loyal community. It is asserted that the pro-German propaganda in that city, which has been intensified since the change of name from Prussian to British was made, is being now cloaked under an organization the "Citizens' League," professing to be formed only to promote improved civic government. This league has no question of "civic" administration as its basis. It is devoting its whole activity to electing a council that will favour the re-change of name of "Kitchener" to "Berlin." It has gone so far as to try to induce the public to override the Statutes of Ontario, and order of the Post Office Department, at Ottawa, by enclosing the following notice with its correspondence:

"Until the ratepayers of this city definitely decide the name issue in a fair election, without intimidation or danger of violence, you will oblige us by using the following address: "Berlin, Canada."

The restoration of the name of the Prussian Capital in a British country would be proclaimed in Germany as a proof that Canada is, at heart, breaking away from the Empire and the Allies. In the United States the German and pro-German people will be told that Canada is full of German sympathizers and the German-American intriguers might be emboldened to add their weight to the machinations of a traitorous foreign element in this country.

The objection to these schemers is not mere sentimental patriotism; it has a substantial reason of existence. The change of name from Berlin to Kitchener was procured in the interests of trade and industry of the city now known officially as Kitchener. The action was precipitated by the objections to the purchase of goods "made in Berlin," met by commercial travellers selling "Berlin" products all over Canada. So seriously did this condition affect industries that one firm alone is said to have spent thousands of dollars in dies that did not put the word "Berlin" on all its products; and the letter of protest against the intrigues of the "Citizen League" is signed by the heads or managers of eight of the largest manufacturing firms in Kitchener.

The present pro-German movement is doubtless a reprisal for the measures taken by patriotic leaders in having all aliens registered; in revenge for challenging at the polls in the change of name voting, seven hundred aliens who had voted for years without question, and with a desire to commit the electors in a British city to endorsing a pro-German propaganda, and thus throw doubt upon the bona fides of Canadian interest in the cause of the Empire and its Allies.

In this respect the next municipal election in Berlin will be of national interest and importance. Any outside assistance to the "British League" of Kitchener, which appeals in the interest of British connection and British interests and the interests of the war, will be an act of patriotism. The propaganda in Kitchener is directed against the idea and fact of Canada's participation in the war.

It would not be a bad thing if the city Council of Peterborough should pass a strong resolution endorsing the action of the loyalists who wish to keep the name "Kitchener" for their city, and condemning the pro-German plotters whose methods, apart from any local question, smack too much of the Prussian model to be tolerated by patriotic and pro-British Canadians.

OUT OF THEIR MOUTHS.

It is imputed as treason for any Liberal journal to criticise the government's methods, in dealing with the management of Canada's end of the war. Whether or not this action is treasonable, or even questionable, depends upon whether the government is doing its best or even doing well. If the government is doing the best to promote recruiting, its best is not very good; and that is unfortunate; if it is not doing its best it is legitimately subject to criticism, and more than that, reproach. There must be something when, added to other criticism, criticism comes from the members of the party supporting the government. For instance. At a meeting of Ward One Conservative Association in Toronto, prominent, and even official, members of the party, complained of government inaction and inefficiency. Mr. Thomas Hook, M. P.P., for south-east Toronto, "B." it may be said without flippancy, gave the government "the hook." He touched the core of the cause of ineffective recruiting. He declared that recruiting for nearly two years, "had been left to the public This criticism coincides exactly with what the Examiner has frequently pointed out, equivalent to meaning that the government had not taken the proper official interest in the matter. Mr. Hook also deplored the lack of government leadership in the matter of recruiting, a widely recognized condition. In this regard he is reported as saying

"The Dominion Government should begin to give recruiting some leadership and encouragement, and co-operate with patriotic private and public men. This was the right way to rouse enthusiasm. Rallying centres should be established in parts of Canada where as yet no effort had been made by the Government to get recruits. A man could be sent from Ottawa if they liked "but let it be a man of common sense."

This is the pungent criticism of a Conservative member of Parliament. If a Liberal journal with the most honest and patriotic intention had thus berated the government it would have been accused of being influenced by party prejudice. But a Conservative member of a riding of Tory Toronto, can be charged with no ulterior motive. He only overcame the habit of perfunctory party adulation, and yielded to the spirit of patriotic honesty—a desire for results. Mr. Hook, in the same speech, incidentally opposed conscription. He "could not understand" why the government failed to take energetic action in the matter of recruiting. He said: "Instead of debating this and that and the other thing, conscription or no conscription, let them get up and get busy." That is precisely what the government is not doing.

Sir Sam Hughes a few days ago declared inferentially that he had no faith in the government methods of dealing, or not dealing, with recruiting. He would have the 100,000 soldiers Canada is to provide, by conscription or by his own unaided efforts. He is to descend upon Quebec and so stir up things there that he will have several Quebec regiments on their way to the front "before the snow flies." If he does that he will have to be more rapid than the government. Months ago there was a meeting held in Peterborough, at which the case of the private patriots who had done all the direct work in recruiting soldiers was dealt with. They demanded of the government to systematise and organize recruiting. Months after and months ago, the government appeared to decide upon National Service organization; but so far nothing has been done, except clog the machinery efore it got into motion, by injecting a petty partizanship issue.

It is no wonder that the very friends and partizans of the government clamour for action, and demand something like leadership and initiative from the government. The Grit journals find their "occupation gone" when the governments' own supporters deplore the blighting influence of government inaction and failure of leadership in proposing the interests of recruiting. "Slackers" on the ordinary level can't be so much blamed if they follow the distinguished example of "slackers" higher up.

CORN OIL FOR SALADS

One of the Fruits of the Great War in Europe.

It took the big war in Europe to teach us that we had been sending several millions of dollars a year to Spain, Italy and Turkey for olive oil when we had oil just as good which we shipped to Europe each year for use on salads.

The United States grows about 3,000,000,000 bushels of corn each year. In the average bushel there is a pound and half of good corn oil, which becomes a by-product in the manufacture of gulcose, corn sugar, starch and other corn products. Most of this oil we have been using in the manufacture of soap, but about 15 per cent. of it was refined and shipped to Europe for sale as a salad oil, while we imported European olive oil at three times the price of the oil we shipped abroad.

This year, with the olive oil supply of Europe cut down, we are refining 35 per cent. of the corn oil produced in the United States, and we are using it ourselves.—Idaho Statesman.

Patriotic Fund Will Carry The Burden Until The Pension Board Acts

Dependents of Men Who Have Been Killed or Incapacitated Will Still Be Able to Draw From the Fund on the Understanding That Such Amounts Must Be Repaid to the Fund Out of the First Pension Gratuities—A Welcome Change.

As the casualty list grows larger with the ferocity of the conflict in which the Canadian troops are engaged on the northern borders of France the calls on the Pension Board grow in number. At a time when these calls were not anything so frequent the Patriotic Fund carried out certain rules, the chief of which, as concerning the dependents of the men killed or seriously wounded on service, was that between the time of the casualty and the establishment and payment of the pension, the Fund carried on the allowances to the family. With a not excessive number of casualties the aggregate sum paid out was not so serious as to disturb the resources of the Fund.

But now the matter is increasing in its seriousness, and while the dependents must not be neglected or in any way deprived of a sufficient revenue or income, it is felt that such should be borne by the Government, and not by the Fund, which is primarily for the benefit of the dependents of men on active service.

At a recent conference of the Pension Board and the Executive Committee of the Fund, it was decided to relieve the Fund of any burden in this respect. So the situation is now this: That dependents of men on service, the men being killed or most seriously wounded, will still be able to draw from the Fund, but on the understanding that such amounts must be repaid to the Fund out of the first pension gratuity.

Application for Pension.

If the application be made for pension, promptly, and no sentimental feelings should be allowed to interfere with such duty, the interval will not be long before the case can be adjusted and the pension allowed. If particulars are supplied, either by interview or by correspondence to the Patriotic Office, here, for this district, the claims will have prompt and efficient assistance.

Following is the advice note sent to all branches of the Fund, in Ontario, and no doubt throughout Canada:

"As you are aware, the Central Executive Committee has decreed that in future allowances from the Fund must cease upo nthe death of the soldier. It (the Executive) has agreed, however, that assistance may be rendered in the form of loans, the amount so advanced to be remain on receipt of the first pension cheque.

To ensure that these moneys shall be repaid the Fund the Board of Pension Commissioners has agreed to place the Fund on the same basis as the Militia Department, to deduct from the first pension cheque any amounts that may be owing to the Fund, in the same way that a separation allowance is dedeucted and to remit such amounts to the Head Office of the Fund.

The following procedure, therefore, must be adopted in regard to all payments made to women whose husbands or sons have died on service, or been killed in action.

(1.) The woman should be notified that commencing on the first of the month, following that in which the casualty occurred assistance can only be given her in form of a loan. For the month in which the casualty occurs, the usual allowance should be paid, and no part thereof regarded as a loan.

(2). If she agrees to accept assistance in this way, the attached form (forms at Patriotic Fund Office) should be completed and signed in duplicate. One copy to be retained by the local Branch and the other forwarded to the Head Office.

(3.) Such advances must be made on the first or last day of each month, and must be for the same amount each time. Only if these conditions are observed shall we be able to, at Hed Office, compute the total amount owing when the first pension cheque is issued.

(4.) The amount advanced each month must not exceed the difference between the separation allowance and the monthly pension. Otherwise it is possible that the first pension cheque would be entirely payable to the Fund and the Separation Allowance Branch ,and there would be nothing due to the pensioner.

(5.) Such advances should only be made to women who are clearly eligible for pension in accordance with the enclosed summary of regulations. The amounts refunded by the Board of Pension Commissioners will be duly credited to the respective branches.

Signed,
Philip H. Morris,
Asst. Sec'y.

freshly dug, mere holes, you can imagine what they would be like after a heavy rain. No matter which of the boys you spoke to, you could not hear a grumble from any one of them after the awful experience they had gone through, having been over the parapet. You know what that means.

We were with them almost a week before going on a working party near the trenches and that wasn't too bad. Since then we have been in the trenches twice, and I am glad to say have had very few casualties. My, the guns make an awful roar when they all start talking at once, and for every shell Fritz's gunners send over, ours send six over with Jack Canuck's compliments.

We have been having a rest these last two weeks as far as the trenches are concerned, and are having the same old thing as we had when we first enlisted, platoon drill, etc. I guess Fritz is getting tired of this picnic of his, and if it wasn't for those high and mighties, would have quit long ago.

Well I guess I will have to quit as it is nearly time for parade. How is your new battalion coming on. Hoping this will find you well, and shall expect to hear from you soon. From Yours truly, Pte. P. D. Ryan, 195674.

A member of the 39th Battalion writes to the Examiner as follows:

West Sandling, Kent, England,
Oct. 20, 1916.

Just a few lines to let you know we are all well at West Sandling. It has been raining pretty heavily this last few days, and it looks like a second Barriefield. I was over at the local Y.M.C.A. the other evening and heard a very interesting concert, in which Bandsman H. Worrell, of the 93rd Band took part as a comedian, and certainly acted his part well. Bandsman H. Gilbert, also of the 93rd Band, took part in the concert and played as a trombone solo, "Asleep in the Deep." He played so well that the boys encored him, and he played "Frozen Bill," which is a ragtime piece, in great style. A lot more of the boys took part, and we had a most enjoyable evening. So you can see that we have some good times over here too. Well, there is not much news around here, so I will ring off for this time, hoping to see this in your paper, as it will give the readers an idea as to the way we spend our evenings in camp. I remain, yours sincerely,

A Member of the 39th Battalion.

KINGSTON, Nov. 12.—Brig.-Gen. Hemming has called a meeting of the commanding officers of this district for Wednesday next. The object of this meeting is to decide on a vigorous recruiting campaign. The general is inclined to the opinion that conscription is unnecessary at the present time. He is convinced that with the right kind of recruiting methods the battalions already authorised for this military district can secure the desired number of men. It depends largely, the general thinks, on the officers of the battalions. If they adopt vigorous and tactful recruiting methods they will secure all the men they want.

It is understood that another battalion will be authorised for the St. Lawrence counties, and the feeling in military circles is that this, too, can be recruited up to strength without resorting to coercive measures.

Rev. Father Nicholson, of Prescott, and Father Cote of Peterborough, left on Saturday for England, where they will be attached to units as Roman Catholic chaplains. They have been granted the rank of Captain. Father Nicholson is a son of Thomas Nicholson, Kingston.

The following have been appointed officers for the 253rd Queen's Highland Battalion, commanded by Lieut.-Col. P. G. C. Campbell:

To be second in command, Major R. D. Sutherland, 14th Regiment; Quartermaster, W. P. Grant, 237th Battalion, C.E.F.; Adjutant, Capt. A. H Tett, 14th Regiment; Major, Major R. M. Van Luven, 4th Hussars. Captains, T. Kirkconnell, C.O.T.C.; J. D. D'Esterre, 14th Regiment. Lieutenants, Lieut. G. B. Emery, C.O.T.C. and 14th Regiment; Lieut. G. A. R. Emery, C.O.T.C. and 14th Regiment; Lieut. E. W. Skinner, 14th Regiment; Lieut. W. A. Mouck, 47th Regiment; Lieut. G. J. Macmillan, 59th Regiment. Paymaster, Capt. H. A. Small, Queen's Engineers.

A Cobourg Exchange says:

This week Mr. F. M. Field, K.C., received from Gunner Reuben Jackson some legal documents which he had sent to Gunner Jackson in September to be signed by him, and the documents bear the signatures of Lieutenant George Meredith Huycke of Peterborough as the subscribing witness, and Colonel C. H. Maclaren of Ottawa as the Notary Public before whom the affidavits are taken. This document is being registered at the Cobourg Registry Office, and will doubtless in the years to come be a title deed of much interest to people having occasion to search the title to the property concerned.

LITTLE THINGS THAT ARE WORTH KNOWING

If by mistake you get a soup too salty, add a few slices of raw potato, and cook a few minutes longer. The potatoes will absorb the surplus salt.

After chopping apples, onions, etc., place the chopper in a basin of water, if not convenient to wash it at once. This makes it easy to remove stains. The same thing applies to steel knives used at meals. If they are placed in a jug of hot water till you are ready to clean them the stains do not get set.

BLAME MANIAC FOR ATTACK ON WOMAN DOCTOR

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Detectives of the Sixth Branch Bureau, seeking the man who stepped from the shadow of a tree and slashed Dr. Lillian M. Goodfellow, of No. 5,705 Fourteenth Avenue, Brooklyn, as she walked through a dark, lonely spot in Sixty-fifth Street, between Eleventh and Twelfth Avenues, Brooklyn, believe they have a maniac to deal with.

Dr. Goodfellow is forty years old and a physician. She is the wife of Dr. Eugene Goodfellow, also a physician. She was returning from her calls when attacked. The man slashed her about the breast, shoulders, arms and thighs. This is the second attack upon Dr. Goodfellow within two months.

After the attack Dr. Goodfellow walked twelve blocks to her home and collapsed. Examination showed she had suffered eleven wounds.

The only description she could furnish was that the man was about thirty years old and appeared to be a foreigner.

The scene of the attack is a sparsely settled section and inhabited only by foreigners. Several girls have been attacked there, and it was there that the police sought the assailant of Miss Agnes Waugh, whose case attracted much attention in October, 1911.

No attempt was made to steal Dr. Goodfellow's handbag, in which there was considerable money.

The husband of the physician said she was resting quietly and that her condition was not dangerous. He said his wife had attended patients in that neighbourhood, but he knew of no one whose enmity she had incurred.

"The theory that this is the work of a maniac is by no means beyond belief," said Dr. Goodfellow. "My wife has had no trouble with any one in the section."

The first attack on Dr. Goodfellow was equally mysterious, but not as serious.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

FORCEFUL SERMON BY THE REV. J. R. WEBB

Pastor of Murray St. Baptist Church Refers to Frivolous Spirit Shown by Some of the People of This City While Other Citizens Are Bleeding in the Trenches

In the course of his sermon in the Murray Street Baptist Church yesterday morning the Rev. J. R. Webb spoke forcefully in regard to the frivolity of some of the people of this country and city, while others bled in the trenches, and their loved ones at home spent anxious days and nights fearing for their safety. Mr. Webb told how one of his congregation had deplored the fact that certain local women, some of whom had sons at the front, had whiled away a portion of their time playing bridge, in the name of a Patriotic Society. From his remarks the pastor evidently took the same attitude toward that sort of thing.

In touching on the relationship of the war to Christianity and religious progress, Mr. Webb expressed his opinion that the Kingdom of God has never been nearer at hand than it is to-day. A certain newspaper had editorially expressed the opinion that those who had entered the war should not likely give up the struggle. The speaker heartily agreed. But the newspaper had not gone far enough into the matter, for, said the pastor, "The Lord, Who is in the darkness as well as in the light, is in this thing, and He will not let it drop. He will not let all this bleeding and suffering be for nought. He will not rest till every warring nation placed the crown upon His brow."

The text of the sermon was the 20th verse of the 5th chapter of Amos, which reads: "Shall not the day of the Lord be darkness and not light? Even very dark and no brightness in it." Amos, who prophesied the destruction of the House of Jeroboam by the sword, disclaimed that he, of himself, was any prophet. "I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son. But I was an herdman and a gatherer of sycamore fruit." But when the Lord chooses to take a man He makes him a prophet or any other kind of power in the community that would work out to the interests of the work he had in mind. Through Amos the Lord sent a message which wasn't so much what the people wished to hear as what it was good for them to hear. So it was to-day that a minister might take the pulpit and might deliver a true message from Christ, and yet anger or offend not only the younger Christians, but all Christians. As Paul had said, "Am I become thine enemy because I have told you the truth?"

To-day, as in the days of Amos, there are people in a certin spiritual condition, to whom brightness would be blasting and to whom gloom is glorious. That was not a pleasant thing to say or to listen to, but it was the truh. Sunrise is almost in sight the day that the people of the Lord realize that the day of the Lord may be the day of darkness as well as the day of light.

Among Christ's first words to the apostles was the admonition to "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God." That plainly meant to put the seeking of the Kingdom of God before your prosperity,—before your business — yes even before your family. In the words, "For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul," Christ had expressed the idea that the establishment of the Kingdom of God is worth so much that everything else sinks into insignificance beside that aim and purpose.

St. Paul had said, "For the Kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost." In that sentence we had the Kingdom of God. Not righteousness alone, not joy alone, not peace alone; nor was it righteousness and joy and peace alone. But it was righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost. Did we want only that righteousness and joy and peace which would enter our lives by the ministration of the Holy Spirit? If not then in praying "Thy kingdom come," we were asking for something we did not want.

There were some who said to themselves that they were not spiritually fit to pray "Thy kingdom come," and so did not let that prayer pass their lips. This was wrong, for it was Christ's own command that all should pray "Thy kingdom come." This was not a matter of choice, but a matter of necessity to all who hoped to follow Him.

"Is it not possible that we are nearer the Kingdom of God to-day than ever in the world before?" asked the pastor. Christ was indeed walking with us. But if we imagined that all the "chaff" to be "consumed" lay outside of our country, and was contained within the boundaries of foreign European nations, we were utterly at fault. In our own nation and in our own hearts there is chaff that must be burned up — "And friends," added Mr. Webb, "that is going to be before the darkness given way to light." One member of the congregation had come to him and told how she had seen a body of women, some of whose sons were bleeding at the front, sitting around a table playing bridge in the name of a society which were working in the interests of the cause of the Allies and the boys at the front.

All would admit that Lloyd George and Admiral Beatty were as loyal as any subjects of the British Empire, and yet both had given expression to the opinion that "It were infinitely better that we should lose our Britain beloved than the spiritual importance of the present moment." And all the prayerless plannings of a deceived people would never bring about a lasting peace. The speaker had read an editorial opinion saying that those responsible for the war should not lightly drop it. This was right, but that paper had not gone back far enough. "For the Lord, who is in the darkness as well as in the light, is in this thing, and He will not let it drop. He will not let all this bleeding and suffering be for naught. He will not rest till every warring nation places the crown upon His brow."

The darkness is conquered when we recognize that Jesus is in the darkness. Israel is again in the sieve, but, blessed thought! the sieve is in the hands of Christ, and not one kernel will fall to the ground. Let us then keep near to Him in the darkness of the present hour.

The Tea of The Allies

Success both socially and financially attended the "Tea of the Allies," given by the Canadian Kitchener League in the Turnbull Building on Saturday afternoon. The tea rooms presented a most fascinating appearance with the different booths gaily decorated, each to represent one of the allied nations. The costumes of the ladies in charge were splendidly carried out to harmonize with the country they represented. The young ladies who assisted at the tables were, The Misses Spence, Hatton, Forth, Lyall, Mather, Parker, and Adee.

Amongst those who dropped in during the afternoon were: Mrs. Cornish, Mrs. White, Mrs. Alymer, Miss Moberly, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Harstone, Mrs. Hatton, Mrs. Dela Fosse, Miss Elinor Collins, Mrs. Laudy, Mrs. Gladman, Mrs. Gordon Gladman, Mrs. Jamieson, Miss Littlefield, Mrs. Wigdess, Mrs. Wightman, Mrs. Spence, Mrs. Roland Denne, Mrs. Greene, Mrs. John Corbery, Mrs. Cavanah, Miss Hall, Mrs. Turner, Miss Ruth Robertson, Miss Marian Harstone, the Misses Amy and Jean Hill, Mrs. Dr. Grier, Mrs. Grant, Miss Isabel Hay, the Misses Macdonald (Edmonton), Miss Kerr (Cobourg), Miss Preece, Mrs. Gordon Grahame, Miss Grieves, Mrs. McElderry, Mrs. Elsden, Mrs. Mulholland and Mrs. Fessenden. Several of the officers of the 247th came in during the afternoon.

The Club is indebted not only to the Turnbull Company for the free use of the tea room, but also to Mr. Turner who kindly lent many beautiful flags, Mrs. Robert Fair for decorations and Mr. Greene for a splendid victrola and some beautiful records. The receipts for the afternoon were $55.

WHAT HE NEEDED.

General Hugh L. Scott was talking about strategy. "Too many strategists," he said, "jump at conclusions. They are too hasty. They begin a new movement before the old one is finished—finished. Hence all manner of errors. These strategists are like the floor walker whom a married man, having got separated from his wife in the crowd, approached and said — "Excuse me, but I've lost my wife—Collins,' said the floorwalker, 'ninth floor back. Gents mourning, eleventh floor, front.'"

NEW LIGHTING BIG IMPROVEMENT

Since Friday night the residents of Charlotte street west of the G.T.R. have had the opportunity of comparing the new system of lighting just installed with what was previously supplied and the present well lighted condition of the street right out to Monaghan Road is very favorably commented on.

The Chairman of the Committee, Ald. Evans and the Utilities Commission may well be pleased with the results attained in this endeavour to give the outlying districts better lighting service.

RELIEF FOR THE FIRE VICTIMS

The Ladies of George Street Methodist Church who have organized to collect and ship articles of clothing and bedding to the fire-swept district in New Ontario, are packing up the supplies on hand, on Wednesday. Will any person who cares to, please send any clothing or bedding on or before Wednesday next, in order that all the shipment may be made at the same time, and as early as possible, as the necessity is great owing to the cold in Northern Ontario, and an insufficient supply as yet of the articles required.

FORTY MILLION MEN IN ARMS IN EUROPE JOHN R. MOTT SAYS

NEW YORK, Nov. 13 — John R. Mott, general secretary of the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association, last night drew a vivid picture of war stricken Europe at a dinner in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the committee at the Waldorf-Astoria.

"There are now forty million men under arms in Europe," said Mr. Mott. "Not fewer than 12,000,000 are still in Germany. There are not fewer than that number in Russia. I believe government reports say 16,000,000. England has about 5,000,000, and France the same. The forty million does not include the 4,500,000 who have been laid under the sod. It does not include the 5,000,000 in the hospitals.

"The prison camps are vast barbed wire enclosures where thousands of men are walking around as if in sleep. They are packed in flimsy barracks so closely that they cannot sleep. What the Y.M.C.A. is planning to do is to erect buildings near these prison camps, containing a lecture hall, small rooms for study, a place where the men may have some education and recreation — to erect a chain of these 'colleges' from the Isle of Man to the forests of Vladivostok."

METHODIST MISSIONARIES ARE DOING THEIR BIT IN THE PRESENT WAR

Remaining at Their Posts at Request of British Authorities They Are Neutralizing the Anti-British Campaign of Germany While Practically Every Missionary's Son is in Khaki—Dr. Endicott's Splendid Address.

That the British authorities have asked our missionaries in foreign fields to remain at their post during the war because they know they are of the utmost value there; that even in spite of that it is difficult to keep the missionaries from coming home to enlist; that practically every missionaries's son of military age and fitness is in khaki; that our foreign missionaries, out of their all too slender salaries, have sent home thousands of dollars as subscriptions for patriotic purposes; that the foreign missionaries have attained an invaluable success in neutralizing the effect of the money spent by Germany to make charges against the British Empire in the press of neutral countries, and that the influence of the Christian missionaries to Africa and India has been very greatly responsible for the phenomenal loyalty of these two arms of the Empire, were facts revealed in his address in Trinity Church last evening, by the Rev. Dr. Endicott, General Superintendent of Missions of the Methodist Church in Canada. Rev. Dr. Endicott, in an unusual address to very large congregations, brought to the thought of everyone present, the great part the Foreign Missionaries have taken in the upbuilding of the Christian church and the British Empire. Dr. Endicott spoke on the theme, "The Contribution of the Foreign Missionaries to the Building Up of the British Empire."

We speak of the shameless brutality of the Germans, but this is nothing new. Look down through history and the trail of the nations is a bloody one. The business of building up a nation, was generally speaking, one of the cruellest processes imaginable. A great nation in expanding its boundaries often forgot humanity. Read the Old Testament with a view to nothing else but to trace the history of ancient nations. There is the story of Egypt, Babylon, Greece and Rome. Egypt had extended an invitation to the people of Israel, and Israel settled in the heart of Egypt in response to the latter's own invitation. Time passed and the Israelites, living a natural, industrious life, multiplied in numbers and grew in power, until Egypt began to fear that power. The Israelites were made slaves. Then they were given the toughest, heaviest work to do. Finally the Egyptian king ordered that every male child of their honoured guests, was to be drowned at birth! This was the process of Empire building—the national instinct of self-preservation. Jerusalem stood in the way of the Roman juggernaut and the city was destroyed. In the same way Belgium threatened to thwart the plans of Germany, and her territories were swarmed by the German hosts. So it had been the law of every nation—necessity knows no law.

Only Britain had escaped,—and she had escaped my the skin of her teeth. They were British ships that carried the slaves from Africa to America. British ships carried the opium to China, and British gunboats forced it on a reluctant people. Yes, Britain's escape from the common daring and fault of nations had been a very narrow one indeed!

Why? Because for the first time in history the great problems of an Empire in the making were being adequately coped with by the British Empire in the last one hundred years. This was only the result of the nation becoming more intensely Christian, and recognizing that being an Empire meant the assumption of certain obligations.

Germany would gladly pay from $100,000,000 to $200,000,000 to have had all British missionaries withdrawn from foreign soil. The presence of British missionaries in Africa and in India had prevented very grave situations there. Had the missionaries been recalled both those countries would have been ablaze with rebellion. But the natives there trusted and respected the Christian missionaries. These had treated them in the hospital, attended them while ill, and they had never robbed, or cheated or lied to the natives. The missionaries were trusted more by the natives than the natives were trusted by each other, and to a much greater extent than the British officials. They were trusted implicitly and in influencing the natives they had done far more than soldiers could ever do, and had helped in a very great measure to help the British Empire. As a result of their life and their work heathens were praying for the long life and the success of the King of England. The missionaries alone made it their life work to study the point of view of the natives, and the powers of these ministers to the heathen was so great that by protest they could save Britain from dealing harshly or unfairly with these Dominions.

In China and in other countries the presence, the character and the work of the missionaries had more than overbalanced the effect of the German propaganda for which German money secured space in the press of those countries. Vile charges were made against Britain, but owing to the natives' knowledge of the missionaries and their belief in them, the Germans and their charges were discredited.

The Empire had sent some of her most gifted men out as missionaries. For example of all the great men that had accomplished so much for the Empire in Egypt who is always regarded as the greatest. Was it Gordon, or Kitchener, or Roberts? Everyone, from King George himself, to the man in the rank and file of the church would agree that it was Livingstone — Livingstone, a man who made his life a sacrament to God and who died on his knees praying for Africa. "I'm not sure," said Dr. Endicott, "that you will not find the same in India and China and Japan—that the men who will be longest remembered and receive the highest tributes, are missionaries."

These were days when we are compelled to think about the British Empire. No matter where we begin in the morning the matter of the consideration of the welfare of the British Empire would come up before the day was over. And in the building up of the Empire we should not think the missionaries took no part. We all know that the missionaries don't go to foreign lands for that purpose —but if they did they couldn't build it up half so well. The missionary goes because he believes it is the glorious destiny of the Christian religion to triumph everywhere—because he believes that the time is coming when everyone who worships at all shall worship the One God, and when the expression of the religious side of every man shall be identical the world over. They go because the time of triumph is coming when all nations shall say: "One Lord, One Faith, One Baptism, One God and Father for us all, who is above all and in all." The main issue was to lift the heathen people out of their barbarism.

But the sending out of the missionaries had given rise to two very important bi-products. The sending out of missionaries had remade the church at home. The church would have been buried 'ere this had not its vision enlarged to the extent of sending their message to the peoples of the earth. A church that is circumscribed is domed. Christianity is not petty or local. It is a religion that has Dominion in it. It is Imperial, lofty and mighty. In days gone by we talked about saving souls but no soul is saved that is encased within itself.

They laughed when the first missionary was sent out, calling it an excess of enthusiasm and fanaticism. But they lived to bless them and erect monuments in memory of their work and lives.

The more we look at it the more we see that our foreign missionaries are our Foreign legions. They are men of exactly the same spirit as the heroes of the Marne and the Ypre—men who were not content to stay at home. If any man to-day says he does not believe in missions it it not because he is too large-hearted, or too broad or too wise, but his views could be explained by very inferior reasons. No man to-day who is big enough or worthy enough to be a Christian sneers at the missionary work now. For that is the King's business.

The Foreign Missionaries, said the speaker, were qualified to be Foreign Legions by reason of their loyalty. No one loves the Union Jack properly until he has seen it floating in a foreign land or in a foreign harbour. And often the speaker could have wept for joy at the sight of the old flag. Every missionary would have come home to enlist had they been cabled, but they had to cable them to keep them there. The British authorities had asked the missionaries to remain at their posts, but even at that some had come home to enlist. Practically every son of every missionary is in khaki. And the missionary is increasingly loyal as the years go by. He knows more than we know what the British Empire means. He knows that if she were blotted out there would be no one to take her place. He knows too, that in spite of all her mistakes, the Britsih Empire stands high in the favour of God. It is a glorious thing to think that we have reached the stage when not a single inch of our land was assailed, yet the plight of Belgium so gripped the conscience of the nation that we threw ourselves into the struggle.

Concluding the speaker urged that the missions were well worthy of support and asked for that support from the congregation.

Yesterday was missionary Sunday in the Methodist churches of Peterborough. At George St. Church Mr. T. F. Harrison, of Cobourg, gave an address in the morning, while Rev. W. S. Reid, B.A., ex-president of the Saskatchewan Conference, was the preacher in the evening. At the Trinity Methodist Church the speakers were, Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, of Belleville, in the morning, and Rev. Dr. Endicott in the evening. The latter was at Mark St. Methodist Church in the morning, while the pulpit in that church was occupied in the evening by Mr. C. E. Weeks, B.A., of Lindsay. The speakers at St. James' Church were Messrs. F. E. O'Flynn and Mr. C. E. Weeks.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE GEISHA

Complete Rehearsal Will Take Place To-Morrow Night

The rehearsal of Act 2 of the "Geisha" on Friday and Saturday nights completed the preliminary rehearsal of the opera, now soon to be presented. A complete rehearsal will be held on Tuesday next at 7 p.m. when all the company are expected to be on hand. No visitors will be admitted. Principals who can so arrange are asked to assemble at 285 Park street. Ladies at 8, Gentlemen at 8.30 p.m. A rehearsal with orchestra will if possible be arranged on Friday. Three of the men who so finely played the "Geisha" score both here and at the Royal Alexander, Toronto, namely, Bandmaster Hughes, Sergt. Howarth and Sergt. Barnes are on active service. Lieut. Gliddon and his son have been asked to assist at this presentation, as well as Mr. W. Cunningham and Mr. Robert Beach with Mr. R. J. Devey as conductor and pianist. The contract for the Opera House has been signed and tickets for sale issued to the Progressive Club and to members of the company.

THE FOOD VALUE OF PURE MILK

Mr. R. J. Waller's Monaghan Dairy Supplies Rich and Wholesome Milk

It is gratifying to know that an increased interest is being taken by the milk vendors from the country to improve their milking herds, their dairy houses and their delivery waggons. Much of the old style methods of housing cows, milking them and delivering the milk has been changed, and the milk men are alive to the necessity of keeping in line with the sanitary education of the day. In the matter of richness and purity of milk, a great improvement has also taken place. There is more butter-fat and less adulteration to be found in the milk now than formerly. One is pleased to hear of the high percentage of butter fat in some of the large dairies, one instance of which may be mentioned is that of Mr. R. J. Waller on Monaghan. The result of a few different inspections made of the milk from this dairy is highly creditable, the percentage of butter fat being the highest. It will be better understood when it is explained that the fats in milk, which rise to the top as cream, correspond to the fat of meat or oil, and supplies heat and muscular power. In the safeguarding of his milk supply, Mr. Waller has spared no pains in perfecting his dairy house and premises. His splendid barns and stables are equipped in the most modern manner and milking herd are comfortably housed and their premises are a model of cleanliness. No deleterious substance has been found in the Waller dairy milk. The healthiest cows on the farm supply the milk for the city customers, and his milk route, as a consequence continues to grow.

WILSON IS BACK AT WORK

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13. President Wilson was back at work in Washington to-day. He faced a big job which must be cleaned up.

Pending the receipt of a message from Charles E. Hughes, conceding Democratic victory in the election, President withheld any announcement regarding his policies for the next four years. He has intimated to intimate friends, however, that he will issue some statement upon receipt of Hughes' congratulations.

ANNUAL MEETING HELD AT OTTAWA

The annual meeting of the International Sailors' Missionary Association was held today in Ottawa.

The report of the years work was laid before the Board by the Secretary, Mr. James S. Potter, which revealed a large amount of aggressive and important work. Mr. and Mrs. John Lang of Keene Celebrate Golden Wedding

Thursday Nov. 9th Was the 50th Anniversary of Their Marriage—Their Attendants Present—Two Grandsons at the Front—A Gathering of the Clans

Mr. and Mrs. John Lang, of Keene, celebrated their golden wedding at their home on Thursday, November 9th, with their children, grand-children, brothers and sisters, in what proved to be one of the most joyous occasions in their long and happy half-century of wedded life in Otonabee. The longevity the old township seems to foster was exemplified in the presence of the bridesmaid and best man, who assisted at Mr. and Mrs. Lang's marriage. They were Mrs. William Miller, sister of the groom, and Mr. Andrew Shearer, brother of the bride.

There were only two absentees from this gathering of the clan of Lang. Roy Thompson and his brother, Lang Thompson, sons of Mrs. Wm. Thompson, of Mt. Julian, who are with the Canadian forces overseas. An interesting feature of the celebration was Mr. Lang's presentation of a five dollar gold piece to his grand-daughter, Miss Bessie Thompson, in recognition of her coolness and bravery in swimming to shore with her father in their recent accident on Clear Lake.

Those Present.

Mr. and Mrs. Lang's daughters and sons, all of whom reside in Otonabee and Peterborough, were present as follows: Mrs. Edgar Wood, Mrs. Wm. Thompson, Mrs. Geo. Gall, Mrs. G. A. Gillespie, and John Lang, Jr., and James B. Lang. The grand-children and also the brothers and sisters of Mr. and Mrs. Lang were also present, the assembly numbering about sixty persons. The company gathered in the afternoon, and all gathered at dinner. Nor were there any there without having on the wedding garment.

Address Presented.

The following address was read by Mrs. Edgar Wood, and Mr. Jas. B. Lang presented his father with a gold chain and charm and his mother a gold brooch:

Dear Father and Mother,—On this the anniversary of your wedding day, we, your children, wish to convey to you both, our love and respect for all that you have done for us, not only during the time of our dependence upon you, but also for the help and counsel always so willingly extended to us, each and all, since we left the old home to make new homes for ourselves.

We feel that we cannot let this anniversary pass without telling you how sincerely we appreciate the patient self-denial you both have practiced for our benefit during the past fifty years.

Your honest Christian dealings with your own family and also with your neighbours, will always stand out as a bright example for your children and grand-children.

We trust that you may both be long spared to us; and wish for you in the declining years of your life all the happiness that it has been your pleasure to bestow on us in the past. We would ask you to accept these small tokens in remembrance of your golden wedding anniversary, and hope that you will be long spared to use them.

Signed on behalf of the family,

Agnes Lang Wood,
James B. Lang.

Mr. Lang made a happy reply of appreciation, and as an evidence of their vigor and the nearness of their yesterdays, Mr. and Mrs. Lang and Mr. Andrew Shearer and Mrs. W. Miller danced a Scotch reel.

Rev. Mr. McEachern, of Keene, was a guest, who with Mr. G. A. Gillespie and others, made brief, felicitous speeches after dinner.

Mr. Lang was a Liberal member of Parliament, representing East Peterborough for twelve years. Their host of friends will unite in congratulating Mr. and Mrs. Lang in their golden wedding, and wish for them continued health and happiness.

Fighting Is Growing on All Fronts

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 13.—The War Office announcements from Entente and Central Powers' capitals to-day show the fighting on all fronts is growing, not only in the intensity of the conflicts, but also in the terrain affected. There were minor conflicting reports regarding certain isolated battles, but in the main all War Office reports tended to bear out the Allied claims of progress.

Bulgarian forces continue their retreat before the advancing Serbians on the Cerna, and King Peter's troops, London claims, and Berlin admits, have captured Iven village.

Farmers Ship Milk To Toronto For the Dairies

Cans of milk—surplus milk from Otonabee farms — disappearing this morning in the general direction of Toronto for city dairies, represented the glimmering hopes of citizens who expected that the closing of the cheese factories would turn considerable milk from the cheese vats into butter churns on the individual farms and, in consequence, topple the price back from its approximate fifty cents to below forty cents. The shipment this morning was unusually large as the cans were loaded on to the morning G. T. R. train. Milk that until recently went to the Keene Lang and Shearer factories was added to the regular shipments and rumors of ultimatums reaching the local market as dairy butter, it will be peddled in Toronto milk bottles. This does not mean that all the milk that might have been expected to relieve the butter situation is going out of town, but it does indicate that the farmers have little trouble in disposing of it. Next Saturday's local price of butter should be lower than last Saturday's.

ULSTER'S ENLISTMENT

London Chronicle: Sir Edward Carson boasts of Ulster's contribution to the army. There is really very little to boast about in it. If you compare urban Ulster with the rest of the urban Ireland the proportionate contributions are not very dissimilar. The number of Ulster Protestants who have joined the army since the outbreak of the war is below 45,000. As Ulster has a Protestant population of 900,000, this contribution works out at less than five per cent. Such a proportion from the province that so loudly vaunts its loyalty is decidedly disappointing. It is significant, too, that the recruiting campaign in Ulster last August on behalf of the Ulster division was a complete failure. Ulster cannot decently chide the other provinces, except Connaught.

Judge Disposes Watch and Chain Under Dispute

Judgment was given to-day in the surrogate court by His Honour Judge Hoyles as to the disposition of a gold watch held by the executors of the Sarah Fitzgerald estate. The watch and chain were claimed by two parties, Mr. William Holmes and Mrs. Mary Church, each of whom produced evidence to show that the late Mrs. Fitzgerald had made a gift to them of the watch and chain before her death. At the trial it came out that Mrs. Fitzgerald made it a sort of habit to make a present of the watch and chain to anyone who at the time took her fancy. On one occasion she promised them to Mr. Wm. Bell of Smith, on the birth of a daughter of Mr. Bell being named after her. His Honour decided that Mrs. Church was the only party to whom delivery of the watch had ever been made, and judgment was given in her favour. Costs attached to the chain once belonged to the grandfather of Mrs. Church and was considered as heirloom in the family.

Mr. B. H. Bath represented Mr. Sisson, Mr. Joseph Wearing acted for Mrs. Church and Mr. J. E. L. Goodwill appeared for the executors.

HAD THE TOWER BEEN PORTABLE HE WOULD HAVE TAKEN IT ALSO

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—John R. Hegeman president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has met the nerviest hornyhanded son of toil that ever escaped violence at the hands of a mob or jail at the hands of the law. This interesting person went last week into Mr. Hegeman's office, and under the president's very nose stole from the life insurance company.

One morning the first part of last week a stockily built young man went to the janitor of the Metropolitan Building, at No. 1 Madison avenue, and demanded an assistant. "I want to take down some awnings and awning rods," he said. The janitor looked at him quite casually and told him that he didn't have a man to spare for that work. The steeksman, who was clad in overalls and a jumper, appeared to be very much disgusted, but announced that he would do the job alone.

As nearly as could be learned he began operations on the fifth floor. He went into an office there, and removed the awning rods from several windows, and then he went to the floor above and went into the office of Robert E. Livingston. Mr. Livingston asked him what he wanted, and he said that he had come to remove the awnings.

"But they were removed two days ago," Mr. Livingston said. "I know they were, but I want the rods," the unfortunate one responded.

Mr. Livingston thought it was so unusual that he called up the superintendent of the building and the latter said he supposed it was all right. By that time Mr. Livingston finished his conversation the man had removed the rods from two windows, working rapidly.

Then he went to the general office of the insurance company. On the plea that he wanted to take down the awnings he was permitted to enter the private office of Mr. Hegeman. There he also worked swiftly, but removed the rods, leaving the awnings flapping about over the windows. From Mr. Hegeman's office he went to the offices of several of the vice-presidents of the company and did the same thing.

Two days later Mr. Livingstone met the building superintendent. "Why did you go to the trouble to remove the awning rods the other day?" Mr. Livingston asked him.

"We didn't go to the trouble, some one else did," was the reply.

"Why on earth would any one want to remove awning rods?" Mr. Livingstone persisted.

"Because the awning rods in this building are made of bronze and not iron," the superintendent said. "They are quite valuable and that stranger carried as a labourer knew it. He took about $50 worth of rods out during the course of an hour, and some of them from Mr. Hegemans private office. That man had more nerve than any soldier in the trenches."

Scene in the great propaganda picture at The Grand Friday and Saturday of this week, entitled "The Battle of the Somme."

THE Battle OF THE Somme

"THE GREATEST MOVING PICTURE IN THE WORLD"

Official endorsement and approval by the Board of Censors and the Appeal Board of Ontario, it became known yesterday, has been placed upon the presentation in this province of the official motion pictures of "The Battle of the Somme," which, after a successful run in England, have been released for exhibition in Canada.

That the film is the greatest masterpiece he has seen and well worth the time of every Canadian was the opinion expressed by Hon. T. W. McGarry, provincial treasurer and head of the appeal board, which is the highest authority in Ontario in the censorship of motion pictures, in an exclusive interview of a World reporter yesterday.

After the board of censors had seen the film and placed its official O. K. upon their exhibition in Ontario, the members voluntarily decided to have it presented before the appeal board. Among those who were present at the latter presentation were Sir John Hendrie lieutenant-governor, Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, minister of lands, forests and mines, and Mrs. Ferguson, Hon. Rupert Guinness and Lady Guinness, Hon. Col. Fraser, A.D.C. to the lieutenant-governor; Hon. T. W. McGarry and Hon. I. B. Lucas, attorney-general.

The Finest Ever.

"The pictures are the finest I have ever seen," declared Mr. McGarry. "They are vastly different from any others I have witnessed. All others seem to deal with action going on miles behind the front, but in 'The Battle of the Somme' pictures the scenes are taken in the first-line trenches.

"The most marvelous feature of the picture," he continued, "was the reproduction of the shelling of the trenches. It is all certainly realistic. Of course some of the episodes might be termed gruesome because they show actual battle action in which men are killed, but can be witnessed without any unpleasant feeling."

All of those who saw the picture when it was presented to the appeal board were intensely interested, and all of them, including Sir John Hendrie, heartily approve their exhibition. Both Lady Guinness and Mrs. Ferguson saw the entire picture and declare that women can witness the film without hesitation. Both of these ladies approve the picture.

"The "Battle of the Somme" pictures represent the first film depicting actual warfare on the British front which has been shown in the press without British censorship. Sir Douglas Haig, the British commander-in-chief edited the wording of the film, but changed only a few subtitles.

War as War Is.

War films have become a familiar feature in picture house programmes. The picture omits little of the horrors and nothing of the heroism and the sustained endeavour of the scenes upon the cinematograph gaze. Those who argue that the ghastliness of the war should not be so forcefully brought home to the public misjudge the purpose of the film. It is intended as an education, not an entertainment. The abiding impression of those who witness it is one of horror and repulsion, not so much from war in general but from the action of those who brought this terrible cataclysm on civilization.

This great picture will appear in Peterborough next week.

At the Empire

In all of her previous Lasky productions, Blanche Sweet has had husbands thrust upon her. She has been pursued by hundreds of admirers and had many at her feet, but in her forth coming production "The Thousand Dollar Husband," she buys a husband and strange as it may seem, the purchase does not welcome the sale. In this production, Miss Sweet is first seen as a Swedish maid of all work in a college boarding house. She is madly in love with one of the students and when she suddenly becomes wealthy and the young man faces ruin, she offers to pay his debts if he will marry her. How the wealthy bride of the loveless marriage is set upon by a band of crooks and how she is eventually saved and wins the love of her husband goes to make one of the most unusual photodramas ever presented.

The Jesse L. Lasky Company has surrounded Miss Sweet with a cast of unusual excellence, including Theodore Roberts, Tom Forman, Jane Wolff, Horace B. Carpenter, Lucie LaVarney and others.

THE "BATTLE CRY OF PEACE"

"The Battle Cry of Peace" to be shown at The Grand Opera House on Friday and Saturday next contains spectacular scenes never before equalled in any photo drama. A large invading army is seen marching through the streets of New York and no trouble or expense was spared to make the scene a massive one. As far as the eye can see the troopers march on pairs towards the great financial center.

VALUABLE HORSE DIED.

Apparently Had Injured Itself in a Previous Combat.

W. J. Robinson, of Dublin Street, lost a horse, valued at $300, on Sunday morning. After leading it from the stable it broke away and scampered around the lot. Shortly after it was hitched up, and had proceeded only a short distance when it dropped in the shafts, dying almost immediately. It had probably injured itself internally in the exuberant display of its freedom.

Ho! For The Xmas Season

Shop early has been the Christmas slogan for many seasons, let it be practiced this year. We are prepared! Your benefits will manifold by early buying, you will see and buy the new things first, your range to choose from will be greater and the hurry scurry of the last days will be avoided. A few suggestions below.

Oft has the Handkerchief been presented as a Christmas Gift, but its popularity never expires. If distinctness is any indication of popularity this season will know no bounds for the Handkerchief. They are here in great array; plain linen, fancy crepes, embroidered edges and corners and many with the lace edging on all four sides.

In the Fancy Goods Department, you will find much to interest you—all bedecked with dainty novelties; opera bags, combing jackets, fancy towels with embroidered ends, pretty pink or blue wash cloths with crotchet edges, centrepieces, runners, etc., etc. From now on this stock will be diminishing It is wise to make your Christmas selection now.

Ribbons in many hues that resemble a flower garden—plains in various widths - this department is a riot of pleasing tints. Christmas makes a great demand on the ribbon market each year and this year will the supply meet the demand? Our supply will! Large purchases months ago make it possible. However an early choice will be a wise one.

What is more befitting for a gift than a comely piece of Neckwear, what pleases her more than to have much laciness or sheer materials hanging over her shoulders and encasing her neck? You will find this section replete with neckwear, not of the ordinary sort, but unique in design, but sensible in appearance. Remember this section.

Linens have ever been and ever will be appreciated by the housewife - she takes great pride in her table—rest assured that linen will be acceptable. Snowy white, with clear cut standing satins designs, such are the damasks; centres with lacy edges, the maderias with their handsome eyelet work, towels aplenty, doylies gre t and small, etc. Most complete stock in the City.

Pretty bits of laces for edging the fancy work piece, wider pieces for flouncing the undergarment or making the dress for the little tot. Whatever the requirment, you will find it here. A recent import shipment arrived to swell our Christmas stock and you need not look elsewhere, our stock will meet your demands.

INTERESTING LETTERS FROM DRIVER DEVEY

Peterboro' Boy Gives Some Incidents of Life at the Front—Hit on the Head by Piece of Shell But Escaped With a Bump

MEETS PETERBORO BOYS

Driver Harold J. Devey, writes from "Somewhere in France" Oct. 1st:

My Dear Mother,—Your welcome letter of September 13th to hand which I was glad to get, with some others a long time on the way. We are back from the trenches again and safe and sound. You ask who is my chum since Art Horsfield and I were separated. It is Fred Primeau who used to be in the "Examiner", his sister was in the "Mikado". I miss Art quite a lot, but it can't be helped. Well, mother, I'm unable to go to church, for you see we have a big job before us and there is no "Sunday" that is, on active service. Our men have been making bombing raids against what we believe is the "Wurtemberges" cracks, for they never wait to hold the front, but mine, the trenches instead. Our business is to hold their support so that they can't blow us up.

October 2. We are to move up to the front again, so this won't be posted for a few days. I have a new rig out of "Imperials" (lion and unicorn buttons and a pair of "Kitchener's Dreadnoughts" (boots). I will finish later when I get back and have a chance to post.

October 11. Back again safely, as well as ever, so will post this or you will be worrying.

Your loving son,
HAROLD.

Another letter dated 17th says: I was up an another working party. It sure was hot here for a while, and as we moved away a shell burst not far away, pieces flying in all directions. One piece glanced off my head and knocked my hat flying. I never found it either. I wasn't wounded, but got a bump on my head like a marble and lost a bit of skin. Cedric Evans lost no time in getting over. Some of the bunch are at camp 36 miles back. That is too bad about Dr. Cameron. I hope he is getting all right. I hope dad gets the Geisha off all right. I wouldn't mind being one of the officers at all.

October 22. No letters to hand, but three parcels from England and one from you. Candies and peanuts were great and the heater will come in fine. It is very cold, ice is forming over the pools in the shell holes. I met Claude Manley yesterday morning, whose place I took in the Post Office. He did not know I had enlisted. I also met Jim Pearson and a boy named Victor who lived on Park street. I sleep in a dug out on ammunition boxes (empty of course). We don't get many papers so do not know what is going on, but we hear a rumor that the war will be over by Christmas as the German women can no longer stand the strain of so much work. Remember me to the choir. Love to all and to yourself especially.

Your loving son,
HAROLD.

MR. GORDON ADVISED CLIENT TO REFUSE TO ANSWER QUESTIONS EXCEPT WHERE HE GOT LIQUOR

Alonso Yorke, fined $10 on October 28th for being drunk in a public place, appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning, while Chief Thompson examined him in regard to where he obtained the liquor. Any expectations the Chief may have had of educing incriminatory evidence were frustrated, however, for Yorke repeated the account he gave two weeks ago, when he told of draining a flask he had kept in his trunk.

In his written statement to Detective Newhall Yorke said he had received two quarts of whiskey that Saturday afternoon, Oct. 28th, from an express office, of having drank one of the bottles and hidden the other behind the barn.

Is that statement true, Yorke? the Chief asked.

No.

Wherein is it not true? Magistrate Dumble asked.

I didn't get it from Montreal nor at any express office.

Where did you get your liquir on Saturday the 28th?

I got it at home in my trunk I had about three parts of a fifty cent flask I bought it about ten weeks ago.

Mr. Gordon claimed that under the statute Chief Thompson could only examine the accused on the point of where he got his liquor, and not where he drank from the bottle previous to his arrest and similar questions aside from the source of liquor.

Magistrate Dumble replied that Yorke might be questioned in a general way to test his veracity. He had stated that he, a drinking man, had kept a bottle of whiskey in his house two months without drinking it.

Mr. Gordon read the section of the Act, but Chief Thompson contended that he was not confined to the single point of where the whiskey came from.

Mr. Gordon replied that under the former Act a man could not be compelled to state where he got his liquor, but under the Temperance Act it is provided that a man found guilty of being drunk in a public place, "shall be compellable to state the name of the person from whom and the place in which he obtained the liquor."

Mr. Dumble—I'll rule against you.

Pursuing his examination Chief Thompson asked Yorke when he had taken a drink from the bottle previous to Oct. 28th.

Mr. Gordon — Don't answer that question. If they commit you to jail there'll be some fund. We might as well have this thing tried right now.

Chief — How many drinks did you have before leaving the house? No answer, on advice of counsel.

Yorke answered several questions, but was silent to the others.

The case was then dropped.

THE STUDY OF RUSSIA

The public is reminded of the interesting course in the "Study of Russia," which will be continued at the Y.W.C.A. to-morrow night. Miss Williams of the Collegiate staff, will give a paper on the Resources, Products and Transportation of Russia. All interested are cordially invited.

The Peterborough Choral Society

Will the members please note that the weekly practice of The Messiah will be held to-morrow (Tuesday) evening, in the Collegiate Hall, at 8 o'clock, sharp, at which hour they are all requested to be in their places. Last week quite a number of new singers presented themselves, and the opportunity is here taken of again reminding friends desirous of taking part in the Oratorio, that it is incumbent upon them to be in attendance not later than the end of this month. All singers are welcome.—The Secretary.

PAYS $10 FINE FOR A SATURDAY DRUNK

Another unfortunate was fined ten dollars in the Police Court this morning, for having been drunk in a public place on Saturday evening. About 6 o'clock P. C. Blade separated him from one of the corner posts around which he was swinging precariously in a parabolic orbit.

Replying to the charge the man stated that he couldn't say he was not drunk.

But were you asked Chief Thompson.

"Yes," was the expected reply.

It was reported that he got his whiskey at home from a supply imported from Montreal. Apparently he had filled two flasks and thus loaded to the hatches went out to give the police something to do. And they did it.

The two bottles were empty when the man was arrested, but the evidence as to where all or part of the contents had gone was conclusive.

The fine was paid.

A Well Appointed Motor Truck

The Peterborough Creamery's Improved Service

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, proprietor of the Peterborough Dairy and Creamery, has invested in an up-to-date Studebaker Motor truck for general delivery. It is a complete and well-appointed outfit, and a good looker. It has a four-cylinder, 40-horse power engine and is capable of doing speedy work, up hill as well as on the level. It has an adjustable front seat, half of which may be lifted up to allow passing into the body of the car, as well as a folding tail-board step, which is very convenient from general utility. The truck has a wide-arched, strong top, and side curtains for comfort and safety. It is a self-starter, has side-lights and other first-class improvements.

MR. HOWDEN HAD A CLOSE CALL

Mr. R. Howden, Romaine street, was nearly the victim of being run down with an automobile on Saturday evening on George street, at the C. P. R. station. The cause of the trouble was that the car was without lights, although it was dark. Very few drivers of automobiles are guilty of running their cars with the lights out, but when such a thing happens there is generally an accident, or it is just averted, as was the case on Saturday. Owners and drivers of automobiles should be very particular in this regard.

THE SONGSTERS AT BYERSVILLE

Conducted a Sunday Evening Meeting at the S. A. Temple

The Byersville Branch of the Salvation Army was favored last night, at the evening service, with a visit from the Songster Brigade of the Mother Corps, Peterborough No. 1.

A good open air meeting was held at the corner of Chamberlen street, and the Boundry, which, it is hoped, will have far-reaching results.

The inside meeting was taken charge of by the Songster Brigade, Secretary Gandy acting as director of ceremonies.

The Songsters, conducted by Songster Leader Forde, rendered some very beautiful selections, the first one entitled "God Bless our Soldier Boys" carried many, in thought and prayer, to those of their own loved ones at the battle front.

The male quartette, Messrs. Gandy, Forde, Naish and Calvert sang a lovely piece entitled "The Wayside Cross." Other beautiful selections were given by the songsters including a solo by Songster W. Boorman.

Mrs. H. Hedge read the Word of God from the 116th Palam, and made a few very touching remarks, regarding the steadfastness of God's love for His creatures, even through the darkest hours. Her words went home to the hearts of those who listened, and not a few eyes were moist.

The meeting closed all feeling it had been a profitable time spent together.

Next Sunday, Nov. 19th, the evening service at Byersville will be conducted by Mrs. Adj. McElhiney, at 7 p.m. Come and bring a friend.—Com

Davis Hill Will Appear Before Judge Huycke Without a Jury.

Davis Hill appeared before Judge Huycke and elected to be tried by him without a jury on Tuesday, November 28th. Mr. Gordon appeared for the prisoner, and Mr. Peck represented Crown Attorney Hanon. Hill is charged with the theft of cattle from Dummer farmers.

Concluding Service of Dedication Festival

The Dedication Festival services at St. John's concluded with fully choral evensong, last night. The choristers gave evidence of careful and earnest rehearsals, and their rendition of the grand old liturgical services was such as can only come from pure love of the work, a voluntary spirit of service that is beyond all praise.

"With voice as full and strong,"
"As ocean's surging praise,"
"Send forth the hymns our fathers loved,"
"The psalms of ancient days."

The music was chosen by the choirmaster from the rich treasures of ancient and modern periods, the opening versicles and responses being sung to Tallis, whose glorious setting has for centuries occupied a place of honour in both Matins and Evensong. Chants used in the antiphonal method included Gregorians, of the actual composers of which we have no certain record. Dr. Hopkins' Te Deum in C for parish choirs, was prepared and used with fine effect. The Canticles at Evensong were by Winchester, whose dignified music is always acceptable. The phrasing of hymns and psalms, always a feature of St. John's choir work, was beautifully done, and the them of the Dedication Festival, worship and praise, fittingly expressed in the closing verse of the Recessional hymn:

"Almighty Christ, to Thee our voices ring,
"Glory for evermore; to Thee we bring
"An endless Alleluia. Amen."

A glance round the chancel at the white robed choristers brought vividly to mind those other choristers of less than three years ago, who have donned the uniform to fight for those near and dear to them. Two generations of the choir member up, so to speak, have departed for the war; contingents one and two took elegible men over twenty one, since then all the young men over eighteen, the last one leaving with Major Canon Davidson in the 93rd Battalion.

At the morning service Mrs. A. L. Amys sang very finely, a new composition, "Let Us Have Peace," and at Evensong the duet in the anthem, "There is a Land of Peace," with Mr. H. W. Morphet, their voices blending well together. Here it may be remarked that, in view of the services of two prominent lady members being presently not available, the addition of Mrs. Amys effectively reinforces an already strong section. She has a voice of splendid quality, with a splendidly clear and resonant musical quality, especially in the lower and middle registers, and used in solo or duet with artistic effect and finish. In the anthem from Gaul's "Holy City," also sung at Evensong, the solo (tenor), and the quartette, were excellently sung, the former by Mr. Walter Hutchinson, and the latter by Miss Quartermaine, Mrs. George Evans, Mr. Alfred Marshall, Mr. Harry Flowers and Mr. Hall.

Hearty thanks to the choristers were extended by the choirmaster and Rev. W. H. White, of St. Luke's, who expressed his great pleasure at officiating at the Festival.

Mr. R. J. Devey was assisted at the organ by Mr. Cyril Devey, who has been away for some Sundays deputising at other organs, including Cobourg and Lindsay.

THE CALL.

Help lighten the load!
Humanity stumbles ahead on its road;
Urged on o'er the deserts, beset by the goad;
Mens bend under burdens of hunger and care
And women must suffer and toil and despair;
Yes, even the children astray in the strife,
Are bowed by the weight till they weary of life.
Hark; unto each soul that is hero, not slave,
How clear sounds the call to arise and be brave.
Help lighten the load!

Help lighten the load!
With all of the strength that the heart can command,
With all of the power of brain and of hand,
With wills set to sacrifice, struggle, and dare,
With love that sees ever each burden to share.
With unflagging endeavour that stops not to ask,
The length of the journey, the cost of the task.
Come, sons of the kingdom! Come, children of God!
And along the dark path by the world's anguish trod
Help, lighten the load
—Priscilla Leonard, in the Outlook.

SIR SAM HUGHES HAS RESIGNED

Official Announcement to That Effect Was Made Yesterday-Oratorical Outburst in Toronto Said to Have Hastened the End

NO SUCCESSOR NAMED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Nov. 14.—The resignation of Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, has been officially announced. It is stated that Premier Borden requested Sir Sam's resignation last Friday. Yesterday Sir Sam had a long conference with Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., and Sir William McKenzie.

OTTAWA, Nov. 14.—Latest reports indicate that Sir Sam Hughes' resignation was due to differences with the Prime Minister.

Sir Sam's speeches in Toronto appear to have had much to do with turning the scale for Sir Robert Borden. No successor has yet been named, although four names have been mentioned, namely, Hon. A. E. Kemp, Sir James Lougheed, F. B. McCurdy and Col. Hugh Clark.

Will Call Out All Fit Civilians

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN Nov. 14.—German government is to call all fit civilians to service.

PRUSSIANS REALIZE DEFEAT HOPE FOR PEACE WITHIN YEAR

Neutral Resident of Berlin, Writing From Sweden, Explains That Only Expectation Now is to Make Terms as Soon as Possible by Harrassing British—Munition Output of the Allies Now Exceeds the German Output—Germany's Man Power Not Sufficient to Carry the War to a Successful Issue.

THE PEOPLE WANT PEACE

LONDON, Nov. 14.—That Germany is no longer under delusion about the result of the war and that twelve months from now is the limit of her endurance are set forth as facts by a distinguished neutral who writes from Stockholm about the official attitude on the present position of the war. The writer is a resident in Berlin and has been in Sweden for a few days.

"I left Berlin about a week ago," he says, "and there is no mistake about the position there. It may be taken as quite definite that the authorities realise that the war is lost. Two facts stand out clearly to the Germans in power. The first is that while Germany still retains the power to manufacture munitions at a large and formidable rate, the output of the Allies is now in advance of the German output, and the significance of this is realised.

"The second point is even more important. It is recognised that reserves of man power are not sufficient to allow Germany to conduct the war to a victorious issue. It is believed that a defensive war can be conducted for a considerable time—but that is all. The German leaders are not blinking the fact that disaster will come upon them if the Allies continue operations at the present pace and intensity.

THE OFFENSIVE ON THE SOMME

"The offensive on the Somme is the crucial thing. They have no illusions about this. They believe they can impede the Allies and hold them back for a long time, but they realise they cannot do it indefinitely. It is privately acknowledged that sooner or later the Allies must break through. More than this, the Germans have calculated the limit of time they can effectively withstand the attacks on the Western front. They put that limit at twelve months. They know, however, that the Allies may get through before.

"With these facts in mind they have framed their future course of action. They are seeking for a peace which shall not brand them as defeated, and to get it they will make considerable sacrifices. The whole of their new plans will be co-ordinated toward that end. Whatever may be their hars for the future, they have still at their command vast fighting forces of various kinds. They are going to use them to bring about this peace which they want so badly.

ATTEMPT TO SMASH ROUMANIA

"First of all they have made up their minds to smash Roumania completely, not only for the sake of the material advantages but also for the moral effect. They are then going to throw discretion to the winds with reference to the submarines and use their undersea vessels to annoy and hurt Great Britain as much as possible. They will be quite careless of the feelings of neutrals. The general idea is not to conquer Britain but by annoyances, losses and perils to increase a desire for peace, which they are sure exists among some sections of the population already. The more hateful the war is made for Britain the more easily will she come into line with regard to peace proposals. And Germany must have peace by a year from now. The latter is not stated in so many words, but that is what the position comes to. I saw a letter the other day from one of the national liberals in the Reichstag, in which occurred the words, 'What are we to do to save Germany?'

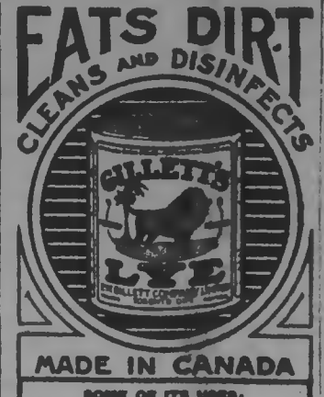
"I heard, too, of a remark by Captain Persius, the well known writer, who, in referring to the war hardships in certain parts, said it was a terrible thing for a country to desire revolution and to have the power of making a revolution, but it was a still more terrible thing for the desire to exist without the power of bringing about the revolution. He was referring to the present position in Germany. There can be no revolution, because those who might make it are engaged at the front. There exists, however, among the common people the heartiest desire for peace. It is realised that this feeling will produce tremendous effects whenever the Allies achieve a wholesale military victory."

Latest British Victory Growing In Territory

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Nov. 14. — British continue to advance on a five mile front north of the Ancre and over four thousand prisoners have already been brought in. The British victory on the western front is growing in territory and captures. Over four thousand men, ten machine guns and heavy supplies taken with three fortified villages, since Sunday morning.

Women orators will tour Illinois, from one end to the other, in opposition to the re-election of President Wilson.



ALLIED AIR SQUADRON BOMBARD OSTEND

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Two small German patrol boats sunk, several damaged and supplies blown up by the allied air squadron which bombarded Ostend harbour Sunday.

Von Mackensen's Vaunted Drive Is Terminating In An Inglorious Defeat

Mystery of Cernavoda Bridge in Relation to Recent Battle is Cleared Up—A Well Defended Frontier—The Enemy is Forced to Retire Toward Danareav.

NO DECISION IN TRANSYLVANIA

LONDON, Nov. 14.—London was greatly surprised at the official report from Petrograd that the Russians were fighting for possession of Cernavoda Bridge. The despatch stated that Russian cavalry and infantry detachments had occupied the station at Danareav, "three versts west of Cernavoda." Military observers were puzzled as this might mean that Field Marshal von Mackensen's forces had succeeded in crossing the Danube. Many of them refused to believe it, thinking the message must refer to some town "east of the river."

Search of detailed maps of the Dobrudja finally revealed the fact that there is a small hamlet called Danareav, about two miles west of Cernavoda, in the middle of the great Balta marsh, which separates the Danube into two branches along almost the entire Dobrudja frontier from Silistria to Braila. The main channel is the eastern branch, which at Cernavoda is about a mile wide. Then comes the Balta swamp land, about ten miles wide at this point, and finally the western branch of the Danube, which is only a small sluggish stream a few hundred feet across. The Cernavoda Bridge spans the river, the marsh and the small affluent, with its western terminus at Fetesti. Supported on massive piers for the entire distance of eleven and a half miles, it forms, as has already been noted, the longest bridge in Europe.

Just beyond Fetesti the railroad, which comes from Constantza and Cernavoda divides into two branches, one running almost due west to Bucharest, which is ninety-eight miles distant, and the other northwest to Faurel, where it again forks, one line going on to Buzeu and the other to Braila and Galataz where it connects with the Russian railway system.

Well Defended Frontier.

By means of these railroads Russian and Roumanian troops can be rapidly moved to Braila to the bridge head at Fetesti, or, by means of a small branch of the Bucharest line, to Calfarsi, opposite Silistria. These three places mark the northern, middle and southern points of the Balta, the great marsh itself forming an impenetrable barrier to invasion form the rest of this front.

It was stated at the time when Field Marshal von Mackensen had reached the Constantza railroad in his fruitless drive through the Dobrudja that the Roumanians had blown up the Cernavoda bridge after a great part of their army had crossed it. The remainder of the Russian and Roumanian forces continued to retire north, luring the Prussian commander into the swamps and bogs of the Danube Delta. Obviously the destruction of the entire length of the bridge with its hundreds of great piers would have been an impossible task in the hurried withdrawal of the army. Probably only a few spans were blown up.

From the Russian statement that more than two hundred Prussians, more than two hundred Prussian and, that prisoners and machine guns have been captured, it is argued that the forces of Field Marshal von Mackensen must have crossed the river in considerable numbers after repairing the bridge. But if so, why has such a vitally important event as the invasion of this part of Roumania from across the Danube been passed over in silence both by Berlin and Bucharest? Berlin said that "in the Dobrudja there have been no important changes," and Sofia reports only "small encounters."

In fact, the Petrograd statement is one of the most baffling that military observers have yet been called upon to analyze. They are wondering how such a large body of troops could have suddenly appeared in the midst of the Balta marshes, apparently fighting alone, for the Roumanian statement makes no mention of the engagement. They evidently could not have come from the Dobrudja, for there the Russians and Roumanians were fighting together, driving the Prussians southward, and on Thursday were about twelve miles north of Constantza-Cernavoda railway. Of course, they might have come down from Rent by way of Galatz and Braila, but in that case it is strange that no Roumanian detachments accompanied them to aid in defence of their country.

Enemy Forced to Reire.

Whatever the interpretation of the Petrograd report may be, it is evident that the Russians at Dunareav are not part of General Sakharoff's forces, but a separate body, as to-day's report from Sofia says the Bulgarian artillery compelled their retirement toward Dunareav. The other Russian and Roumanian forces have driven the Prussians back almost to the Constantza railway line and Field Marshal von Mackensen's vaunted drive is ending in inglorious retreat.

Led into a blind alley and unable to cross the Danube marshes, the Prussian commander was obliged to return the way he came, pursued by an army that was constantly being reinforced from the north. Now at Cernavoda he is menaced from the west bank of the river and at the end of his right flank, Constanza, on the Black Sea, is being rendered untenable by the guns of the Russian fleet. With both flanks of his thirty-five mile front under attack, and his entire centre being steadily pressed back, he is facing serious disaster.

Defeat here has ended all hope of cooperation with General von Falkenhayn's army on the Transylvania side. Latest reports from Bucharest indicate that the Austro-Prussian army which penetrated Roumania through the Tomos Pass, south of Kronstadt, and captured Presdeal, has now been almost entirely enveloped. The frontier between Hermannstadt and Kronstadt is the most vital part for the safety of Roumania.

Through the Red Tower Pass, below the former town, and the Tomos Pass railroads lead to the heart of the country, and Campulung, between the two is the terminus of a third line running to the capital; hence the desperate nature of the fighting in this sector. The Austro-Prussians have gained all the passes from Transylvania, but must still fight their way through the mountains on the Roumanian side, which extend fifteen or twenty miles below the frontier, and where a few men, with machine guns can halt whole armies. This accounts for the enormous losses of the invaders.

No Decision in Transylvania.

Success and failure have alternated on both sides on this front during the week, but the advantage finally appears to lie with the Roumanians. First they drove the Austro-Prussians from Campulung back to the frontier. Then the latter captured some important positions northwest of Azuga, near the Predeal or Tomas Pass. Then the Russians in the extreme northwestern sector advanced south of Dorna Watra, occupying an important series of heights. On Tuesday, according to Berlin the Austro-Prussians were forced back in the north near Tulghes Pass, but gained ground further south, near the Bodza, Rothenthurm and Vulcan passes. By Thursday the Roumanians were again pushed back in the Buzen valley and the Austro-Prussians had captured the town of Surdoin, in Roumania, sixteen miles from Transylvania border.

While the fighting has been thus indecisive on this front during the week, it should be remembered that every day adds to the advantage of the Roumanians in that it brings nearer the time when the mountain chain that protects her frontier will be impassable. Already the Carpathians in the north are covered with snow and the temperature in the south is below freezing at night. Unless the Prussians reach the Roumanian plains before winter sets in they have small chance of ever conquering Roumania.

A local Prussian success in the region of Baranovichi, on the Russian front, and the capture of Pressoir, in the Somme region, complete the incidents of the week worthy of mention. The victory of the French at Pressoir extends the envelopment of Chaulnes, which is now in a deep pocket, inclosed on three sides. It is more strongly fortified, however, than Combles and may be able to hold out for a few days or perhaps weeks more.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of glass of water before breakfast each day. Salts; take one tablespoonful in a morning, and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poisons which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it formed stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is always beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The Message of Easter

The following sermon on the subject of "The Message of Easter" though unseasonable as to the calendar, is strikingly appropriate to the term and while we live, while so many hearts, saddened by the death of loved ones, may be cheered by the comfort it brings. It was preached by Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., of Broadway Tabernacle, New York, and copyrighted and published in the Woman's Home Companion by the Crowell Publishing Company by whose permission it is here reproduced;

Easter is one of the three great festivals of the Christian Church, the other two being Christmas and Pentecost. The three days celebrated what, to Christians, are the three great events in human history: The birth of Jesus, His resurrection, and the coming of the Holy Spirit. All three days are days of jubilancy and song. They do not understand the Christian religion who think it a despondent, drooping faith. It is the most radiant of all the religions, and it keeps the sound of the trumpet in one's ears all the way. Is any man or woman glum or gloomy, let him make his way deeper into the religion which Jesus taught.

Of all the great days of the Christian Church, none is more glorious than Easter. It is a day which speaks of light and hope and love, of the open gates of paradise, and of the life everlasting. It is a day of hosannas and halleluiahs. In the words of one of old, we can say of Easter; "This is the day which the Lord hath made. We will rejoice and be glad in it."

THE DAY SHOULD BE SPIRITUALLY EXALTED.

It is a day which everybody needs. The church errs greatly which does not exalt and adorn the day. The fact that in certain quarters the day may have been degraded by vanity and fashion, robbed of its spiritual significance and made a day of show, is not sufficient reason why Easter should be discarded, but is an argument why Christians should lay hold of it with jealous and quickened zeal, stripping it of worldly associations, and give it again the place to which it is entitled. Surely we need at least one day in the year which shall speak to us trumpet-tongued of the life eternal. Once a year at least we need to face again the fact of death and to ponder the mystery of the great hereafter. Easter has a message for all sores and conditions of men. Many things happen in a year, and the approaching Easter will not find us as we were a year ago. To some of us unexpected and devastating experiences have come. Some of us have been suffered a great disappointment, and some of us have undergone a prostrating disillusionment. The world for us has become shadowed, and it is when our world becomes dark that we should let the light of another world shine upon it. Some of us have recently returned from the cemetery where we left a new-made grave. The mind is filled with new questions and the heart was unwonted yearnings and aspirations. The other world is more real to us than it has ever been before.

"Alas for him who never sees
The stars shine through his cypress trees".

Many of us perhaps have been immersed in business or in pleasure and our spiritual senses have been blunted by rough contact with material things. Our beliefs, it may be, are being undermined, all hopes, which once shone upon us like fixed stars, are being dissipated into mist. We need a day which will awe the heart and rekindle within us the sense of immortality.

TO THOSE BEREAVED.

It is possible that some of us have thus far been repelled by Easter because of its mournful associations. It has suggested to us an experience which, to think of, opens afresh old wounds in the heart. Its music reminds us of the music we heard at the funeral, and its flowers recall the blossoms we left on the grave. We are not able to say: "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" Easter mocks us by inviting us to heights we cannot climb. But if we have not yet obtained the strength to face undaunted the pain of death and the darkness of the grave, we need all the more to come with alacrity and earnestness to Easter and get out of it what the heart most needs. Possibly we entertain mistaken notions of what the Easter gospel is. Erroneous views of death and the resurrection may still cloud our mind and make suggestions of the world eternal unwelcome. If to think of the future life gives no solace or inspiration, surely we need to come again and listen to the Easter message.

THE WORLD BEYOND.

First of all, Easter declares with unwavering accent that there is another world. We need to be told this often for there are voices within us, and outside of us, which deny it. The tomb is absolutely silent, and no satisfying message comes to us from it. The curtain which hangs round the present world is thick, and no light from other realms streams through it. The curtain is fastened in such a way that we cannot pull it up and live. To know what lies beyond, one must die or receive the testimony of someone who has died and come back to earth again. Easter offers us the testimony of the Son of God. It quotes to us His words: "I am the Living One" and "I was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore". "Because I live he shall live also". There is no good reason why we should not accept this testimony.

Easter reminds us that the grave is empty. This is not a message easy to receive. The disciples found it difficult to accept this fact on the first Easter morning, and it is still difficult for us. We are inclined to make too much of the cemetery. We have a lurking feeling that our loved ones are really there. On the day of the funeral we could not shape the feeling that we were putting the soul into the ground. In thinking of them afterward we found ourselves looking down into their grave, but the message of Easter is that every grave is empty. No person is buried in a cemetery. The only people in the cemetery are really there. On the day of the who look after the trees and the grass. One ought therefore to resist the inclination of the imagination to see a person in the grave. He ought to use his reason and compel himself to think of the person who died as alive in a world of living men.

BELIEF IN THE JUDGMENT DAY

A belief still exists among certain Gal Two—Message of Easter—Dp 2 col good people that the dead are to sleep in their graves until a certain far distant great day on which all the dead are to rise and present themselves for judgment. But this is a belief without solid foundation. There are good reasons for thinking that the dead do not sleep at all, that they are never so wide awake as in the moment after death. We are warranted in believing that the resurrection of a man takes place at his death, that death itself is a rising into another sphere of existence. Jesus one day found a woman in a cemetery, her heart breaking at the grave of her brother. He found that one of the reasons for her grief was her belief that her brother would not rise again until the resurrection at the last day. He set to work at once to get this mistaken notion out of her mind. He comforted her by assuring her that those who lived and believed on Him do not die at all. In the hour of His own death, Jesus expected to be living in Paradise before that day ended, and He told a man who was dying with Him that he also would be alive in the world of the blessed on that very day. The "sleep of the dead" is a figure of speech which needs to be interpreted in the light of Easter.

THE RESURRECTION OF THE BODY.

Another misconception which shuts darkness is the idea that the body which is buried is the identical body which is going to be brought out of the grave. This idea has survived long because it seems to have scriptural support and also the sanction of the Apostles' Creed. But it is an idea which has lost its hold on millions of Christians, and it will some day, no doubt, be universally abandoned. It is one incredible to the reason and it has no support either from the teachings of Jesus or of the greatest of the apostles. In his argument on the resurrection recorded in the fifteenth chapter of his First Letter to the Corinthians, Paul expressly says: "That which thou sowest, thou sowest not the body that shall be, but a bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other kind; but God giveth it a body, it is raised a spiritual body. If each seed a body of its own." Further on he says: "It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. If there is a natural body, there is also a spiritual body." The idea of the apostle is that just as God gives a new body to a grain of wheat after its death, so also will He give the soul after the death of its physical organism a new body. The experience of Jesus was unique. In His case His physical body was transformed, in some manner inexplicable to us, into a spiritual body, but we are not to suppose that the manner of our resurrection is to be in all points like His own, any more than we are to claim that our coming into the world, or our powers to work here, or our relations to our fellowmen are in all respects like His. He held a unique relation both to God and to man, and we may therefore expect experiences in His life which will not be reproduced in our own. Our body will be dissolved, built up into other forms of organic life, and we shall have no use for it any more. It is a tent worn out, a house outgrown, an organ obsolete. In death we are to be provided with another body, of what form and texture we cannot say, but a body which will be peculiarly our own, as finely fitted for the uses of the spirit in the other world as is our present body for our uses here upon the earth.

THE SAME AFTER DEATH.

We shall be the same person after death which we were before death, and we shall be known by the people who knew us here. When Jesus presented Himself to His disciples on the first Easter they knew Him. They found Him to be the same friend which He had always been. His disposition had not changed, nor His attitude to them, nor His purpose for the world. He was the same Jesus. "It doth not yet appear that we shall be," but of one thing we may be certain, and that is that we shall always be ourselves, that our friends shall be themselves, and that the Jesus whom we have known and served here will be the same Jesus forever.

WE ARE TO LIVE AGAIN.

There are those who think of death with a shudder, and of the other world with a sinking heart, because death seems to be a breaking of all the ties which are sacred, and a transference of the soul into a foreign world. The world in which we now live is dear to us because we know it so well. It is cosy and warm and we prefer it to any world of which it is possible for us to think. The heart likes the old. It shrinks from the untried. But the message of Easter is that the other world is our home just as this one is. The universe is a big house containing many rooms and we pass from one room to another. The home in all its parts has been furnished and is conducted by Infinite Love. The baby does not feel himself a stranger when he comes into our world. Love has prepared the way for him, and Love has also prepared the way for us in the world eternal. We are not going to a foreign land, we are not to live in the midst of strangers, we are not to suffer from home-sickness in a world that is cold and strange—we are going home. From the first hour we shall feel at home, and we shall find ourselves in the presence of friends. It is an old question which has haunted the human mind from the beginning: "If a man die, shall he live again?" Easter says, "Yes" and declares that in the hour of death a man stands up alive, and complete, and at home.

THREE NEW ROSES AT FLOWER SHOW

NEW YORK, Nov 9.—Three varieties of roses and a Japanese anemone chrysanthemum made their debut last night at the opening of the flower show in the Engineering Building, West Thirty-ninth street, held under the auspices of the American Institute. Vegetables, fruits and plants also are included in the displays.

The new roses are the "Primrose" and the "Mme. Collette Martinet," both a shell pink, and the "Titanic" a tiny bright red bloom. Those three are being exhibited by A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn. The Japanese novelty is credited to Mr. Richard Morsinger, of Tuxedo. He has several vases in the front of the hall filled with varieties of the new flower. One of the handsomest is a bronze pink color. It has a full rounded centre, with a ragged fringed edge. It is much larger than anemone chrysanthemum grown in their richness and colors are Oriental in their richness. The new flower promises to become a favorite with private gardners and florists. It is wonderfully decorative.

He clasped his hands to his bleeding face, and discovered to his astonishment that his glass eye had exploded. Surgeons were unable to explain the mishap.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Brand of a Criminal

It Was Assumed Voluntarily by a Society Girl

By F. A. MITCHEL

Miss Wetmore, a middle aged spinster, was much interested in sociology. She was especially given to helping persons who had been convicted of crime, served their term in prison and been discharged. Her niece, Madge Ellison, a gay girl of twenty-one, made light of her aunt's efforts, having theories of her own on the subject. Madge had been to college; but, though a very bright scholar, her course was cut short by her being discovered in some prank which resulted in her expulsion.

Her own case illustrated her theory with regard to discharged prisoners. "I was born," she said, "with the Old Nick in me and must work out my own career in his service."

"Nonsense!" replied her aunt. "You were born to ease and comfort. Your silly prank, for which you were expelled from college, was the result of exuberance of youthful spirits. Criminals are usually driven into crime and, once in it, cannot get out of it. A discharged prisoner bears a brand that time cannot efface. No one will employ him, and he is driven to commit more crime to obtain the necessaries of life."

"I wonder," said Madge thoughtfully, "were I a discharged criminal if I could get on."

"Try it and see."

The words made an impression on Madge. "Try it and see!" The idea would not depart. She was really a girl of great depth. Had she not also been a girl of feeling she might have taken hold of some one of the women's questions of the day and made a hobby of it. She was rather fitted for a wife and mother, and the strength in her of this instinct prevented her from embracing any cause that would hold her undivided attention.

But "try it and see" would not down. Week after week passed, and a desire to test her ability to get on with the brand of a criminal upon her grew apace. Meanwhile she was devoting herself to society, finding it hollow hearted and the duties it involved tedious. Born for something more in keeping with an active brain and a sympathetic nature, she tired of people whose only object was to climb socially and maintain their position when they reached the top of the ladder.

"Aunt Isabel," she said one morning, "I've made up my mind."

"To what?"

"I'm going to 'try it and see.'"

"Try what and see?"

"I'm going to take on myself the brand of Cain, renounce for a season home, income—in short, everything except such belongings as are given a discharged prisoner—and see if I can make a living without committing more crime."

"You'll find it next to impossible. Even to make your living as you have been brought up would be difficult; to do so with a blight on you would be many times more so."

"Nevertheless I'm resolved."

"Very well; I'll help you to carry out your design."

Miss Wetmore took her niece to a prison where the aunt was well known to the warden and told him of Madge's plan. When Madge left the prison she was dressed as a woman of low degree and given the amount of funds usually granted discharged prisoners. At the prison gate she left her aunt with the words, "I shall try the experiment to the bitter end."

Miss Wetmore embraced her, spoke a few words of commendation and encouragement, and Madge found herself alone on a street in a great city, with the voluntary brand of a criminal upon her.

In order to come as nearly as possible to the conditions of the test it had been arranged that if inquiries were made at the prison concerning her it should be said that she had been sent up for theft and no more information should be given. One advantage that a real discharged prisoner would have in a possible passing of time without her record being discovered Madge found it expedient to take upon herself. She was to confess that she had been in jail, but declare that she was innocent of the crime of which she had been convicted. This advantage and disadvantage Madge considered would offset each other.

She had not been taught anything by which to make a living, unless her education would serve that purpose. But for a confessed criminal to secure a position as teacher was hopeless. Even with a clear record Madge was without a degree. She knew nothing of the culinary art and could not fill the position of a cook. To be a housemaid required no great instruction, and this seemed to be the only field open to her.

Madge stood on the sidewalk before the prison till her aunt, with a thrown kiss, turned a corner. Then all of a sudden the voluntary jailbird felt a sinking of the heart that well nigh caused her to forego her experiment.

"Great heavens!" she said to herself. "Suppose I really were a discharged prisoner!"

For the first time in her life she realized the very great difference in the social status in which she was born from that of the grades from which most criminals are produced. A dirty newsboy five or six years old passed her crying his papers. She had seen hundreds of them and had thought no more of any of them than a dog pulling a huckster's wagon. Now this little fellow made her heart ache. While she had been at birth placed in a satin lined bassinet, this boy had likely been placed on dirty cotton bedclothing, odoriferous and squalid. She had sat, one of a ring of daintily dressed children, singing kindergarten songs; he was at that age investing a cold world selling newspapers. She remembered with something like shame that she had not even appreciated the advantages she had enjoyed at college—advantages that many a poor girl had wept bitter tears for because she could not make them the basis of earning an honorable living and which would have saved her from a life of toil.

But these thoughts served to bring out all there was of strength in Madge's nature. Drawing down the corners of her pretty mouth with a grim resolution, she started down the street and on reaching a residential district rang the doorbell of the first respectable looking house she came to. A member of the family answered the call.

"Does the lady want a maid?" asked Madge.

"She's always wanting a maid. Maids are not plentiful nowadays."

Leaving Madge in the vestibule, the person went inside and returned with an invitation for the applicant to come in and see the lady. Madge found her in a luxurious boudoir. She was struck by Madge's refined features.

"Madam," Madge began, "I beg of you to employ me. I have been very unfortunate. Accused of a crime of which I am innocent, I have spent a year in prison. I have only this morning been discharged with enough money"—

The horror depicted on the woman's face was appalling to the applicant.

"I don't need any help at present," she said, looking hard at the door.

"I beg of you not to turn me away. I promise you"—

"Leave the house at once or I will call the police and have you put out."

Madge beat a hasty retreat.

Before making another application she resolved to try to gain a footing in the employer's good graces before confessing the brand upon her. She rang several bells in succession to be told that no maid was wanted, one servant who answered her call shutting the door in her face without a reply.

When at last she struck a house where a maid was wanted and was admitted to the lady's presence, the interview was no longer than the first one. On being asked if she had a recommendation from the last person she had served she was forced to admit that she had not and was dismissed at once.

It was 10 o'clock when Madge had left the prison, and after three hours going from house to house in search of a position, she became faint rather than hungry and stepped into a restaurant of mixed grade that she had once been obliged to put up with for want of a better to get something to strengthen her. Taking a seat at a table, a waiter handed her a menu, but while she was looking to find the price of a cup of tea and a roll the proprietor stepped up to her and, with his eyes fixed meaningly on her coarse garb, said:

"Reckon you've got into the wrong place. There's a restaurant around the corner that would suit you better."

Madge arose and left the restaurant. Standing irresolutely on the sidewalk, she debated what she should do. If her experience thus far was so bitter what would it be when her little money with which she had provided herself had been spent? A policeman, seeing her standing thus forlorn, approached her and asked her where she belonged.

"Nowhere," replied Madge bitterly. "I have no home."

"Well," he replied to this, "I wish you'd get off my beat. I wouldn't like to run in a nice lookin' girl like you for vagrancy, but if you keep loiterin about here I'll have to do so."

This capped the climax. Madge had tried her experiment of making a living with a brand upon her, and she was quite satisfied as to the disadvantages of such a situation. She was faint for want of food and had failed to obtain it even in a second class restaurant. She resolved to go home for a lunch and remain there.

"Call a cab," she said to the police man.

"A cab!" was the astonished exclamation.

"Yes, a cab."

Madge showed him a half dollar. He whistled to a man nodding on the driver's seat of a taxi, who aroused himself and drove his conveyance to the curb before the vagrant. When she entered, giving the chauffeur her address, the policeman looked more amazed than ever. In a few moments she was driven to her own door.

"What," said Miss Wetmore, "home already?"

"Yes, Aunt Isabel. I'm satisfied as to the preliminaries. Now for the work in hand."

In a subsequent career of usefulness Madge Ellison found this practical experience as to the difficulties discharged prisoners meet on emerging again into the world with a brand upon them worth more to her than reading many volumes on the subject. It not only gave her information, but for every such person she helped she felt a heartfelt sympathy.

Instead of becoming a butterfly of fashion, as might have been expected from her wealth and social position, Madge became a worker in the cause of humanity, and in time her name was honored by the community in which she lived and loved by hundreds of those she had helped.

Dry, Hoarse or Painful Coughs Quickly Ended

Home-Made Remedy that Saves You $5—Does the Work Thoroughly.

The prompt and positive action of this simple, inexpensive home-made remedy in quickly healing the inflamed or swollen membranes of the throat, chest or bronchial tubes and breaking up tight coughs, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) into a 16-oz bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. You then have 16 ounces—a family supply—of a much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is known the world over for its promptness, ease and certainty in overcoming stubborn coughs and chest colds.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

OPERATION BLUNDER FATAL.

Surgeon Left Forceps in Incision and Complications Ensued.

St. Catharines, Ont., Nov. 9.—Mrs. Army Levina Moir, wife of Rev. D. A. Moir, pastor of the Methodist Church, Thorold, died at St. Catharines General Hospital this morning, as the result of a surgical oversight. Two years ago Mrs. Moir underwent an operation at Hamilton for appendicitis, which was apparently successful, outside the fact that a pair of forceps were left within her body after the incision was mended. The presence of the forceps was made known by excruciating pain. They were removed in a second operation. The instrument, however, had worked its way into the intestines, which had become seriously decayed. Mrs. Moir had been in the hospital here, awaiting a favourable opportunity for a third operation, this time to remove the decayed portions of the intestine, but she was too weak.

Mrs. Moir was a daughter of Rev. Dr. J. G. Adams, of 46 Hazelton avenue, Toronto, to whose home the remains will be taken this afternoon for funeral on Saturday.

COUGHLIN FOR A. A. H. A. SAYS TORONTO STAR

The Toronto Star says:

Those behind the various clubs in the American Amateur Hockey Association, which league includes teams representing St. Paul, Calumet, Houghton, and the Soo, have been very active for some time back in making preparations for the coming season. Manager Charlton, of St. Paul when on a visit to his home here a short time ago made an unsuccessful attempt to secure Lawson Whitehead, the local referee to coach the St. Paul team this winter. He was more successful in another direction, however, and landed Herbert Drury, the speedy Midland forward, who last season played with Pohl Colborne, for his St. Paul team. Beaney, Wellington, and Mohan, of Hamilton Alert fame, are also expected to play with the Saints again this winter. Jerry Coughlin, the Peterborough boy, is another well known player in this vicinity who chased the disc in this amateur organization last season. His services are again being counted upon this winter, despite the fact that Jerry returned to his home last spring minus quite a number of teeth, as a result of the parlor hockey played in the inning country. The $35 a week and board proposition offered Reg. Noble, the Riverdale player to play in this league did not prove enticing to him, however.

MAELSTROM OF WAR PURGES HIM FROM FORMER DISGRACE

Dismissed Clergyman Sought Solace and won Honours in Foreign Legion.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The Evening World says:

"Another man has emerged from the European war purged of disgrace, according to information received today. Frederick P. Farrar of the French foreign legion, has been decorated for valor in the field and acclaimed for conspicuous gallantry.

"He disappeared five years ago after his many friends here and in England learned that, as the Rev. Dr. Frederic Percival Farrar, rector of Sandringham, domestic chaplain to King George and honorary chaplain to Queen Alexandra, queen dowager of Great Britain, he had been dismissed from his court posts. He had not been heard of since in the United States or England, until a few days ago.

"Now a year he has been fighting in the foreign legion, but it is not known under what name. His persistent courage finally drew attention to him. In addition to other honours, it is understood he was offered a commission in the British army by the King, but declined, preferring to fight in the ranks with his present comrades.

The former rector's wife was Miss Nora Davis of Philadelphia, a sister of the late Richard Harding Davis. He had met her when he was a Philadelphia newspaper reporter, and they had been married only five months when his disgrace came.

Farrar is a son of the late Canon Farrar, author of the famous "Life of Christ." He graduated from Cambridge in 1897, and in 1905 he succeeded to the rectorship of Sandringham. Many celebrities were at his marriage at St. Anderew's, Westminster, to Miss Davis.

Then, suddenly it was reported he was suspected of an offence that made the retention of his high office impossible. He is said to have refused to resign when asked. The next day he disappeared. It was reported later he was in British Columbia.

After Twelve Years Of Soup, Eats Meat

Miss Ethel Garnant of Waukegan, who probably has consumed more soup than any other individual, is back to planked steaks and other solids that have been denied her for twelve years.

Miss Garnan, when she began her fast two years ago she never weighed more than 38 pounds. Since her seventh year she has lived on soup and constantly has hovered on the brink of death by starvation.

Miss Garnan, then she began her long fast was afflicted by an intestinal disorder that seemed baffling. A sudden contraction of the oesophagus and another contraction at a point far down in the intestines were the cause of the trouble.

It as only recently that it as determined to send Miss Garnant to the Doctors Mayo in Rochester, Minn. She had been so frail that it was feared an operation would be fatal.

Miss Garnant went to the farm of an uncle in North Dakota, where, in preparation for the ordeal, she drank large quantities of cream. Her weight rose to ninety pounds, the most she had ever attained.

Strange Operation.

In Rochester it was determined that only an intestinal "explosion" would be of avail. Thus the proper chemicals were forced into the intestines by means of a cord swallowed by the patient. When the chemicals met there was an explosion that sent Miss Garnant into unconsciousness. An interne who aided at the operation, burst into tears, so strongly was she affected by the hardihood of the girl who refused to take an anaesthetic.

After the operation Miss Garnant was told she might eat a full meal. This caused her to hesitate, for she had never been privileged to eat solids. But Dr. Charles Mayo was anxious to study the result, and Miss Garnant sat down to a meal of steak sweet potatoes, two or three vegetables and coffee. It was the first that she had eaten in twelve years.

The operation was a success and Miss Garnant came home soon, weighing more than 100 pounds and ready for a college career, for which she has been planning.

WEAR RUBBERS TO SAVE SHOES

Economical Housewife Is Giving this Advice to Members of Her Family to Defeat High Cost of Shoes

The economical housewife is outfitting her family now with rubber footwear for the fall rains and the winter snows. She is doing this because she knows that rubber is the only staple article that has decreased in price since the war began and that rubber shoes and overshoes cost no more now than they did before while leather has reached a price that is almost prohibitive.

"Save your Shoes by Wearing Rubbers" is the thrifty woman's advice to her family. Rubbers cost no more than they did two years ago, leather has advanced over 50 per cent. The British Government has made cheap rubber possible. Show your patriotism by buying rubbers and overshoes to save your leather shoes.

HALF A MILLION FOR EXPLOSIVES

How United States Profits by War.—25 per Cent. Shipments were Supplies.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Exports of war supplies for the nine months ending September 31, amounted to $997,970,000, or more than 25 per cent. of the country's total export trade for the period, according to figures published here to-day by the Journal of Commerce.

The value of explosives sent to belligerents was more than half a billion dollars, and automobiles, horses, and mules, metal working machinery, and wire, ranked next in that order.

According to a table published covering war supply exports since the beginning of January, 1915, their value for the twenty-one months was $1,817,845,000, or about 23 per cent. of the country's total exports. More war supplies were sent abroad during the first nine months of this year than throughout 1915.

Two Cases of Eczema and How They Were Cured

Further Proof That Dr. Chase's Ointment is a Positive Cure For Chronic Eczema

If you read these letters you will find that Dr. Chase's Ointment is not to be classed among ordinary salves and ointments.

By actual curing itching, stinging eczema in many thousands of cases it has stood the most severe test to which any ointment can be put.

Mr. J. Brice, Temperance road, Parry Sound, Ont., writes: "Just a line to praise Dr. Chase's Ointment for what it has done for my wife. She has been suffering from eczema in her head for two years, and has spent no end of money with doctors and for ointments, which did her no good. She had about given up hope of ever being cured, when someone told her to try Dr. Chase's Ointment. By the use of this Ointment the trouble has left her entirely, so we have unbounded faith in it. I have told several people about the Ointment."

Mrs. W. G. Dowden, Greenspond [illegible] suffered with eczema on my hands, and for eighteen months was so bad that I could not use a needle to sew or do anything. I could scarcely dress myself. Though I had lots of salves from doctors, I could never get much benefit from them. Then I sent for a sample of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and found it very different in action. It was not long before my hands begn to heal, and four 60c. boxes made them well. I cannot praise Dr. Chase's Ointment too highly, and frequently give some to others to get them using it, for I know that it will cure."

In the home Dr. Chase's Ointment is of almost daily usefulness, for by relieving chafing and irritation of the skin it prevents eczema and similar itching skin diseases. Applied to cuts and wounds, it prevents blood poisoning and heals the skin. Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Municipal Shops To Sell Supplies

To Baulk Profiteers—Meatless Day and Revision of Wages Suggested

LONDON.—Householders throughout the country will applaud the drastic recommendations of the committee appointed by the Board of Trade to consider the question of the regulation of food prices. Meat, milk and bacon are the subject of many important proposals, the general idea being to conserve the nation's supplies by means of government control. Here are some of the outstanding recommendations:

State meat at state prices.
One meatless day a week.
Requisitioning of ships for conveyance of refrigerated meat.
Cheap milk for the poor.
Municipal milk and food shops.
Child nurseries.
Improved army cooking.
Doctors to order food for expectant mothers and babies.
All employers urged to review pay roll of lower grades of labor.
Adequate wages for women in controled establishments.

The following is the text of the recommendations made by the committee.

Further efforts should be made to hasten, so far as compatible with naval needs, the construction of mercantile shipping, especially that required for the conveyance of refrigerated meat. The government should not hesitate to take over ships in the course of construction. In veiw of the danger of renewed congestion of the docks and railways during the coming autumn and winter, the committee strongly recommend that immediate measures should be taken to provide sufficient men to attend to the necessary work. The principle, already adopted by the government, of restricting the importation of unnecessary commodities, should be carried out on a larger scale. In disposing of the meat which it purchases for the civil population the government should impose such conditions, not only on wholesale merchants, but also on retailers, as would tend to secure the sale of such meat to the ultimate consumer at reasonable prices. The government should expedite the establishment of refrigerating stations and other necessary plant at Rio de Janeiro, Santos, or Bahia, or some other convenient port, to open up the supplies of Brazilian meat.

The committee urge all those who are not engaged in severe manual labor, and who at present eat butcher's meat every day, to abstain from the consumption of butcher's meat on one day in each week. The war office should bring under renewed consideration the question of whether economies could not be effected in the supply of meat to the army by improvements in methods of cooking and serving, without any reduction of the amount of meat actually reaching the individual soldier. If additional summer milk could be imported from Ireland in any considerable quantity it should be considered whether it could be put on sale, under government control, in poor town districts, at a cross-counter price which would cover expenses, thus putting cheap milk within the reach of the poor without setting up an elaborate machinery of distribution. A scientific inquiry as to the possibility of obtaining desiccated milk ("milk powder") in large quantities in the pastoral countries, seems to be worth carrying out. Where there is reason to belief that the retailers are using the present abnormal situation in order to obtain excessive profits, municipal shops should be opened, on a business footing, for the sale of milk, meat, bacon and other necessary foodstuffs. In the present emergency all the local authorities, including the L.C.C., should be urged to start a sufficient number of maternity centres, baby clinics, and child nurseries, and should be empowered to provide a certain supply of milk to the children under the age of five and dinners to expectant and nursing mothers. Doctors should be authorised to order milk and dinners for expectant and nursing mothers, for babies that cannot be nursed by the mothers, and for children under the age of five. Fair and adequate rates of wages for women workers in controlled establishments should be enforced there with the least possible delay. All employers and public bodies are urged to review their pay roll for the purpose of ascertaining whether any of the lower-paid grades of labor have not sufficiently benefited by the general upward movement.

London dairymen, it is stated, can still afford to sell at 1d. per quart less over the counter than is charged for milk delivered to the customer. But except in the poorer districts, there is no likelihood that customers enough to make a business pay would consent to go or send for their milk in the early morning.

THE DYING YEAR.

It was but yesterday I walked within the grove
By all deserted. Even the birds had flown,
Through all the summer long each songster strove
To charm the heart of her who was his own—
His dear, sweet mate. And as I walked alone
I closed my eyes upon the swaying forms
Of wind-shorn branches, ashen shrubs, and thought
How softly had old nature's fingers wrought
These mighty changes. Not by raging storms,
Nor cruel tempests, had come verdure sere,
But slowly, lovingly, as though the year
Had been with calm of triumph sweetly fraught,
And as I walked this thought came to my mind,
Would that mankind such subtle peace might find!

ELECTION NEWS IS SENT BY WIRELESS

FORT VAUX, ON THE VERDUN FRONT, Nov. 11.—News of the Presidential election in the United States was communicated by wireless telegraph to the correspondent of the Associated Press at Fort Vaux on Thursday and caused intense interest amid the activities of defence preparations and under a very severe German bombardment.

The correspondent reached the fort, which is the most advanced fortified point of the French lines at Verdun, around the walls of which shells were then falling and thickly increased throughout the day. Within the garrison the French were engaged in restoring the fort to its original condition and strength.

Lieut. Dior related how he had entered the works while it was still supposed to be occupied by the Germans. He approached a machine gun embrasure under cover of darkness and inserted his head. He saw nobody and proceeded to search further. He then found that the entire garrison had left. The French were able to occupy the fort without a shot.

Evidence was discovered in the shape of a programme drafted by the German commander, Von Engelbrechten, dated October 21, for strengthening the positions so as to permit the Germans to prepare for a future attack on Verdun. The details comprised the erection of barricades in the interior, in order to permit of its defence in sections, also the construction of a new exit and galleries, the erection of barbed wire entanglements and the excavation of a tunnel forty feet of which had been completed.

The French found essential parts of the fortress intact, and that the other parts could easily be restored, despite mines hastily laid by the Germans before they left, most of which were unexploded. The Germans also left a million rifle cartridges, many shells and grenades, two machine guns, one cannon, 2,000 rations, much canned preserves, quantities of mineral waters, medical bandages and stores.

Even since leaving the Germans have bombarded the fort night and day, but have not been successful in preventing supplies from arriving. The correspondent was compelled to stay fourteen hours in the fortress, and he had to cover the first furlong from the exit at a racing pace, through a shower of high explosive projectiles, which fell on ground already dented with shell shots like a colander.

The French already have advanced their lines well to the front of the fort, thus opposing any attempts at a counter attack by the Germans, who would be obliged to seek a position in marshy ground, where it would be impossible to dig trenches. Vaux was the solo strong point occupied by the Germans, from which it would be possible to execute a counter attack with any probability of success, and the Germans are constantly showing their vexation over its loss by throwing thousands of shells into it. But while these have caused a much greater vibration they have not affected the stability of the position.

Dead Germans lie all around. Letters found on the bodies contain strong complaints regarding the food supply of the civilian population.

CLOSE RUSSIAN PORT

New York.—The Russian Embassy at Washington has informed American merchants that the shipment of goods into Russia by the port of Vladivostok has been suspended temporarily. The regulations which have applied to Archangel for the last month will now apply also to Vladivostok. American shippers must make application for each individual shipment, through the Russian consignee to the Imperial Department of Commerce at Petorgrad.

No steamship has left this port for Archangel for five weeks and the piers in South Brooklyn, where they generally load, are jammed with machinery, cases of canned goods, coils of barbed wire, and auto trucks awaiting shipment.

It is understood that the closing of the port of Vladivostok has been caused by the heavy congestion of freight there, all of which has to be transported over the Trans-Siberian Railroad.

FORMER OTTAWA MAN IS ARRESTED

Q.M.S. Ince Under Close Guard — Civilian Clerk Has Now Been Freed.

KINGSTON, Nov. 13.—Quartermaster Sergeant Ince, of the 235th Battalion, who figured in the Nicholson case as a handwriting expert, was, after an appearance before Col. Cruikshank, A.A.G., and Lieut.-Colonel Gillespie, sent to Tete du Pont barracks under close arrest, and is being held pending a further investigation of this remarkable case by the Dominion police authorities at Ottawa.

Sergeant Ince — quarter-master sergeant of the 235th Battalion, and before enlisting was in the government employ at Ottawa. He has served in the R.N.W.M. Police and has done much handwriting expert work in the courts of Ottawa. There are personal differences between the two experts A. N. Payne, of Ottawa, and Ince which complicate the case.

Kenilworth Nicholson, the civilian clerk, who has been held in the police cells fro two weeks on instructions from the local military authorities was released at three o'clock yesterday afternoon the evidence exonerating him from any connection with alleged irregularities.

RING IN NEED OF NEW FACES

NEW YORK.—Seldom has the boxing season started with a greater lack of genuine contenders in the bantom, feather, welter and heavyweight divisions, in view of which there is very little prospect of sound competition until new talent is developed.

The scarcity of new faces in the aforementionod classes has been the bane of the fighting game, for the public unquestionably has grown weary of watching the same pugilists in action time after time with unvarying results. Pugilism's most urgent need is new material.

While this condition prevails in all but two of the classes, the light and middleweight divisions, the bantamweight and featherweight ranks have been most affected. There are only a few bantams of real merit to-day and they have met each other so frequently they have ceased to be strong attractions.

Regardless of contrary reports, "Kid" Williams clearly has disproved statements that he is "through" "Eddie" Campi, the California bantam who ran into an unexpected knockout recently at the hands of "Matt" Brock, has been temporarily removed as an aspirant to the crown.

"Johnny" Ertle isn't having the success this season he enjoyed last year, and few critics rate him as being the equal of Williams. New York is represented in this division by "Joe" Lynch, the pride of the west side. The bantam ranks have been depleted by the passing of Coulon and Burns and others of their calibre.

"Johnny" Kilbane and George Chaney, whom Kilbane declared last Labor Day, have the featherweight division entirely to themselves; "Jack" Britton and "Ted" Lewis divide honours in the welterweight ranks, while "Jess" Willard reigns alone in the heavyweight class, which more than any other division is cluttered with mediocre performers.

MORE WOMEN AT GERMAN COLLEGES.

The number of women at German universities underwent a further considerable increase during the past summer semester. The total was 5,460, which denotes a gain of some 1,300 over the number when the war broke out. Out of every 100 students present at the universities, 10.5 are women, whereas the proportion before the war was only 6.7, and if the resident women students be taken into account, not less than 42.3 per cent. of the studens present are now women.

Dyspeptics Should Avoid Drugs And Medicines

Try a Little Magnesia Instead.

Some people instinctively shut their eyes to danger, and it may be that instinct, or custom or habit causes dyspeptics to take drugs, patent foods and medicines, artificial digestants, etc.

But closing the eyes does not banish the danger, and it is certain that neither drugs nor medicines possess the power to destroy the harmful excessive acid in the stomach, which is the underlying cause of most forms of indigestion and dyspepsia. They may give temporary relief, but ever increasing quantities must be taken, and all the time the acid remains in the stomach as dangerous as ever.

Physicians know this and that is why their advice so often to sufferers from digestive and stomach trouble is "Just get about an ounce of pure bisurated magnesia from your druggist and take a teaspoonful in a little water immediately after every meal. This will instantly neutralize all the harmful acid in the stomach and stop all food fermentation, thus enabling you to enjoy hearty meals without experiencing the least pain or unpleasantness afterward.

You have a bad cold!

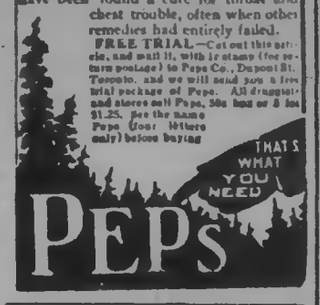
Then listen! Cold attacks the lungs and the breathing passages. To cure it you need to get at these organs direct. Ordinary cough mixtures and syrups do not touch the lungs, but go direct to your stomach, which is not ailing. Peps, on the contrary, go direct to the very seat of the trouble.

Peps are tablets containing essences and medicinal ingredients so prepared that when placed upon the tongue they immediately turn into vapor, and are breathed down the inflamed air passages to the lungs, direct.

Peps medicine takes the form of healing vapor, and cures colds, coughs, bronchitis and lung troubles, just as living in Pine woods and breathing Pine-laden air prevents consumption and cures chest weakness. Tightness across the chest, pain between the shoulders, hacking cough, sore throat, asthma and bronchitis are the ailments which, in particular, Peps have been designed to cure. Peps will soon end your bad cold.

Testimonials for Peps have been given by members of the Canadian Parliament, doctors, lawyers, eminent Canadian musicians; all going to prove that Peps have been found a cure for throat and chest trouble, often when other remedies had entirely failed.

FREE TRIAL.—Cut out this article, and mail it, with 2c stamp (for return postage) to Peps Co., Dupont St., Toronto, and we will send you a free trial package of Peps. All druggists and stores sell Peps, 50c box or 5 for $1.25, per the name Peps (four letters only) before buying.



THE RESPONSE OF IRELAND

London Daily News: Statistics prove conclusively that in reality it needed no statistics to demonstrate that Ireland has met the call to her people with a splendid acceptance of sacrifice that knew no distinction of religion or of party. If in Ulster 40,000 Protestants have enlisted as against not quite 15,000 Catholics, in Munster 15,000 Catholics are with the colors and actually less than 1,000 Protestants. The meaning of such figures is plain. They mean that in Ulster as a whole the population is predominantly Protestant and in Munster predominantly Catholic, and that in Ulster and Munster alike men free to enlist have enlisted with equal readiness.

A New Blood-Food Called Ferrozone Sure to Restore You Quickly.

Every day comes the good news of wonderful cures with Ferrozone.

In Peterborough it worked marvels for Louis Meehan—put him right on his feet—made him entirely well.

"About three years ago," says Mr. Meehan, "I had the Grippe which left me in a very run-down condition that finally developed into Dyspepsia. I was unable to eat but a few things and had a craving for acid. I gave up treating with the doctors because they did not help me and on the advice of a friend used Ferrozone. It not only cured me of Dyspepsia and Biliousness, but has built up my strenuth to what it was before I had the Grippe. I can recommend Ferrozone as an ideal restorative."

Ferrozone gives you force, energy, vim.

It strengthens the stomach, cures indigestion, prevents headaches — guarantees good health.

Thousands use Ferrozone—they all feel better; try it yourself — sold in 50c. boxes, six for $2.50, at all dealers or direct from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

FRESH GAINS FOR THE BRITISH TROOPS

Prisoners In New Drive Now Total 5,000

British Continue Successful Smash Against Foe's Line

New Progress Reported at Beaucourt Sen Ancre Around Which Bitter Fighting Was Going On To-day--5000 Prisoners Have Already Been Taken---Storming of Beaumont-Hamel Village Entirely Successful --British Penetrated German Lines to a Depth of 2000 Yards Along Five Mile Front.

GERMAN ATTACKS IN CHAMPAGNE FAIL

LONDON, November 14.—The British on the Ancre to-day continued their successful smash against the heavily fortified German lines. The War Office reported new progress at Beaucourt Sur Ancre.

Bitter fighting was going on in the outskirts of the town at noon.

The announcement, which told of the new advance at Beaucourt Sur Ancre, said the storming of Beaumont and Hamel villages had been completely successful.

Up until 9 a.m. to-day five thousand prisoners and eighteen machine guns had been taken.

The fresh advance, including to-day's consolidations, was on a front of more than five miles, and to a depth at some points of more than two thousand yards. Each attack was preceded by curtain fire which German prisoners say is the most terrible of any barrage hail of metal that has been faced on any front.

Roumanians Pressed Back on Frontier

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PETROGRAD, November 14.—For the first time since General Sakharoff's Russo-Roumanians began their smashing blows against Mackensen's extreme left wing, which rested at Cernavoda on the Danube, in the Dobrudja region, the War Office to-day reported the situation "unchanged."

Roumanian forces defending the district about Rotenturm Pass have been forced back under persistent enemy attacks, in the Alt River region, the War Office announced to-day.

Teuton attacks in the Jiul Valley resulted in the capture of the Village of Bumbesthi, the statement said.

On the Narzuvka River in the region of Lipitzadainais and Svistreiniki, minor operations occurred between reconnoitring scouts. There was some artillerying and mine throwing in the wooded Carpathian sections.

A Teuton attack near Javornika and south of Pnevmount was repulsed by Russian fire.

German Attacks In Champagne Repulsed

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official Communique), November 14.—Strong German attacks west of Auberive in the Champagne region were repulsed, the War Office announced to-day.

In the Somme region artillerying is proceeding about Pressoire, which is about one mile and a half northeast of Chaules on the road to Peronne.

Norwegian Boat Fires on German Str.

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, November 14.—The Morgenbladt says that a Norwegian torpedo boat has fired upon a German steamer which refused to stop when passing Stavanger.

The Norwegian fired a shot at the rigging the newspaper says, then boarded the steamer and dismantled her wireless.

Since the beginning of the war foreign ships have not been permitted to carry wireless installation when in Norwegian waters.

Pathetic Tale of Belgian Suffering

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

AMSTERDAM, November 14.—Thirty thousand Belgians from Antwerp alone have been torn from their homes and sent to labour in German industrial plants, according to issues of the Echo Belge received here to-day.

No more pathetic tales have come from Belgium since its first overrunning by German hordes at the war's outbreak than the stories told of the breaking up of homes in this country-wide deportation. Three decrees by the Teuton Governor-General preceded the deportation edict, according to Cardinal Mercier, the Primate of Belgium.

Berlin Admits the Defeat on Ancre

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN, via Sayville Wireless, November 14. — Evacuation of Beaumont, Hamel and St. Pierre Divion, was announced by the War Office to-day.

The official statement also said "Our tenacious defense caused us considerable losses," but declared the British also suffered "considerable sacrifices."

Factories of Ontario Come First

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Nov. 14.—Hon. I. B. Lucas, Attorney General, to-day forwarded the reply of the Ontario Government to the communication of the International Acheson Graphite Co., of Niagara Falls, N.Y., pointing out that the withdrawal of power from export was seriously handicapping the company in filling orders for the British, French, Italian and Russian firms manufacturing munitions.

The Attorney General in reply, explains that there is a shortage in the power supply for the munition plants in Ontario using power from the Hydro Commission, and the Ontario plants must be the Hydro's first consideration.

It was rumoured around the city to-day that Sapper Bill Crowley the former well-known Peterborough hockey and rugby star had been wounded at the front. He went overseas with the Canadian Engineers

PTE. VIC. SEDGWICK, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and is now in France with the 5th C. M.R.

Inspector Spence Obtains Possession Of Five Children

The Father First Threatens Officials With a Rifle and Then an Axe —Is Finally Overpowered

WILL APPEAR TO-MORROW

Accompanied by County Constable A. Moore and a constable from Havelock, Mr. C. A. G. Spence, Inspector for the Children's Aid Society, yesterday visited the canvas dwelling of George Emery of Belmont township, and obtained possession of Emery's five children, also his wife. To-morrow mother and children will appear before County Police Magistrate, when an order vesting the care of the children in the Children's Aid Society, will be asked for. As to the disposition of the mother the officials are undecided. She may be permitted to return to her home in Belmont township.

Emery Was Absent.

Some days ago when Mr. Spence and Mr. William Henry, representing the Society, visited Belmont township for the purpose of securing possession of the children, their efforts were frustrated by Emery, who appeared on the scene with a rifle and threatened to shoot in event of the officials attempting to enter the tent in which the children were living. Yesterday when Mr. Spence, accompanied by two county constables arrived on the scene Emery was absent. However, he returned before the officials were ready to leave. He had been away cutting wood in the bush and was armed with a dangerous looking axe. He threatened to decapitate one or more of the officials, but after a short struggle was overpowered and disarmed. Prior to Emery's return County Constable Moore had entered the tent and taken possession of the rifle, which was found to be fully loaded and cocked. This was handed over to the Havelock constable and subsequently taken to Havelock with the party.

Children Were Destitute.

The children presented a pitiable appearance, due to insufficient clothing and exposure to the elements. They range in age from one to nine years. Any person having clothing suitable for such children are invited to notify Mr. Spence or Mr. William Henry. For weeks past these children have been living in a tent that did not even boast of a bed or table. A little straw thrown on the ground served the purpose of a bed.

Still Another.

Mr. Spence has received information concerning a case that is said to be worse than the Emery case. This is further north of where Emery lived and will be the subject of an investigation.

MILITARY MEDAL FOR SERGT. HOWARD CURTIS KILLED IN ACTION

Peterboro' Boy Who Lost His Life on Oct. 8th Earned the Award By His Untiring Efforts in Bringing in Wounded—Medal Will Be Sent to His Parents—Havelock Leads in Recruiting for the 247th Battalion—To-day's Orders and General Military News.

That Lance Sergt. Howard Curtis, the Peterborough boy who was killed in action on Oct. 8th, had been awarded the Military Cross for his gallantry in taking wounded men back from the front line, is the information which has reached his father. This is the third military medal to be won by Peterborough soldiers. The following letter from Capt. P. Alexander was the medium through which Mr. Curtis heard of the award:

"No doubt you have by now been informed as to the death of your son who served in my command for so long. I discovered these snaps in his pocket and thought you would like to have them. On September 9, 1916, I recommended your son for the Military Medal for his untiring efforts in taking wounded men from the front line, and he will never be forgotten. He was awarded the Military Medal some weeks ago and no doubt this will be forwarded to you in due time.

Regretting I can do no more to alleviate your sufferings I am,

Yours sincerely,

P. Alexander, Capt

The decorations won by Peterborough soldiers in the present war are as follows:

Military Cross—Lieut. Arthur Ackerman, 2nd Battalion.

Distinguished Conduct Medal—Sergt. MacDougall, 4th Battery, C.F.A.

Military Medal—Sergt. W. H. Curtis, 2nd Battalion, Sergt. Archie McBride, 4th Battery, Pte. Bruce Blanchard 21st Battalion.

Westwood Boy Wounded.

Official news was received at Westwood to-day that Bombardier Robert Charles Breckenridge, a well known Westwood boy, who has been at the front with the Canadian Artillery, is officially reported admitted to No. 10 General Hospital, Rouen, on Nov. 4th, with a gun shot wound in the leg.

Official Confirmation.

Mrs. Henry Smith, 217 Woodbine avenue, has received official news from Ottawa confirming the report of the death of her husband, Pte. Henry Smith, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, on Oct. 14th. A nurse in the hospital to which Pte. Smith had been taken, had already informed Mrs. Smith of the death of her husband.

(4) Militia Orders—

Distinctions in dress for officers and soldiers who have been wounded.

The following distinctions in dress will be worn on the service dress jacket of all officers and soldiers who have been wounded in any of the campaigns since the 4th of August, 1914.

Strips of gold Russia braid No. 1, two inches in length, sewn perpendicularly on the left sleeve of the jacket to mark each occasion on which wounded.

In the case of officers, the lower end of the first strip of gold braid will be immediately above the upper point of the flap on cuff. Warrant officers, non-commissioned officers, and men, will wear the gold braid on the left sleeve, the lower edge of the braid, marking each subsequent occasion on which wounded will be placed on either side of the original one at half-inch intervals.

Gold braid will be obtained free on indent from the Canadian Ordinance Corps. The sewing will be carried out regimentally without expense of the public.

R. B. BROOKS, Lieut.
Acting Adjutant, 247th Battalion, C. E. F.

93RD NEWS

Letters received by the Examiner this morning from England show that practically every physically fit member of the 93rd Battalion is now in France. The last draft sent after the remnants of the battalion reached the 39th battalion camp, included most of the non-commissioned officers of the 93rd, who had to revert to the ranks. Among the non-com's mentioned as having gone to France were Sergts. Lewington, Musgrave, Rathwell, Searight, Stanley and Wagstaff, and Corp. Saxby. One correspondent says that "it was raining cats and dogs" when the draft left camp early in the morning to cross the channel. Concerning the 93rd Band, another letter says, "The 93rd band is as good as on our way home. We are awaiting orders to that effect now. Our medical reports are made out and I think nearly all the work of transferring us is complete."

A number of members of the Bugle band who were considered too young for the trenches are now drilling in the ranks. A platoon of youngsters has been formed and is being given a strict training in bayonet fighting, physical drill and route marches. It is expected that they will be sent to France next spring. A number of the bugle band have already gone including Bugler W. Chandler, who showed much skill with the rifle in the musketry training at Hythe that he has gone to France as a sniper. Sergt. George East of the 93rd Bugle Band is now a bugler with the 39th Battalion and Bugler H. Rose of the 93rd is with the same organization.

Havelock is still setting the pace for the enlistment in the 247th Battalion, already contributing seven recruits for the new battalion. Last night three Havelock men were successful in passing the medical examination and became members of the 247th. They were Ptes. Arthur King, Raymond Gibb and William James Armstrong, all of Havelock. If the City of Peterborough was contributing recruits on the same proportions as the east riding village, the 247th would have a strength of well over 300 at the present time.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman of the 247th Battalion, leaves to-morrow for Kingston to attend a recruiting conference to be held in that city. Some important developments along recruiting lines are expected as a result of the meeting.

Belleville, Nov. 13.—Private Francis Field, a member of the 235th Battalion, quartered in this city, last night ran amuck at the barracks with a razor, while drunk, and before being overpowered, slashed Sergts. Lancaster and Greenwood severely, upon the hands. Fields made an attempt to slash Lancaster's throat and the latter, in warding off the blow, had two fingers nearly severed. The accused was locked up and to-day before Police Magistrate Masson, pleaded guilty to assault, occasioning bodily harm.

Lieut.-Col. Scobell stated the accused was a bad young man, and had

SIR SAM HUGHES OUT OF CABINET

Minister of Militia Has Resigned After a Quarrel With Premier Borden—No Successor Has Yet Been Named.

SIR SAM HUGHES

Whose Resignation as Minister of Militia is in the Hands of the Borden Government.

OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

OTTAWA, Nov. 13.—Sir Sam Hughes and the Government have finally broken. As the culmination of long-continued and steadily increasing friction between the Minister of Militia and his Cabinet colleagues over questions of appointments, patronage, political expediency and joint Ministerial responsibility, General Hughes to-day accepted the Prime Minister's suggestion that the former's resignation might be forthcoming, and shortly afternoon the resignation was placed in Sir Robert's hands.

THE FORMAL STATEMENT.

The formal announcement reads: "It is announced that the Prime Minister has requested and received the resignation of the Minister of Militia and Defence. The retirement of Sir Sam Hughes is in part the outcome of the establishment of the Ministry of Overseas Forces, and in part is due to assumption by Sir Sam of powers which, in the judgment of the Prime Minister, can be exercised only by the Government as a whole."

It is anticipated that the correspondence which brought about the request for the Minister's resignation will be made public immediately. It must first be submitted to the Governor-General.

SIR SAM'S RETORT

After reading the brief statement issued by Sir Robert Borden to-night defining the reasons for General Hughes' resignation, the latter made the following counter-statement:

"The correspondence will show that Sir Robert Borden asked for my resignation on account of the tone of a letter written on November 1st by the Minister of Militia, showing that the Prime Minister had made misstatements, which the Minister of Militia promptly proved to be incorrect, and had made criticisms which were shown to be unwarranted when all the facts were considered."

SIR SAM WANTS PUBLICITY.

There is a possibility that the Prime Minister may decide on second thoughts not to allow the correspondence to be published, and may so advise the Governor-General. In that event it is probable Sir Sam will seek other means of presenting his side of the case to the public.

CHARGES AND COUNTER-CHARGES

The writing of the resignation followed an exchange of letters between the two contained complaints and counter-charges. Although it was suspected in the capital that the resignation was coming, it was thought right up to the last moment that the quarrel might again be patched up. Finally, however, Sir Sam took the plunge, wrote the letter of resignation and sent it by a trusted friend and official to the Prime Minister's office. Sir Robert accepted the resignation, and his first official business with the new Governor-General this afternoon was to formerly place before him the resignation of one of his advisers, the one who should have been the most important in time of war. It was

Ottawa Citizen Says His Retirement Does Not Mean His Effacement and That the Minister's Sun is Far From Set

BRITISH OPINIONS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Nov. 14.—The Morning "Citizen," in concluding a long interview of the causes which contributed to the retirement of Sir Sam Hughes from the government, says: "Of his great accomplishment, no question can be raised. His popularity in the country at large, despite the enemies he has made, may compare with that of any statesman. Far from sulking in his tent, he proposes to put his shoulder to the wheel and go in to help the great cause. He is still an M.P., and those who know the man feel that his sun is far from set. Rather he is a figure in public life whose resignation in no way implies his effacement."

A British Opinion.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Commenting on the resignation of General Sir Sam Hughes, the Western Gazette to-day said editorially:

"The resignation is not surprising after the recent amazing speech of Gen. Hughes. It is just conceivable that our hospital arrangements may have broken down as far as some individual Canadians are concerned, but for the succor of all the wounded we have mobilized all our available civilian surgery. We don't even understand the suggestion that any were put at the mercy of first year medical students."

Otonabee Chapter Of The I. O. D. E.

The opening of the work room of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., which took place on Monday afternoon, proved most successful.

The room has most kindly been offered by Mr. James Lynch, who also provides both light and heat, and whose kindness in this connection is greatly appreciated by the members of the Chapter.

There was a very good attendance of the members and a large quantity of work was accomplished.

At the close of the work, the Regent, Mrs. Huycke, served tea, which was much enjoyed, and made a pleasant finish for a most satisfactory afternoon for those present.

VISCOUNT WED TO SCOTTISH TOWN CLERK'S DAUGHTER.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Viscount Ullington, 19 years old, second lieutenant in the Hampshire regiment, has electrified society by wedding the daughter of a Scottish town clerk. Miss Wilhelmina Mary George, the bride, is exactly his own age, and makes up for any lack of noble lineage by the possession of more than ordinary good looks.

A TEST.

Governments are assumed to be composed of statesmen; men of ability, outlook, dignity, and sense of responsibility. Measured by this standard, how does the present government at Ottawa stand? Has it high leadership and sense of fitness? If anything were needed to indicate a negative answer it is in the matter of its attitude towards the country; the calibre of the cabinet is shown by the fact, that in a matter of most vital national interest, that of a war time election, the announcement of the government's policy is left to a minor cabinet minister to be given out at a meeting of "ward heelers" in Toronto, the meeting of a Conservative ward association. If Premier Borden has any policy in the matter of an election or no election, he should manfully declare it, or, if he thinks best to have its declaration held in abeyance, must so his subordinates and prevent them making himself, his government and the country ridiculous by an important indication of policy, announced at a gathering of "ward heelers." Does Sir Robert Borden lead his government or does his government lead him? Are there not many masters of the administration beside the titular head?

EXIT SIR SAM.

The news of the dismissal of Lt.-General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of War, from the Borden cabinet, comes like a bolt from the blue. "Last evening, full of lusty life," he was making characteristic speeches, and in his way making recruiting a real thing instead of a plaything. Sir Robert Borden may have helped his political fortunes by throwing the Jonah overboard; but all the same Sir Sam's dismissal removes the chief, if not only live, aggressive, enterprising, do-something—even if the wrong thing—element of Sir Robert Borden's cabinet. Sir Sam had a hundred faults, but he had also many saving virtues. He was a dynamo of activity, he had self confidence—to perhaps an absurd degree—courage, enterprise, initiative; and if he had had a balance wheel, if his leader and his colleagues in the cabinet had steadied him, cooperated with him, wisely directing, and perhaps curbing, his energies, he might have been a more useful man in office than he has been. But he was driven, as far as leadership was concerned, with a slack rein, allowed to take the bit in his teeth. If the governments' action in dispensing with Sir Sam's services is suggested by the feeling that it would be good party politics to drop him, it has too long delayed dealing with him on his merits. For whatever failure he has made, the government as a whole is responsible. It has kept Sir Sam in office in the face of the protests of influential elements of its own party, and without deference to a large body of public opinion. The government cannot shirk all responsibility by flinging all on Sir Sam.

GIVE HER THE MEDAL.

An interesting and successful incident of the golden wedding celebration of Mr. and Mrs John Lang, Asphodel, was Mr. Lang's presentation of a gold coin to his grand-daughter, Miss Minnie Thompson of Julian's Corners, as a recognition of her coolness and courage in saving the life of her father Mr William Thompson, in a recent motor launch accident. It will be remembered that Miss Thompson and her father were in Clear Lake in a gasoline launch on the night of a sudden storm Nov. 7th. In the darkness the launch struck a rock, putting the engine out of order. It appears that Miss Thompson lit a match and a fire broke out at once. With great coolness she shot the emergency. Equipping her father and herself with two small life preservers that had been used in London, they leaped into the water and made for the shore of the nearest island, Buckhorn, Selwyn Township. Albert Neil of this city, who had been rowing in the vicinity, saw the launch burning and rowed to the rescue. When about midway Mr. Thompson became exhausted and says that if it had not been for his daughter's help and encouragement he must have drowned. At any rate, after a hard struggle, they both got ashore, the father quite done out. Miss Thompson left him there and made for the cottage, at that time vacant of course. She had as little regard, in the emergency, for property rights as she had fear of the water. She forced the door, and finding matches, soon had a fire going in the stove. She returned to the shore and assisted the father to the cottage, prepared him a warm drink, revived him, and they spent the night there, and in the morning saw that the launch had been burned to the water.

A young woman with such physical strength, strength of heart and readiness of action, deserves special reward and recognition of these qualities. Steps should be taken to bring the circumstances to the attention of the Royal Humane Society. Many actions, many deeds of life saving involving less courage, less presence of mind, less readiness of resource and promptness of action, have won the medal of the society.

BELATED INVESTIGATION.

The Ottawa Government, through Sir Robert Borden, has promised an investigation to be made in regard to the statements made by the Providence Journal on Friday to the effect that the nickel which the Deutschland is taking to Germany on its return voyage was purchased by German agents from the International Nickel Company in November, 1914, three months af the outbreak of the war, and that it came originally from Ontario nickel mines at Sudbury. The Prime Minister says he very much doubts that it was Canadian nickel that went on board the German "merchant-submarine."

Sir Robert may be sincere in his statement of belief but besides his official associates and partisans, and the doubting Thomases of the Ontario Government, hardly anybody in Canada agrees with him. Canada is the only place on this continent where nickel mines exist. It is the chief, if not sole, source of supply to the United States. Some apologists of the government say that, if the Deutschland got any nickel it was taken from the domestic supply in the United States. A likely story when these same partisans say that nickel is so sorely needed by American munition factories, that it would be an imperial calamity if Canada adopted the true national policy of placing an embargo upon the export of nickel matte and provided for its refinement in Canada. The Canadian General Electric Works are the only source of supply of electrical machinery in Peterborough; and if one saw carloads of electric machinery going out of Peterborough, who would be foolish enough to say that it came from some outside source, say, Montreal or Schenectady.

We should like to believe that the nickel on board the Deutschland was not nickel of Canadian origin, but we can't always believe what we want to believe. The Government may try to believe it, because it has an interest in so doing. It might lessen the responsibility of the Government for not adopting the real national policy of refining our nickel at home, and thus not only having sure control of it, but giving Canadians the full benefit of the refining industry, the employment of our workingmen, and of our capital, and all incidental industries. The ten or twelve million dollars yearly profit of the International Nickel Company, made by refining Canadian nickel matte, should be left in Canada.

The 236th Battalion, of this city, last week secured 44 recruits. Mr. S. L. Londers of Hamilton, and Rev. Capt. J. J. Mellor last night addressed a large recruiting meeting in the city, with good results.

Private Arthur Lumly of the 38th Battalion writing to his mother, Mrs T. W. Lumley, 270 Charlotte street, says he was shot through the foot on October 31st a painful wound through the instep that will likely lay him up for a considerable time. It had been raining in the trenches nearly every day and mud was knee deep.

Friends of the Peterborough boys, who are in the first draft of the Queen's Field Ambulance Corps, will be pleased to learn that they have arrived safely in England. Capt. Fitzson, Kingston, officer commanding this unit, received a cable on Saturday to this effect and word reached Pte. A. J. Lewis this morning.

Men still have a chance to join this unit as Pte. Lewis will be here recruiting for a few days longer at the Recruiting Office, Simcoe street.

WILL THE HIGH COST OF LIVING ORDER-IN-COUNCIL DO THE WORK THE GOVERNMENT EXPECTS OF IT?

The Globe does not accept the view of readers who condemn the order in Council purporting to make the withholding of food or its sale at prices which are unreasonable and unjust a criminal offence, and who declare the law is so involved that there is no possibility of securing its enforcement. In times of war those who would prevent the oppression of the weak and the gridding of the faces of the poor by food monopolists must work with the best tools within reach, not with the ideal tools that are never at hand when needed. There is a clause in the order in Council respecting food that precisely fits a case to which the Globe directed attention last week. If the Minister of Labour really means to use the power conferred upon him there need be no undue delay in discovering whether the Order in Council can be used effectively. On Wednesday last the Globe republished the following letter originally printed in a Montreal newspaper:

"Regarding the exorbitant prices for canned goods, in reply to a registered circular dated 19th May last, urging the purchase of old canned goods, we registered and mailed the following on the 23rd May:

"'With such horrors threatening us and a cold winter coming on, the only hope we can see is for our Government to remove the duty, and allow some canned goods to come into our poor, distressed country. We hope you will use your influence with them, as true patriots, and have this done.'

"On the 11th September, 1916, sales were made in the United States of several thousand cases of tomatoes at ninety cents (90c) per dozen.

"To-day I am offered thousands more at $1.30 in the United States, but the Canadian price, net cash at the factory, is $2.25 per dozen, or, say, $2.60 to the retail trade, which means 25 cents per tin retail trade, which meant 25 cents per tin retail to the consumer, while as late as Thanksgiving Day United States consumers could buy three tins for 25 cents retail.

"SAM. J. MATHEWSON,
"202 McGill Street, Montreal.
October 27."

Here is a very definite charge made against the Canners' Combine, or some other Canadian canner, by a responsible person. If what Mr. Mathewson says is true, the prices charged by Canadian packers for canned goods must be grossly excessive, and the men who demand them should be prosecuted. Ample power to discover the truth or falsity of Mr. Mathewson's charge is conferred by the order in Council. The Minister of Labour or his deputy may, without waiting for some one to take the initiative, "require any person who operates, controls or manages any cold-storage plant, packing house, cannery, factory, mine, warehouse, or other premises in which or in any part of which any necessary of life is prepared," to make a return showing the quantity of such necessary of life as may form the subject of inquiry the firm has in stock, what it cost, including all charges and expenses of an overhead and other nature, what the sale price is, and:

"Such other information concerning any necessary of life as the Minister may require, including a full disclosure of all existing contracts or agreements such person or his principal or agent may have at any time entered into with any other person touching or concerning the sale or resale prices of any necessary of life, or the period of time during which any necessary of life should be held as bailee or otherwise before sale or resale, or limiting the quantity of any necessary of life which should be sold to any one buyer or combination of buyers or within any limited district."

The Hon. Mr. Crothers has power in this law to investigate the Canners' Combine, disclose its selling regulations, and learn the profit actually earned by it on the real capital invested in its business. "Cost," which includes interest on a huge quantity of preferred and common stock that represents no substantial assets, perhaps not even good-will, is not the sort of "cost" contemplated in the order in Council. The Dominion Canners Company, on its own showing, puts up 80 per cent. of the fruit and vegetables canned for sale in the Dominion. Mr. Crothers has the Mathewson letter as ample justification for an investigation.

The assertion made that wholesale prices for canned goods in Canada are almost twice the prices charged in the United States is definite and specific. Will the Minister of Labour exercise his powers in an inquiry into the reason for such an amazing disparity? The eyes of the consumers are upon him, and they are far more to be feared in the long run than any trust, however powerful.—Globe.

GIFTS APPRECIATED BY THE MEN OF THE 39th

Mrs. E. J. Downey of the Soldiers' Wives and Mothers Club is in receipt of the following letter:

West Sandling,
Shorncliffe, Kent.,
October 18th, 1916.

Dear Mrs. Downey,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of a letter from you dated July 19th, enclosed in a bale of socks, writing paper, pencils and gum, which reached me safely only last Sunday. Your gift is timely and of much benefit to the men who still remain with us, and who have been with us since mobilization from the good city of Peterborough.

A reserve training battalion such as ours is, doing a very unpleasant, but absolutely necessary work, is in many cases forgotten by our good friends at home. These men are, in most cases, more in need of comforts rofm home than those at the front, where such distributions from countless sources are of daily occurrence. I regret we cannot locate any of our former men now in France.

I will see that these are properly distributed and trust many will convey personally, thanks to members of your Club for your goodness to them. Thanking you, ladies, on behalf of these men, and with our kindest regards for all at home, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
A. T. Carruthers,
Major.

Choice Said To Be Between Kemp And Hugh Clarke

Are Regarded as the Most Probable Candidates for Sir Sam Hughes' Shoes. Although Premier Borden May Act as Minister

SIR SAM IS CHEERFUL

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Nov. 14.—Sir Robert Borden has not yet announced whether or not he will make public correspondence, which is said to have resulted in the resignation of Sir Sam Hughes, as Minister of Militia. In Government circles this morning it is stated there is nothing to add to the official statement made last night.

Sir Robert is reported to have stated that the correspondence will be published "if the Governor-General consents."

Several names are mentioned in connection with his successorship. F. B. McCurdy, the present Parliamentary Secretary of the Department, is considered a probability by some, but Mr. McCurdy is a Nova Scotia man, and there cannot be two Cabinet members from the little Province in the same Government.

The name of Sir James Lougheed is also mentioned, but Sir James is a Calgary man, and the portfolio is regarded as an Eastern portfolio.

The choice probably lies between Col. Hugh Clark, M.P., for North Bruce, and Hon. J. E. Kemp, Minister without portfolio and head of the War Purchasing Commission.

In view of the minor nature of the duties now attached to the position, it is even considered probable in some quarters that the position may remain unfilled with McCurdy doing the work and Sir Robert acting as Minister.

General Hughes intimates that he will continue to do his part in the war and to cooperate with the Government wherever warranted. He retains a voice in the Commons and there are none who doubt that it will be used frequently at the coming session.

At the present time he is keeping a fairly stiff upper lip and appears to be very cheerful.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 14.—His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire, in his capacity as Governor General of Canada, was at his office in the East Block, this morning. The chief business which the new Governor-General was called upon to transact was to peruse the voluminous correspondence between the Prime Minister and General Hughes, which led up to the latter's resignation.

It is not anticipated that the correspondence will be available for publication until late this afternoon, at least.

British Government Wheat Shipment

OTTAWA, Nov. 14.—"We have no information whatever about the matter. If anything of that kind is being done it is by the Imperial Government." This was the answer received from the Prime Minister's office yesterday to an inquiry regarding the report appearing in Cleveland papers that the Canadian Government had chartered vessels to carry 14,000,000 bushels of wheat down the Great Lakes.

Sir George Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, is absent in the Maritime Provinces, and no information can be obtained from his department. Neither has Hon. Arthur Meighen, Solicitor General, who is usually consulted about such matters any knowledge of the report.

It is considered probable that the Imperial Government may be providing for the shipment of wheat contracted for some time ago.

THE BATTLE OF THE SOMME

"The greatest moving picture in the world"

Under Imperial Authority, the Wonderful Battle of the Somme Pictures Will Be Shown in Peterboro in the Grand Opera House Monday, and Wednesday Next

GREATEST OF ALL WARS is Armageddon. Greatest of all wars in human history is the world war now waging in Europe.

And greatest of all battles in British history, and it may be — in the history of Europe and the whole world—is the Battle of the Somme, the battle that marks the turning point in the war, the breaking of the deadlock of the trenches on the Western front and the assumption of the offensive by the Allies.

On July 1 the English and the French soldiers leaped from their trenches to begin the third and final phase of the titanic conflict. The pressure still continues. Slowly the German line bends backward, giving ground at the expense of millions of shells and thousands of human lives and millions of moneyed treasure. Every day comes news of fresh victory, more ground gained, more prisoners taken, more fine men of our race, nation, and Dominion lost in the fight for freedom and civilization.

HAT A STRUGGLE! The world never saw its like. Only by the imagination of great writers has it ever been visualized before. Huge artillery throws projectiles of nearly a ton's weight for distances counted in miles; machine guns spitting rifle balls as fast as hail; aeroplanes overhead, sappers and miners under foot; men in struggling, suffering millions, and the machinery of modern civilization harnessed in the organization of super-terrific war!

This battle of battles is being fought for humanity, fought for human liberty, fought by men of flesh, blood and spirit, pitted against the utmost powers of destruction, flying lead, bursting steel, poisonous clouds and force of explosion; scientific invention and discovery of the greatest age in chemistry and mechanics the world has ever known has conspired to destroy them, and they are failing, have already failed. The tide of battle has turned at last.

THE WONDERFUL MOVING PICTURE OF THE BATTLE OF THE SOMME IS ENDORSED BY THE COMMANDERS.

ARE YOU INTERESTED in this fight? Would you like to have been there on that great day, July 1, 1916, when the signal came, the minute-hand on the officers' wrist watches marked the ordered moment, the word was given and the British leaped the parapets?

That battle is still raging. It is three thousand miles away, but the fate of many a lad from Canada has already been sealed by it. The fate of Canada is bound up in it, along with the fate of the British Empire and all civilization. Would you like to have seen this battle? Would you like to see it now?

Films of this great battle have been secured for Canadian cities, made by the British Topical Committee, under the direction of the British War Office and the British Government. This film is the absolutely authentic moving photographs of the Battle of the Somme, made by operators, who took their cameras right into the jaws of death to get the pictures, working side by side with the machine guns and rifle men in the front-line trenches, working amid the hail of bullets, the roar of explosives and the concussions of bursting high explosive shells. Nothing like these pictures was ever shown before, for no pictures like them were before even possible. They are marvellous. Since they were first shown a few weeks ago they have been the sensation of Great Britain, where literally millions of people have been flocking to see them. "The Battle of the Somme' is t greatest moving picture in t world," says The London Eve ing News. The London Dail Times declares copies of the fil must be placed in the nation archives.

THIS FILM WAS RELEASE for public exhibition by t British Minister of War, M David Lloyd George, and t Topical Committee, upon t express understanding that n a foot of it was to be c or suppressed, and that it shown in its heroic entirety—gr and gruesome in parts as war self though it be. It was consid ed superior to censorship as a d monstration of what the soldie are doing and bearing to uphe the honour and glory of Brita and the Empire. It was felt th to mutilate this film would be deface the records of history a truth, a sacrilege and a profan tion. It is the first war film that h been allowed out of Great Brita uncensored. The Premier is keeping his own counsel as yet as to whom he will select. Even his Cabinet colleagues profess ignorance as to the choice. It may be that no new Minister will be appointed at all, in view of the fact that the duties of the portfolio have already been divided up among four or five men. Furthermore, it is to be noted that if a new Minister is sworn in and takes the salary of the portfolio there would have to be a by-election. The Government does not want any by-elections at the present moment, as witness the fact that [illegible] vacancies in

HEARD AT SEA

Written for The Examiner

BY A CANADIAN OVERSEAS

There is a tale in Devonshire that Sir Francis Drake is abroad again and by the roll of his drum is summoning the fleet to fight.

It was heard before, as the men of the Brixham trawlers can testify, about a hundred years ago, when a little man under the pseudonym of Nelson (for all Devonshire knows that Nelson was the reincarnation of Drake) went sailing by to Trafalgar.

"Ask of the Devonshire men,
For they heard in the dead of the night;
The roll of a drum,, and they saw HIM pass,
On a ship all shining white.

He stretched out his dead cold face,
And he sailed in the grand old way;
The fishes had taken an eye and an arm,
But he swept Trafalgar's Bay.

It was only before the great naval action in the North Sea—perhaps the greatest British victory since Trafalgar—that word came from the Brixham Trawlers again. They had "heard Drake's drum beat," and now they know that the ghost of Sir Francis Drake is inhabiting the body of Sir John Jellicoe.

Way down in Devonshire there is a little half-moon village with a stone quay edging the cluster of brown houses; there are red-sailed boats and brown-faced fisher-folk. You go down into the village by many steps, past drying nets and piled oars and masts from the little crafts in the bay.

Where the quay ends and the beach begins the path rises again and is left beyond the cliffs and across the Down. This path I followed until I reached the summit of the cliffs over-looking the sea. Behind me stood an old man, with a grey beard and a brown wrinkled face. He had heavy gold ear-rings in his ears, around his neck was a gipsy scarf, and he smoked a small-bowled thin clay pipe shiny and black, which he fondled lovingly.

"Good morning," I said. "Are you from the village?" "One time I was," he answered, "but I live away over there now," and he pointed to a little church across the Downs.

"D'ye hear it?" said the old man suddenly, every muscle tense. "You can hear the roll of it. It's just as he told us 'twould be, and it means what he said, too." "Those are the guns in France," I said, for you could hear their ceaseless grumbling over the water.

"Guns?" he said, smiling pityingly. "They're not guns. It's the drum rolling. He's afloat again and away up Channel."

He carefully knocked the ashes from his pipe and began to refill it.

"This is a quaint weed," he said. "It is not as new as it might have been once, but it was brought to this country in the 'Heart's Desire' in her last run from Virginia.

"Benjamin Capel, master mariner, is as good a judge of tobacco as he is a sailor or a fighter. Many a packet of good brown leaf he's brought me. There's the drum again! Listen to it, listen. It's a sign for all of England's enemies, but it's mostly a sign for us.

"That's as he meant it. When we hear it we are to remember all we fight for. Some say we fight for the present; some for the years to come. Both be right, but I have a mind we fight for the past as well. Listen here o' nights and you will hear it all—the sound of cannon and the crash of shot through oak timbers. I've heard it with the crying of the dying and the maimed. I've passed the shot in charge of hands from the locker to the guns. See that old iron there?"—and he kicked a rib of iron in a stone slab by his feet—"that's part of the basket of Cliff Beacon that I lit with these hands the night of Armada's coming.

"Then I got me down and joined Drake. Hark! Yes, that's Drake, his drum sounding—its not the guns of France,' and it means we win as Drake won."

Then, returned and bade me good-bye. "What's your name," I called after him as he went down the slope. "John Treadwell," he called back. I walked on across the cliffs and over the Downs to the little church, and I passed under the lych-gate into the churchward. Here I stopped to read the writing on a grey hearstane:—

Here Lyes the Bodie of Johnne Treadwell of thys Parish,
Who died on Hys Shippe when fighting the Spaniard.

As I returned through the village the innkeeper greeted me, "The guns be noisy this morning," he said.

"Those aren't guns," I replied. "That's Drake's drum," and I left him gaping after me with perplexity as I passed on.

"Drake is fighting for England again,
Pinnace and Galleon are at it amain,
In foul weather and flying sand
There's reek of powder and smell of blood.
Hear creak of yards and crack of sheet,
The patter on deck of unshod feet,
Day or night you can hear a fight;
Lie by the cliff and it's just as if
The Don and El Draque were at it amain,—
It's Drake fighting for England again."

WOMAN OF SIXTY BEATS A CONVICT

Bennington, Vermont, Nov. 14. — Fred Godfrey, a civil war veteran, and the keeper of the county jail, owes his life to the valiant battle put up by his wife, who although over 60 years old, hammered a 200-pound negro convict into insensibility with a padlock, after he had overpowered her husband in a desperate effort to escape.

William, the negro, seized Godfrey, as the slight 70-year-old man passed his cell, and was choking him when Mrs. Godfrey hearing her husband's cry for help, rushed to the cell. Seizing the padlock from the cell door she hammered the burly negro until he fell beside the unconscious body of her husband

THEY WERE RUNDOWN

How often we hear it said of a man or woman that "they were rundown in health" which accounts for their present sickness. For that reason it is important that when you find you tire easily, when your nerves are troublesome or your work is irksome, you should strengthen your system immediately with the blood-enriching, tissue-building food in Scott's Emulsion which contains the purest cod liver oil and is free from harmful drugs.

America's exports of war supplies for the nine months, ending September 31, amounted to $967,970,000, or more than 25 per cent of the country's total export trade.

The statement of the actual condition of American banks and trust companies for the week shows that they held $98,806,950 reserve in excess of legal requirements. A decrease of $35,200,790 from last week.

Further strikes for higher wages and shorter hours are expected in high financial circles to result from the election of Wilson because of the success of the railroad unions. It is said the action of the carriers in asking an injunction against the 8-hour law is an effort to check tendencies in the direction indicated.

The continued rising prices for raw materials with rumors of new orders for copper and steel pending for allied account, are responsible for much of the confidence shown by active speculators, who are well fortified in margins, and it will be a difficult matter for the professional element to bring a radical shake-out in the markets unless assisted by some important unsettling factor not seen at present

BATTLE OF THE PENS CLEAR DECK FOR WAR

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The Daily Sketch announces the United States election returns with the following headlines:

"President Wilson is President still. Most accomplished writer of notes heads poll. Berlin scribes must polish up their pens for fray."

Extracts from the article follow:

"Mr. Wilson has been re-elected President of the United States. We can now look forward to a long-continued interchange of polite notes on the value of human life and human rights between Washington and Berlin. Until March, 1921, a President who is too proud to fight will voice the opinion of the American nation in all the great international questions facing the world's rulers during that time.

"On the progress of the European war the result will not have the slightest effect. The outcome of the gigantic electoral struggle leaves things as they were. The Berlin letter writer can polish their pens, which will be the only weapons they will need to defend their outrageous breaches of international law against the indignation of the people of the United States. After Col. Roosevelt's strong anti-German declarations at meetings in support of Mr. Hughes, this news must cause a sigh of relief in Berlin."

"Opinion" prints a full page cartoon depicting Uncle Sam standing at South Ferry, with Brooklyn Bridge and the skyscrapers as background, watching a woman labelled "United States' National Honour" sinking in the water with a caption quoting Uncle Sam as saying: "I shan't be a minute. I've just got to pop over to the polling booth before I try to save you."

RHEUMATISM AFTER HIS DAY'S OUTIN

Hunting Trip on a Wet Day Brin Painful Results

Once upon a time Charles Mullen of Philadelphia, went hunting. It was a dismal rainy day, and long exposure to cold and wet brought on a severe attack of rheumatism. He was confined to his home.

A friend recommended Sloan's Liniment, citing his own case as evidence of its effectiveness. Mullen bought a bottle and applied it to his aching limbs. Soon improvement was noted and he was able to return to his business.

Mr. Mullen writes "Since that experience I have never been without Sloan's Liniment in the medicine chest." You will find it useful for bruises, sprains, toothache, and relieves lame back, neuralgia, in fact all external pains. At all druggists 25c, 50c and $1.00 a bottle.

Constables Exceed Their Powers

Attorney-General Explains Provisions of Ontario Temperance Act.

TORONTO, Nov. 14.— Hon. I. B. Lucas states that constables have been exceeding their powers in searching grips and persons for liquor.

"An officer is not justified in searching simply because he believes a man is carrying liquor," stated Mr. Lucas. "The Act is clear on that point. The officer must act in a reasonable way and must have some ground for belief or suspicion that a man has liquor for the purposes of sale before he can make any search. There must be a bona fide belief that the liquor is for sale, and if he did not have a bona fide belief there might be room for an action against him in a suit for civil damages."

Slew His Wife And Himself

Had Been Discharged From Asylum Week Ago—Boarding House Keeper Saves Her Children.

BROCKVILLE Ont., Nov. 14.—William Stokes murdered his wife at their boarding house yesterday morning, and then so wounded himself that he died at 1 p.m. Mrs. Stokes went to the bedroom with her husband's breakfast, and upon entering the apartment he attacked her with a razor, cutting her throat from ear to ear. He then turned the razor upon himself, gashing his windpipe.

Mrs. Gilbert, the mistress of the boarding house, hearing the struggle, went upstairs and detected Stokes going into the bedroom where her two children were sleeping. Blood was streaming from the wound in his throat. She thwarted his attempt to enter the room, and had no difficulty persuading him to go back to his own apartment. The room was spattered with blood, and the bedclothes and furniture scattered about. Stokes was found by the police sitting on the bed beside his victim, quite weak from loss of blood.

The murderer until recently was a patient at the Eastern Hospital for the Insane, and was discharged about a week ago. He was married in Prescott to Mrs. McClean, a widow of about 25 years of age. It is reported Stokes was refused a marriage license by local authorities, but later procured one in Prescott.

That Tickling In The Throat

Can Be Quickly Cured by DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

This trouble is most distressing and is caused by a cold settling in the throat. The hard dry cough causes that nasty, tickling, irritating sensation and keeps you from enjoying your night's rest. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs and barks combined with the lung healing virtues of the world-famous Norway pine tree, will give almost instant relief in all cases of this nature.

Mrs. Alex. Durward, Athelstan, Que., writes: "I have used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for a number of years, and find it the only thing that will help me when I have a severe cold. It helps the soreness, and stops the tickling sensation in my throat, which is so irritating. I always use it for both myself and the children, and would not be without it in the house."

The thousands of testimonials we have received during the past twenty five years prove that Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is an excellent remedy for all coughs and colds, so see that you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it.

It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c, and 50c, at all dealers.

The above represents the number of years spent in fruitless efforts to cure a bad case of eczema with ordinary ointments, compared with the time it took Zam-Buk to effect a complete and permanent cure.

This was the experience of Mr. H. C. Buckley of 461 East Broadway, Portland, Ore. Writing to the Zam-Buk Co., he says: "For fifteen years I suffered with a bad case of eczema, and used all kinds of so-called "cures" and treatments, but nothing was capable of curing me until I tried Zam-Buk. This wonderful balm, however, completely cured me in less than a year, and not only so, but I have had no return of the disease. I strongly recommend Zam-Buk to anyone afflicted as I was."

This is but one of the hundreds of cases where Zam-Buk has effected a cure when everything else failed. The reason is easily explained. Zam-Buk being unusually refined—containing absolutely no animal fats or mineral drugs such as are contained in ordinary ointments—is capable of penetrating to the underlying tissues where skin diseases have their roots. Ordinary ointments, on the contrary, never get beyond the surface skin and so are incapable of effecting permanent cures.

Zam-Buk is just as good for salt rheum, ringworm, boils, ulcers, abscesses, blood-poisoning, piles, cuts, burns, scalds and all skin injuries. All druggists or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 50c. box. 3 for $1.25.

DETECTIVES CIRCLED THE GLOBE TO OBTAIN DIVORCE EVIDENCE

New York, N. Y. — On evidence obtained by a detective on a 25,000-mile chase around the world after John Darlington Marsh of New York and London, and various affinities, his wealthy wife, Ivor T. Marsh, of New York and Paris, obtained a decree of divorce from Supreme Court Justice Hendrick. The plaintiff, according to the court attaches, is the widow of the late James O'Connor, millionaire banker and Texas oil financier, and was married to Marsh only six months ago.

The defendant is understood to be in London. He made no defense, nor was he represented by counsel. The wife's attorneys were Sullivan & Cromwell, of No. 49 Wall street, New York.

Besides Mrs. Marsh's testimony, that of Detective Henry B. Iles, was given, and depositions taken by an English barrister from witnesses in England, were read into the record

GIRDLED GLOBE IN CHASE.

Iles's testimony revealed how starting from New York, he girdled the globe behind Marsh and his women acquaintances. The chase began, he said on the pier in New York, where the defendant was found boarding a steamer in the company of Miss Helen Mack, the only co-respondent named in the papers.

The witness testified that he lost track of Miss Mack in England, but followed Marsh to the continent tracking him with various unidentified women through France, Italy, India, Austria, New Zealand and across the continent from the Pacific to the Atlantic. All the time, the detective asserts, Marsh was unaware he was being shadowed. Divorce papers were served upon him in New York, and he was last heard of in London.

Mrs. Marsh is described as a pretty, stylishly dressed woman about 35 years old. Little is known of the couple's domestic troubles in Rockland county. Just why the action was brought here has not developed. No alimony was asked by the plaintiff, the court attendants being told that this was a matter the couple "would adjust between themselves."

WEDDED IN JUNE, 1915.

Newspaper files show that John Darlington Marsh and Mrs. James O'Connor were married in June, 1915, in Lewisburg, Va., while they were visiting the White Sulphur Springs. The bride was described as an attractive young woman, and was said to have inherited much wealth through the death of her first husband. She was well known to the social colony there but Marsh was described as a newcomer.

Mrs. Marsh swore in the divorce proceedings that she was married before, but her testimony shed no light on who was her former husband. In fact from the papers it would appear

Efforts to more thoroughly identify Miss Mack were unavailing, it being said that she lived in Manhattan, and is thought to be an actress. Marsh was described by the witnesses as having 'no occupation.' Mrs. Marsh, according to the information received here, divides her time between New York and Paris society.

Flavelles Ltd. Will Locate In Lindsay

LINDSAY, Nov. 14.—The Flavelles Ltd. have decided upon rebuilding a cold-storage plant in town on a greater scale than ever, according to an announcement made yesterday.

The plant will be erected upon the site of the one recently destroyed by fire, and immediate steps will be taken to cope with the present needs which the trade demands. Buildings for this purpose will be erected at once, said a member of the firm.

The new structure will be built much on the same lines as the old plant but more up-to-date, and space for everything in the produce line will be provided for in the new building.

The enormous business of Flavelles Ltd. can be judged when it is authentically stated that the firm did an export trade of $2,000,000 last year, and purchased $90,000 worth of produce from the farmers living within a radius of 20 miles of Lindsey.

The latest and most improved machinery will be installed and a greater number of help will be employed.

"Battle of Somme" Creates Wonderful Sensation in Britain

VIEWED BY THE KING

Lloyd George Would Not Allow Cenorship of Pictures

Authoritatively recognised as the greatest war film yet produced, the official motion pictures of "The Battle of the Somme" in which the British initiated their offensive July 1 and depicting the most stirring scenes of that they are now the object of inspread prominence and discussion that they are now the object of international attention.

The pictures took England by storm, bringing to millions of people who flocked to the moving picture theatres a keener realisation of the significance of the Somme offensive than all the newspapers had been able to do through lengthy despatches and official statements from the front.

King George and Queen Mary saw the pictures and the King advised everybody to see them. Lloyd George declared the pictures should reach everyone. Sir Douglas Haig, the British commander in the field, changed some of the sub-titles but found no other changes necessary.

No battle in which the British have been engaged has entailed the use of so many men, so many guns, such vast quantities of such powerful ammunition as the Somme. The Battle of Waterloo was a skirmish compared to the first drive of the British in this conflict.

In July's operations the British casualties were 20,000 or a little less than the total army commanded by Wellington at Waterloo. Long before the big attack was launched preparations were made. Now that the drive is under way there is intense but methodical acuivity for miles behind this part of the allies' front.

HISTORICALLY TRUE.

The British Government sanctioned the film as an official historical record of one of the greatest episodes in history, and it is the first war film that was ever allowed to pass without coming under official British censorship.

The English papers have universally acclaimed the film to be the best yet produced. Some of the scenes, the taking of which was extremely dangerous to the operators of the machine, rank in vividness and dramatic quality with battle pictures by famous artists.

Because the pictures show actual battle scenes, in which men are killed, protests were written condemning the pictured, but the overwhelming voice of pulpit, press and public was that the film was the right way to show the nation that its soldiers were upholding its honour.

The picture involves five thousand feet of film, divided into five reels, requiring an hour and fifteen minutes for its presentation.

Stark horror is revealed in some of the episodes of the pictures. One is permitted to see what war really is. There are neither evasions nor politic reservations. Occasionally the scenes are so grim in their realism that it seems almost indecent to be witnessing them from an easy chair. The pictures, in short, are calculated to bring the war home to impressionable people with the force of almost magic, and few who see them but will be better able to understand what the allies have before them, and to render tribute to the brave men who are performing the job bravely, staunchly, and more often than not with a cheery grin on their faces.

perhaps not a very auspicious introduction for the Duke of Devonshire to Canada's Administration.

FOUR NAMES SUGGESTED.

No successor has been named for the Militia Department portfolio. Four names are suggested: Hon. A. E. Kemp, at present Chairman of the War Purchasing Commission, a former acting Minister of Militia, and Minister without portfolio in the Cabinet; Sir James Lougheed, Government leader in the Senate, formerly acting Minister of Militia, and at present Chairman of the Dominion Hospitals Commission; F. B. McCurdy, the Parliamentary Secretary for the Militia Department, who has been more or less in control of the department for the past three months; and Col. Hugh Clark, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs, and Sir Robert Borden's confidential handy man.

PREMIER KEEPING HIS OWN COUNSEL.

The Premier is keeping his own counsel as yet as to whom he will serve. Even his Cabinet colleagues profess ignorance as to the choice. It may be that no new Minister will be appointed at all, in view of the fact that the duties of the portfolio have already been divided up among four or five men. Furthermore, it is to be noted that if a new Minister is sworn in and takes the salary of the portfolio there would have to be a by-election. The Government does not want any by-elections at the present moment, as witness the fact that there are now sixteen vacancies in the Commons, and no move is in contemplation towards filling any of them.

CLIMAX OF THE QUARREL

The quarrel between Sir Sam and the rest of the Government has been rapidly coming to a head ever since the former returned from England two months ago. As has been public property for months past, a section of the Conservative party has been out after Sir Sam's scalp almost since the outbreak of the war. He has been his own master in the Militia Department, and his brusque manner of turning down members of his own party who thought they had a right to exercise political patronage, his refusal to consult his Cabinet colleagues on the details of his departmental administration, his occupancy of the centre of the stage when they, too, wanted a place in the spotlight, and his riding rough-shod over all and sundry who tried to interfere with him, brought him many enemies, although at the same time giving him a unique prestige as the man in the Cabinet who "did things".

WHAT TURNED THE SCALE.

That the above considerations have finally turned the scale for Premier Borden, and have been more than anything else responsible for his resignation, is evident from the fact that the Premier did not call for Sir Sam's resignation after the revelations of the Davidson Commission, and more particularly the Meredith-Duff Commission last spring. Sir Robert by his silence last spring practically condoned Sir Sam's relations with ex-Hon. Colonel J. Wesley Allison, both in connection with the fuse transactions and with the small-arms sale.

CURBING OR DISMISSAL PROMISED.

Just prior to Sir Sam's departure to England last summer came the Camp Borden episode, and Tory Toronto increased the pressure upon Sir Robert Borden for Sir Sam's decapitation. Then Sir Sam went overseas. Before he returned it is understood that Sir Robert promised his supporters here that Sir Sam would be either curbed or dismissed. The curbing process was brought about by further dividing up the responsibilities of the department among Sir George Perley, Mr. F. B. McCurdy and Mr. R. B. Bennett. Sir Sam however, had meanwhile continued to go along doing things off his own bat. When he thought something ought to be done he did it at once without consulting his Cabinet colleagues, for whom he did not have very much respect. In England he had appointed his own Military Council, made numerous important appointments and practically dismissed the Director-General of Medical Service, Surgeon-General Guy Carleton Jones, all without consulting anybody but himself.

THOSE TORONTO SPEECHES

When he came back to Canada the conflict started again. His appointments overseas were cancelled, and Surgeon-General Guy Carleton Jones reinstated in his former office. At first it seemed that Sir Sam might submit to the curb and keep quiet. But on coming back reinvigorated from his hunting trip he proceeded to tell the people of Toronto last week a few things about Canadian autonomy and the War Office mistakes. He also hinted at conscription, a word which is taboo with the Cabinet. Sir Robert read the report of his speech in the Friday morning's papers.

SIR ROBERT'S DEMANDS; A WARM REPLY.

Almost at the very time that Sir Sam was receiving further laudations from some of his Toronto admirers who warned the politicians to keep their hands off him, Sir Robert was writing a general indictment of his Minister of Militia, calling on him for explanations, apologies and promise to be good hereafter or else he would have to get out. Sir Sam got the letter on his arrival here on Saturday morning. It is understood that there was a warm reply, and then a further letter from the Premier. Although the correspondence has not yet been made public, there is good ground for saying that recriminations were mutual. It is whispered that Sir Sam took the Premier to task for allowing his colleagues, Messrs. Meighen, Rogers and White especially, to undermine him in his leader's estimation.

LAST OFFICIAL ACT.

Finally there came the resignation at noon to-day just after Sir Sam in his Ministerial capacity, had been present to welcome the new Governor-General to the capital. In fact, he was one of the first to shake the hand of the Duke of Devonshire when he landed on the platform. Having performed this last duty, he returned to his office and despatched the document announcing his retirement from the Cabinet after five years as Minister of Militia.

CORPORAL BALDWIN—The four-year-old son of the Rev. J. R. Baldwin, of Cornwall, Ontario. Corporal Baldwin is the smallest corporal in Canada. We do not know if he is on the Paymaster's Roll, but the 154th Battalion, Cornwall, all know the little Corporal. He is a grandson of Mr. A. E. Byers, representative for the Canada Metal Company, Ltd., and has numerous relatives in Peterborough.

A Never Failing Way To Banish Ugly Hairs

(Beauty Notes)

Beauty-destroying hairs are soon banished from the skin with the aid of a delatone paste, made by mixing some water with a little plain powdered delatone. This is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed to remove the remaining delatone. This simple treatment banishes every trace of hair and leaves the skin without a blemish. Caution should be used to be certain that it is delatone you buy.

Big Army Order For Rubber Boots

The British government has just given one order to a single manufacturer for 2,000,000 pairs of hip length rubber boots, one of the largest orders of any kind the world has ever known. This order is of course to supply the army, and the manufacture of the boots will require 7,000 tons of crude rubber, cotton fabrics and chemicals.

The supplying of the raw material in this instance is a matter of ease, England's controlling the world's output of rubber through her sagacity in financing rubber plantations in her colonies, which began producing about 15 years ago, and which now turn out nearly 75 per cent. of the world's supply.

This immense order calls attention to the fact that through the increasing price of leather and the resultant high cost of shoes, a larger amount of rubber footwear will be used in Canada this year than ever before. Rubber will be used not only because of its being a safeguard to health in the snow and slush of winter but as a means of protecting the costly leather of shoes from the ravages of water.

SHE GAINED 10 POUNDS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Marlowe, Ont. writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dreary, tired nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was in fact, a semi-invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up hopeless by using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have gained ten pounds of new, rich blood, my nerves are strong, my heart and kidneys are sound, and I am a well woman."

ASSEMBLY HALL

Like the apostle Barnabas in Acts 11:23 who "when he saw the grace of God was glad", in the Assembly Hall on George street of recent days, there has been abundant cause for thanksgiving to "ascend from many hearts to the Lord", the grace of God bringing salvation to a few, having been manifest. In these the last and closing days of the present dispensation of the grace of God, when, as the apostle Peter divinely predicts "perilous times shall come" and "men shall be lovers of pleasure, rather than lovers of God" 2 Peter 3, 1 and 4., it is a cause for great joy and encouragement to those who have a godly interest in the eternal welfare of others, to see any, whether few or many, aroused by the Spirit of God to see their condition in which the god of this world has their minds blinded so that the Gospel is hid from them. 2 Cor. 3, 4 and, as has been witnessed in the Assembly Hall lately, coming, some from the city and others driving from the country, week after week to the Sunday evening gospel meeting to hear the Gospel of Christ, simply and plainly declared. Like the Ethiopian Eunuch of Acts 8 seeking, "some to guide him" and drinking in the message as Philip "preached unto him Jesus" these seeking souls, realising that in the unsullied light of God's presence they stood "condemned already" by believing the substitutionary work of God's Christ, which the message of the cross plainly declares, have according to the promise of John 1. v. 12, become the sons of God, there by escaping the impending judgment of God on all who die not having "obey the gospel". While in these days of hypocrisy and sham religion it is considered advisable to let time prove the reality of profession, the local company of the Lords people take encouragement from this visitation of grace and giving thanks to God, seek to go on in the work of the Lord, extending a hearty invitation to all to come and hear the Gospel every Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. The Assembly Hall is in the Old Opera House Building on George street on the first floor.

Police Send Xmas Boxes To Old Mates

Sergt. Reid and Detective Meagher were engaged this morning in the pleasant duty of preparing three Christmas boxes to be forwarded to Sergt. Eddie Downs, of the Coldstream Guards, who is in an hospital in England with a gunshot wound in one hand. Sergt. Georges Cookman, with the 93rd Battalion in France, and to Private Jack McFadden of the 93rd, who is wounded, in Rouen Hospital, No. 5. The Police Department made up a sum with which they purchased pipes, tobacco, candy, playing cards and various other articles the police had carefully listed. A dozen candles are included in the bag to Sergt. Cookman, the only one of the three who is unwounded. Pte. McFadden was on the military police force at the 93rd last winter.

County Constable Moore contributed to the boxes.

Max Fleishman at The Conservatory

The public is invited and urged in the interests of its own pleasure, to hear Max Fleishman, the wonderfully brilliant boy violinist, at the Conservatory of Music on Friday evening, Nov. 17, together with the Children's Orchestra and chorus of 100 voices in the cantata "The Walrus and the Carpenter." Admission, 25 cents; matinee on Saturday afternoon, at 2.30; admission 10 cents.

The Easiest Way to End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

Real Estate Change

Dr. R. W. Bell, Toronto, Inspector of the Provincial Board of Health, was in the city today on private business. He concluded the sale of his residence property, 492 George street, to Mr. W. J. Hancock, Auctioneer. The figure is not given.

Peterboro Delegates Delegated With Boys' Conference in Toronto

Last evening the majority of the thirty-eight representatives from Peterborough who attended the Boys' Conference in Toronto, arrived home enthused with the ideals which had been set before them by this organization. This conference, organized by Mr. Statten but a few years ago, has gained widespread interest. Its influence in banding the boys in their "teams" together cannot be over estimated; also for training the boys to become leaders for Christ and Church. Already such meetings as that held in Toronto have been held in St. John, Halifax, Montreal and Ottawa, and have met with splendid response. The Toronto meeting was attended by over one thousand boys from Ontario. The boys who returned to town last evening cannot say enough for the kindness and hospitality shown to them at the homes of the people with whom they were billeted.

The election of officers was as follows:

President—Jack Maughan, Toronto.
Vice-Pres.—Norman McBeth, Hamilton.
Secretary—Ed. Chamberlain, Toronto.

The principal speech of the Conference was made by the organizer, Mr. Statten, who gripped the boys with racy descriptive contrasts between the boy who goes onward and upward and the boy who goes down and out. Then he showed how eminently well fitted the standard efficiency tests are to get all the boys on the upward grade, and how important it is that boys in Ontario, and in every part of the country, should spread the idea. "No country has ever before set us a course of this kind" said Mr. Statten. "Forty years ago the Prussians decided that they would instil into the boy life of Germany the doctrine of mastership. To-day we have this awful world conflict because the boys accepted that worn-out and archaic idea of national selfishness. No country in the world save Canada has mapped out a definite course of training opposed to domination. With Germany it was 'that will of power.' With us it is 'that will to serve.'

The True Victory.

For every man who goes to the front there is a boy at back of him who must get into training," challenged Mr. Statten. "The true victory will be won not so much in the tactical fields today as in 1935, when the results of the boys' work become apparent. I trust that every boy will catch the vision of 1935 and consecrate himself to the future of Canada. Every last boy here is asked to to take his place with men. There are reasons why we cannot all be at the front, but there is no reason why we should not all belong to the national service campaign for the Canada that is to be."

Wm. Hill Surrendered Himself After Long Chase By Constables

William Hill, brother of Davis Hill, of Dummer, who has been committed for trial on four charges of cattle stealing, gave himself up yesterday afternoon to Mr. Pallen of Pallen's Corners, who drove him into the city and handed him over to County Constable Moore. He appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning on a charge of complicity in the cattle stealing and was remanded for a week, when he will be arraigned before County Magistrate Langley.

Constable Moore stated that the Hill district has been kept under surveillance and that the chase for William Hill and Clarence Sampson had not been dropped. Hence, the prisoner evidently surrendered himself, tired of dodging about in the early winter weather.

HAD AWFUL ATTACKS OF HEART TROUBLE

For 5 or 6 Years

Diseases and disorders of the heart and nervous system have become frightfully prevalent of late years.

One can scarcely pick up a paper but he will find recorded instances of sudden deaths through heart failure, or of prominent men and women unable to prosecute their ordinary business or profession on account of a breaking down of the nervous system.

We do not desire to unnecessarily alarm anyone, but to sound a word of warning.

When the heart begins to beat irregularly, palpitates and throbs, has shooting pains through it, it is time to stop and think.

To all sufferers from heart and nerve troubles Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. Frank Arseneau, Newcastle, N. B., writes: "I had awful attacks of heart trouble for the past five or six years, and as I had tried many kinds of medicine without getting any better I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and to my surprise I found ease from the second dose. I continued taking them until I had used six boxes, and now I feel as well as can be.

"At the present time my sister is using them for nervousness and finds great comfort by their use."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c or three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Watchful Waiting Now Applicable To Captain Koenig

Time For Deutschland's Departure Still Uncertain—Everything Ready.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 14. — The time of the departure of the German submarine Deutschland was still uncertain to-night, although everything apparently has been in readiness since Saturday for a quick dash to the sea. At the customs house it was said the manifest had not yet been filed, but that this formality together with the issuance of the clearance papers would occupy only a short time.

There were more rumours to-day that the British cruisers were outside the three-mile limit waiting for the Deutschland, and that two German warsubmarines were off the coast to convoy the boat back to Germany. There was no confirmation.

President's Cousin Commits Suicide

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Carroll Gault, aged 35, nephew of Mrs. President Woodrow Wilson, to-day committed suicide by poison. When questioned, while efforts were being made to save his life, Gault replied: "I want to die."

"So you think Katherine made a very suitable match?" "Yes, indeed; you know what a nervous and excitable girl she is. Well, she married a composer."

Detention Home Boys Make Break For Liberty at Church Service

OTTAWA, Nov. 14.—Three juveniles escaped from the custody of the Detention Home Guard Sunday morning when coming out from mass at the Blessed Sacrament Church. Two were recaptured, while a third is still at large. It is the custom to bring the Catholic children from the home to mass in a body. They wait till the church is cleared of parishioners, and then form in line and march out with the other children, and back to the home.

Evidently a concerted plan for escape had been formed before the boys went to church. While they followed with rapt devotion the ceremony, three nimble brains were working in unison and revolving every chance of escape. When the people started out there was a sudden scramble, the patter of lying feet, and three boys scampered out into the street. They scattered in different directions.

One portly parishioner took in the situation at a glance, ran down the church steps and started up Fourth avenue after one of the delinquents. His toe caught in a wire strung across the church lawn, and he took a header into a bevy of ladies who were conversing in front of the edifice. He disorganized the meeting.

Picking himself up he continued puffing up the street, with coat tail flapping in the breeze, but minus his hat and dignity. He boarded the running board of a passing auto, but lost his game at the first turn. Those who left the church immediately after the service were unaware of what happened and many conceded that the gentleman who brushed them roughly aside had suddenly become possessed of the Marathon bug.

He returned to the church crestfallen and empty handed some time later. One schoolboy landed one of the would-be runaways, while another was captured later in the day. The other is at large still.

Three Grocers Fined $37 Apiece For Selling Malt Vinegar They Purchased As Standard Goods

Three reputable retail grocers were each fined $25 and costs, amounting to $37, by Magistrate Dumble this morning when they pleaded guilty to having sold malt vinegar that was inferior to the Government standard. The vinegar was manufactured by the Turner Vinegar Co. of Toronto and sold to the local trade through the firm's traveller William McKenzie who, one of the grocers stated, had said that he would guarantee the Turner vinegar to be as good as Crosse and Blackwell's, or Holbrook's. J. A. Richey, Inspector for the Inland Revenue Department told of having purchased three bottles of the Turner vinegar which he had analyzed and on the report of the analysis undertook the prosecution of the three grocers.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, appearing for the grocers stated that he had investigated the Turner Company Limited, and as far as he could learn, it was Turner and Limited in name only. A man named Ryan was reported to conduct the business, which had an office on Front street, Toronto, where a couple of clerks were installed. It had long since ceased to be a limited company, and in that respect Mr. Gordon stated it was proceeding contrary to the law. It was illegally doing business on a second count, he stated, for it wasn't registered. McKenzie, the traveller, was in Peterborough within the past two days, and stated that he hadn't been in the "Turner" office since last April, according to the evidence of one of the grocers. He said he didn't know anything about the question of whether the company would compensate the local grocers if they were fined, and in fact was saying very little about the vinegar, pushing unfermented wines instead.

The grocers asked Mr. Dumble if there was no redress for them. They had bought the vinegar in good faith, without the least suspicion that it was below standard. His Worship replied that he had recently fined his own grocer $50. For that Mr. Gordon remarked facetiously that there might be a personal reason for the Magistrate's action.

Mr. Richey explained to the grocers that they might protect themselves against manufacturers of whose products they hold some suspicion, by obtaining from their travellers a signed warrant, simply a statement, that they know the products to be of standard quality and unadulterated. Otherwise the grocer accepts the article and the liability for whatever inferiority it may possess.

What peeves the grocers is the fact that instead of the single manufacturer being prosecuted retailers are lined up and mulcted of a corresponding number of fines. They consider themselves victims of what they regard as a clumsy scheme to protect the retailer against impure food when the more direct method would be to apprehend the manufacturer and so prevent the continuance of the manufacture of the product.

New Era Dawned For the Intrepid Heroes of Aerial Battlefields

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The Times has received the following despatch from its special correspondent with the armies in France:

The German airmen have grown bolder. They are making a more serious attempt to dispute the mastery of the air with us. This winter probably will see some bitter fighting.

Air fighting now is much closer and more savage than ever it has been before. The importance of air mastery has been more clearly demonstrated, the machines engaged and the number killed have immensely increased with great speed of machines and greater cleverness in handling them.

The old leisurely combats are no more. Now it is a headlong plunge. A single shot, a dip, a swerve, another shot, a loop, a single shot, a duel swifter, more breathless, more reckless than any fighting that ever was before on earth or sea.

One of the chief evidences of the new aerial activity was shown in the battle in which seventy airplanes were engaged Thursday and which the official communique mentioned.

WOODMEN CELEBRATED THEIR COMING OF AGE

Enjoyable Affair Was Held by Sherwood Forest Camp Last Night —Head Consul Commander in the Chair.

A GOOD PROGRAMME

A good and appreciative audience gathered in W.O.W. Hall last night to celebrate the 21st anniversary of Sherwood Forest Camp, No. 50, in Peterborough. Dr. W. S. Harrison, of Toronto, Head Consul Commander of the Order, occupied the chair.

The programme was of a very high quality from the first item down to the last.

Head Deputy Consul A. E. Hubbard, of Toronto, gave a short address on the good financial standing of the Canadian Order of the Woodmen of the World, which was received with great satisfaction by the members.

After a few more items were run off, Consul Commander R. H. Carr then called upon Dr. Harrison to address the meeting.

Dr. Harrison based his remarks on the fraternal part of our Order and the good work which our Sick Benefit Department was doing towards the dependent ones of our members. Letters of appreciation are constantly reaching the Head Office from the boys overseas, which alone bear testimony of the good work being done. He also alluded to the remarks of the Minister of Militia at the recent meeting of the delegates of the Canadian Fraternal Association held in Toronto in which General Sir Sam Hughes said he was delighted when walking through the trenches and the various hospitals to observe the great number of fraternal emblems displayed on the tunics of the soldiers. He made a closing remark to the members present, urging them to invite their friends to join the Woodmen of the World and help to continue the good and noble work.

The artists below need no introduction and the audience certainly showed their appreciation of the high quality of their efforts.

Mr. Kenyon's accompaniments were particularly pleasing and added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening.

Sovereigns R. H. Carr and Fred Sutcliffe extended a hearty vote of thanks on behalf of the members of Sherwood Forest Camp to those who took part in the programme.

Refreshments were served by the lady members of the Camp and needless to say when Sherwood Forest Camp gives another social evening all those who were present will attend.

Dead Man At The Motor

Theory Now Advanced in explanation of Vancouver Tragedy.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 14—That a dead man drove possibly eleven persons, certainly nine, to their death on Saturday night, when Geo. Smith sent a crowded motor stage through the open draw of the North Arm bridge into the waters of the Fraser River, was the theory suggested to-day by acquaintances of the chauffeur.

Smith, it is reported, suffered from heart disease. That his pulse had suddenly ceased is probably the true explanation of his act in rushing his vehicle upon the bridge with the red lights shining clear against him.

The stage was making its evening trip toward Vancouver when the accident occurred. At first it was reported that it carried twelve passengers, but yesterday the number was placed at fourteen.

Employers Can Find Men But They Seem Averse to Labouring

The combing for recruits is scarcely finer than for laborers. One employer stated this morning there are quite a number of men around town who have been directly and indirectly appealed to by recruiting speakers who besought them to offer themselves in factories, on the farm and where ever needed that younger men might be relieved, but these have recognized no patriotic need in the situation. They remain part of the class that toil not, neither do they spin, unless it be petty gossip they pick up in their aimless and fruitless wanderings.

Another man stated that he had recently gone back as far as Bobcaygeon on a man hunt and chanced upon twelve or more men who had every appearance of ability to work but whose occupation was "chewing tobacco in the lockmaster's office with perfect range of a pail of sawdust" Wild elephants couldn't have pulled them out, said this man, and they appeared to be doing, nothing where they were. Employers are thinking primarily of their own needs when the labor question is considered, but the recruiting problem is involved with it.

"The Master Spy" Arrested In Capital

Washington, Nov. 14.—Karl Armgaard Graves, self-styled international spy and magazine writer, has been arrested by the agents of the Department of Justice and charged with attempting to extort $3,000 from Countess von Bernstorff, wife of the German ambassador, by threatening to publish letters "alleged to contain matter showing her infirmities and failings."

Officials of the Embassy also allege that Graves had in his possession what apparently were confidential coded diplomatic despatches from the German government to Count von Berhstorff. The prisoner told the Federal agents he obtained all the documents from persons who smuggled them past the British censors on the steamship Oscar II. The warrant upon which he was arraigned and held on $9,000 bail, for a further hearing on Wednesday, charges him also with bringing into the District of Columbia, letters stolen in Hoboken, N.J., where the Oscar II. docks.

Graves in a statement after his arraignment at which he entered a plea of not guilty, asserted that he had no intention of blackmailing, and that the papers which he had in his possession were "purely diplomatic" in their character.

Much interest was aroused in official quarters at the indirect exposure of the manner in which persons and officials in Germany apparently are avoiding the British censorship in communicating with the German Embassy.

The arrest of Graves furnished a dramatic conclusion to negotiations which had been in progress for a week between him and Prince Hatzfeldt, Counsellor of the German Embassy. Graves is said to have come to Washington last week and called at the Embassy here.

He was known there as the man who had published widely what he knew to be important secrets of the German War Office, and the Hohenzollerns. He also was known as a man who previously had described himself as a member of the German secret service, and later as an employee in foreign fields of the British foreign office. "The master spy," he called himself.

Graves served part of a prison term in Britain, where it was officially declared that he was in the secret service.

CANVASSERS HARD AT WORK FOR THE PATRIOTIC FUND PETITION

Much of the Work is Being Done in the Evening on Account of the Difficulty of Catching the Ratepayers at Home—Notes of the Campaign

Either proposition seems to be real work. That is, which is which. Whether it is more onerous to canvas for public subscription or canvas for signatures to the object of the Patriotic Fund. "Either is some job," says a man who has tried both.

The teams have settled down to a steady grind. They find that so many men are out of their homes, and are about the city on business or in the workshops, that to find individuals is a pretty onerous job. So in exchange from the daylight hurrah of preceding campaigns going on night duty is now popular. Not popular because it is a sort of pastime, like bowling or curling or other masculine diversion, but because it is the most practical way of collaring the game. The game, or avails, in this case is the property owner. So if during the following night a couple of men are seen stepping gently on to the verandah and pull the bell, or push it with diffidence, all may as well know right now that the pair are not felinous errand bent, nor seeking to collect a bill, but wish to interview the head of the house. Man or feminine. All is the same, so long as they interview the person who has the say so. A cordial welcome is bespoken for the canvassers. Try and recollect that these men are out at night doing a job for you, as a citizen, and the only satisfaction gained is the sense of doing a duty to the city and its'e. It is a part of the game, the war game, that we have taken a hand in and must see through.

It takes time. Five places were entered and signatures secured in one hour. There had to be a sort of chat as to the object, the reason, the value of the movement, the cost to the owner, to tell him that if he is going to do something it's clear that he can't get through it at so moderate a cost to himself as by joining in concerted effort. A community of effort. That is all it is, by and large. When people hire a steamboat and all agree to go on an excursion after pleasure on a given day the trip is done for twenty-five cents Because all are working to one common object. Just as in this case of the Patriotic Fund. A duty is to be done and a pledge kept. If all combine to do those things then it will fall not so heavy on any one individual, unless he happens to have much of this world's property, and then he can, having a large interest to be protected, pay for it. If Germany had triumphed what we are now paying would not be a flea bite to the amounts we would have had to 'cough up.' That's exactly the expression, shelling out with a reluctant reluctance.

In the meantime, a few more are wanted to give a hand. Who will come along. Sitting by the fireside of these evenings will not throw much sort into the rails of progress. It is too early for curling, too new for hockey, too late for golf, but the teams can absorb quite a few more men who will catch hold and lift. Let us now who you are and you will be enrolled in a jiffy. Never mind if your neighbour is not among the elect. Be a canvasser and then you can get even by going and boring him to sign. Time and life brings to us our revenges, if we only wait.

So fast as the report books come in the amounts of the assessments are being entered. The total will be quite respectable, for the best families are signing up. A best family is here defined as one proposing and prepared to pay any amount that the levy will call for. Mechanics are almost to a man in favour of the scheme. The yearly tax will never be missed and anyway the man owes it as a part of his share of the war expense.

No correct list of teams has as yet been compiled. That will be done presently, for each team is working in the district allotted to it. A number have finished certain routes and have turned in to help the others.

In the meantime numbers can be of substantial help. Who will come forward and give a hand. Mighty good chance to get acquainted with a whole lot of good people you never knew lived in this city. See them at church or across the street, but never a handshake or jocular word. Fine chance to get acquainted.

Music & Drama

"SEPTEMBER MORN."

The sparkling comedy "September Morn," was presented for the third time in this city at the Grand Opera House last night, and made a bigger hit with a large house, than it has on any previous presentation. The catchy melodies of the play were splendidly handled by a very large chorus, and the dances constituted one of the features of the show. The Company was a strong one, every role being looked after to evident satisfaction of the audience. The applause demanded such repetition of the numbers that it was many minutes after 11 o'clock when the curtain rang down on the Grand Finale.

As usual the "Spare Rib From the Butcher Shop of Life" was one of the funniest songs of the evening. William Moore, who was one of the liveliest comedians seen here for some time, handed out this plaintiff soliloquy in a style that captured the house. Ruth Wilkins and Leslie Moore in the dancing specialties were called upon to repeat their numbers several times. Altogether it was an unusually appealing presentation of the comedy, and left little to be desired that could be had from an entertainment in the form of a musical comedy.

BURN A HOUSE AS MR. HUGHES "WON"

Harold W. Willard Donated the Building, but the Celebration Was Premature.

WINSTED, Conn., Nov. 14.—Harold N. Willard, son of Daniel Willard, President of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, remarked on election day that if Mr. Hughes were successful he would donate an old dwelling house on his farm in Salisbury as fuel for a celebration. Late Tuesday night, when the returns indicated the election of Mr. Hughes, jubilant Republicans went to the Willard home and Mr. Willard, believing that Mr. Hughes had been elected President, kept his word.

The reflection from the blaze was seen for miles, and persons living at a distance inquired by telephone whose property was burning. "Hughes is elected and Willard's burning up his old house in honour of the Republican success," anxious ones were informed. "He's a chip off the old block," commented one subscriber, evidently glad that his services were not needed to fight fire.

As smoke still was rising from the ruins joy turned to sorrow, for word was received that the election result was in doubt, with chances favouring President Wilson. To-day, with President Wilson's re-election assured, Salisbury democrats think it only right that the Republicans assist in building a new house at the Willard place.

"This may be justice," said the defeated defendant, "but it strikes me as being a pretty fishy verdict." "That shows that it is justice," retorted the plaintiff. "One of the most conspicuous features of Justice is her scales."

Young wife (to elder and sceptic husband)—Now, dear, you be as comfortable as you can, and don't you worry about me. I am not a bit lonely. There's half a dozen men upon deck who have been awfully nice to me. And such a joke! They think I am a widow."

Returned Soldier Conducted Blind Pig

SGT. PODGER, CARE TAKER OF GALT ARMORY, SENTENCED TO FOUR MONTHS IN JAIL

Galt, Nov. 14.—For selling liquor contrary to the provisions of the Ontario temperance act, Sergt. Reuben Podger, a returned soldier, and caretaker of the Galt armory, was sentenced by Magistrate Blake to four months in the county jail. Information was laid by Chief of Police Gorman, and in passing sentence the magistrate said he hoped that the penalty would put a stop to that kind of business. Podger conducted a "blind pig" at his home on Simcoe street, and, according to the police, was doing quite a business selling liquor at two drinks for a quarter or at $1.75 and $2 a bottle. He took advantage of his connection with the armory to sell to soldiers and it was following the arrest by the military police of a drunken soldier that Lt.-Colonel Grant, O.C., 122nd Battalion, requested Chief Gorman to investigate where the liquor was being procured.

TROUBLE IN BAVARIA.

Older Men Refusing to Go to the Front Now.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—The Berne correspondent of the Excelsior telegraphs "I can guarantee the authenticity of the reports of a growing revolution in Bavaria among entire regiments of men aged more than forty-five. They refuse to depart for the front because of the receipt, despite the censorship of the terrible news from the soldiers on the Somme and before Verdun regarding fearful losses.

"The King of Bavaria has intervened several times to restore order."

Do you feel in need of help, and surely we all do. Have you friends you would like to help into a better life, and who has not? Well, here is the promise that cannot fail. Matt., 18: 19-20:

"Again I say unto you that if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask it shall be done for them of My Father, which is in heaven, (20) For when two or three are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst of them."

We desire especially to help those who do not attend any place of worship; but our strong aim is to help all and we want all to feel that they are welcome. We welcome laymen workers from any church. 4d-113

OBITUARY

ERNEST FENWICK.

After a long illness borne with remarkable fortitude and patience, Mr. Ernest Fenwick, 376½ George street, passed away this afternoon. The deceased had been an invalid for nearly thirteen years, and for the past four years had been confined to his bed. He was born in England and spent the early part of his life in Bournemouth. For a number of years before coming to Canada ten years ago, he was deputy town clerk of Tunbridge Wells, Kent. He came to Canada with his family in 1906, and lived for a time in Toronto, coming to Peterborough six years ago. The deceased was fifty-four years of age, an Anglican in religion, and a member of the Masonic fraternity.

He is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. John Foster and Miss Dorothy, residing in Peterborough, and one son, Stanley, of Toronto, formerly of the 2nd Field Company, Canadian Engineers, 1st Canadian Contingent, invalided home from the front.

The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon to Little Lake cemetery.

D'ANNUNZIO MADE CAPTAIN FOR VALOR.

Rome, November 9.—Gabrielle d'Annunzio, the poet and novelist, has been promoted to the grade of captain for gallantry in action.

General Cadorna, in conferring the honor, says in an order that d'Annunzio, on October 20 and 11, by word and deed, set a notable example for the troops attacking two Austrian positions.

Hospital Cars For Stretcher Cases

Ottawa, November 14.—In order to provide greater comfort and less suffering for invalided soldiers returning home, the Minister of Railways has arranged to convert a number of the Intercolonial passenger cars into hospital cars. These will be used for transporting the more serious cases, such as soldiers suffering from paralysis, or others coming under the head of "stretcher cases," from the port of landing to the interior convalescent homes or sanitaria. The new hospital cars will be fully equipped for the designed purpose. The action is being taken on the recommendation of the Military Hospitals Commission.

Captain of American Ship A Prisoner For Six Days Aboard Prussian U-Boat

Master of the Columbian, Destroyed by Torpedo, Tells of His Experiences While a Captive - Guarded by Sailors With Revolvers—On Few Occasions Was Allowed on Deck—Fed With a Few Morsels of Black Bread.

SUBMARINE FIRED TWO TORPEDOES

CORUNNA, Spain, Nov. 15.—Captain Frederick Curtis, of the American steamship Columbian who arrived here with the rescued crew of this steamship declared to the Associated Press that he was a prisoner on board the German submarine U-49 for six days after the destruction of his vessel.

All of the 109 of the Columbian's crew were saved Captain Curtis stated.

Captain Curtis said the Columbian was warned before she was torpedoed and sunk. The crew was left in lifeboats as the captain was taken on board the submarine.

Captain Arthur Patterson, of the British steamship Seatonia, says he also was a prisoner on board the U-49 for eight days, during which time he heard the guns of the submarine in action and also heard distictly the explosion of the torpedo which, he learned later, blew up the Norwegian ship Balto, soon after which Captain Yelugsen, of the Norwegian ship Fordalen, joined him in the narrow prison on board the submarine, where they were joined on the following day by Captain Curtis.

"My ship, registered at New York," said Captain Curtis to the correspondent, "carried a cargo of about 9,000 tons and a crew of 109, all of whom were saved. I stopped on the command of the submarine, whose commander ordered me to abandon ship with the crew immediately, which we did without other baggage than two satchels with documents and money.

"Submarine U-49 fired at once two torpedoes at the Columbian, which immediately sank. The crew was left in lifeboats, while I was taken on board the submarine, which plunged immediately after I was taken into the small quartermaster's cabin, where I found the captains of the Seatonia and the Balto. After me came Captain Yelugsen, of the Fordalen. The cabin was very small. It contained a little folding table, a folding chair and three bunks. Everything was permeated with the odor of benzine. There was no communication with the exterior, and the cabin was absolutely dark night and day. We were fed in the morning with a few morsels of black bread, a cup of coffee and a small portion of bad butter; at noon with a stew of canned meat and soup, and at supper, at ten o'clock, with coffee or tea and black bread, with butter or marmalade. The hours spent in this narrow prison were very long and disagreeable."

The captain of the submarine, said Captain Curtis, was about thirty-six years old, while his crew of forty sailors were all very young. All were attired in clothing of glossy leather.

Captains Curtis and Patterson, relating their experiences, said that they were allowed at intervals, between the operations of the submarine, to go on deck to smoke. They were watched on deck by the crew, armed with revolvers, but when they went below the crew put aside their weapons. There was only one chair in the cabin, which the captains used in turn; otherwise they had to lie on the bunks.

The submarine signalled the Swedish steamship Varing thirteen miles off the Spanish port of Carmarines toward noon on November 9. The vessel stopped and was ordered to take aboard the captains and land them. She also was ordered to take aboard the crews of the Columbian and the Norwegian steamships. All were welcomed aboard the Varing. The submarine watched the operation and then ordered the Varing to make for the coast six miles from Camarinas. The Varing was directed to set out lifeboats and embark the shipwrecked men in them. This was a long and difficult operation, and an American from the Columbian fell into the sea and narrowly escaped drowning. He was lightly injured during his rescue.

If Your Hair Is Coming Out Read This

Thousands of people suffer from baldness and falling hair who have tried nearly every advertised hair-tonic and hair-grower without results, have resigned themselves to baldness and its attendant discomfort. Yet their case is not hopeless; the following simple home prescription has made hair grow after years of baldness, and is also unequalled for restoring gray hair to its original color, stopping hair from falling out and destroying the dandruff germ. It will not make the hair greasy, and can be put up by any druggist: Bay rum, 6 ounces; Lavona de Composee, 2 ounces; Menthol Crystals, one-half drachm. If you wish it perfumed, add 1 drachm of your favorite perfume. This preparation is highly recommended by physicians and specialists and is absolutely harmless, as it contains none of the poisonous wood alcohol so frequently found in hair tonics. Ladies should be careful not to apply to face or where hair is not desired.

Rub one or more times daily with the tips of the fingers for new growth.

BOOM IN SHIPBUILDING

Oakland Yards are Busy with Construction for Norwegian Customers

OAKLAND, Cal., Nov. 14. — Every month for the next six a new ship will take the water in Oakland's inner harbour. This is the prediction of shipbuilders here.

The Capto, a 7,500 ton steel freighter, has just been launched. A 10,000 ton vessel from the ways of the Union Iron Works, a Charles M. Schwab subsidiary, is to be launched on Nov. 11. This steel steamship, more than four hundred feet long, is the first of four 10,000 ton vessels now under construction at the Schwab plant.

The Capto was the first to be launched of four ships Moore and Scott have under construction. One of these is a sister ship to the Capto, which is a duplicate of the Strathdene, sunk by the Geier. The other two are 9,000 ton vessels.

Norwegians are to get [illegible] ships.

Hughes Would Not Accept Premier's Proposed Plans To Reorganize Overseas

Minister of Militia Said Sir Robert's Scheme Would Lead to Repetition of Chaotic Conditions For Canadian Control—Sir Sam Complained Bitterly of British Management in the First Ten Months of the War.

VIEWS NOT CHANGED

OTTAWA, November 15.—Sir Sam Hughes steps out of office to-day. Hon. A. E. Kemp or Col. Clark likely to succeed him. Sir Sam in correspondence declares that intrigues in Cabinet resulted in his getting out. Premier Borden replied that Sir Sam wanted to be the whole Government himself.

OTTAWA, November 15.—Correspondence leading up to the resignation of General Sir Sam Hughes and passing between the Prime Minister and himself was made public yesterday afternoon.

The first letter is dated October 16th, when Sir Robert write, enclosing a memo, pointing out that Canadian participation in the war may accomplish the highest results if there is co-operation between the Imperial and Canadian Governments. The Canadian forces, he pointed out, were grouped in a Canadian army corps, but that army corps, as well as Australian and New Zealand troops, were under Sir Douglas Haig. By the end of October, the number actually despatched to Britain would exceed 240,000; more than 100,000 were in the fighting line at present.

NEED BETTER ORGANIZATION.

The Premier said it was apparent that there should be a more efficient organization in Great Britain. He did not criticize Gen. Hughes' suggestion as to the personnel of an overseas council, but thought the direction of it by a member of the Government resident in London was essential. Sir Robert referred to the very large expenditure and emphasized the need of most effective control.

NOT A REFLECTION.

Sir Robert enclosed a draft of an order-in-Council embodying his proposals. He explained that it was not intended as a reflection upon Gen. Hughes' efforts at administration, stating that he thoroughly appreciated "the great ability, wonderful energy and unequalled resourcefulness he placed at the service of the country."

The draft order-in-Council alluded to the large number of Canadian forces overseas, the need of efficiency, the heavy expenditure, and provided for a minister of overseas military forces charged with the control of and to be responsible for the military affairs of Canadian troops in Britain and on the continent. The Minister was given wide powers and provision was made for an advisory council.

This council was to be appointed by the Government here. It was further stipulated that all recommendations for the Minister overseas should be transmitted to the Government through the Prime Minister.

SIR SAM DISAGREED.

On October 23rd, General Hughes replied. While agreeing with the Premier that the one object to be accomplished was the winning of the war, declared that the order-in-Council of September 22 would, in his opinion, cripple, impede and again reduce the force overseas to the chaotic condition to which it had fallen at the end of the first nine months of the war, "under a system practically what you now propose re-establishing."

He regretted that he could not endorse the Premier's statement that "It is apparent that we should have a more efficient organization in Great Britain," if the reference was to the present organization there, but if the reference be had to the plan established during the first nine months, under a system almost identical with what he now proposed, then he cordially agreed.

Against British Control.

Regarding the Premier's letter and memorandum, Sir Sam had several observations to make. From the outset, he declared, he had strongly objected to the fact that practically the entire management of the force, supplies, equipment, transport, etc., had been taken completely out of the Canadian hands and was controlled by the British authorities, Canada, notwithstanding, paying the bill.

In October, 1914, in a conversation with Earl Kitchener, the latter had pointed out that Sir George Perley had intimated that it was the desire of the Canadian Government that Canadian soldiers should be regarded as British regulars. General Hughes had pointed out to Earl Kitchener that section 177 of the Army Act was entirely opposed to this idea. He agreed that while the forces at the front should be under the command of the British commander-in-chief, that while in Britain they should be entirely under Canadian control.

Views Not Changed.

"I felt then as I feel to-day," said Gen. Hughes, 'and as I am pleased to say so did the entire British Government and British war officers, that our officers and men being in the pay of Canada, Canada should absolutely control them in Canada and in Britain, excepting in so far as securing camping grounds was concerned, and at the front for everything, excepting the command and general administration to be under British control."

Suggestions Ignored.

For the first ten months, General Hughes says, the Canadian suggestions were ignored, and all the equipment, stores, etc., provided by Canada, were set aside, the Pay Department was found to be absolutely chaotic, the medical service, modelled on the British, lacked system, efficiency and comprehensiveness. The excuses for the rejection of Canadian

Gen. Byng Talks Of His Fine Men

London. — "The Germans have lost ground, lost prestige, lost men. We have gained ground, gained prestige, our losses have not been heavy. The wounded are mostly very slightly wounded, and I am glad to say that the proportion of men coming back is very large indeed."

So said Lieut.-General Sir Julian H. G. Byng, K.C.B., Commander of the Canadian forces at the front, to the party of five Canadian newspaper men who were introduced at General Headquarters in the early morning of an October Day, a day with a brilliant sun and as warm in summer temperature as it will remain in the memory of the visitors, who from noon of that day until darkness set in, walked over the fields of Courcelette, Martinpuich and Poziores, and witnessed the attack by the British and Canadians at the battle of Eaucourt l'Abbaye.

THERE WAS "SOMETHING DOING."

Speaking on that early morning, Sir Julian Byng stated he expected "there may be something on this afternoon." The expectations of the Commander of the Canadian forces were not disappointed. The expectations of the newspapermen were exceeded. For over an hour in the afternoon of that hot day three hundred guns roared out at the same time in front of the German lines close to Courcelette, throwing over an intense barrage in preparation for the subsequent infantry attack made on a certain part of the German trenches.

When the newspapermen eventually got out of the sound of the guns eight hours had elapsed since they had commenced their walk over the shell-swept fields of Poziores, Martinpuich and Courcelette—eight hour, which are vastly unlikely to be exceeded in incident and excitement by any other days which in the future may be left to them—eight hours which—after reaching a sufficiently long distance from the battlefield—they were rather surprised to know they had got through and were still living.

UNDERESTIMATE CASUALTIES

"Regarding the statistics published by the Germans as to their casualties," said Sir Julian Byng, after giving us some interesting and instructive information as to the positions on the field from a map which hung on the wall beside him, "we know that they have under-estimated them. We know it from what their own prisoners have said, for they have told us so, and we also know it definitely from other sources. We know that they must suffer more than us because of our much greater artillery fire. Also we know that they change their divisions much more frequently than we do ours, and this condition applies all along their line.

Sir Julian was most considerate in answering any questions, in the asking of which the visitors showed remarkable courage. The Commander of the Canadian forces gave every possible information as to the districts we were about to visit.

VASTNESS OF THE FIELD

When some little time afterwards we saw it in reality, and realized that the great open stretches, the miles and miles of the battlefield before us occupied by the British, the French, and the Germans, was but one connecting link in the huge chain extending from Flanders to Switzerland, the immensity of the total operations became faintly realizable. No one who has not, at least, seen that much of the opposing forces in this great Armageddon can have the nearest idea of the titantic struggle.

"And I want to tell you, gentlemen," added Sir Julian Byng, with a great heartiness of appreciation, "that I have never seen finer soldiers than the Canadians." In particular he then alluded to the great part taken by a French-Canadian battalion, and a battalion from Nova Scotia, in the capture of Courcelette. There was no doubt that the value he placed upon the Canadians under his command was of the highest possible description and that he was entirely confident that whatever work had to be done the men from the land of the Maple Leaf would always be found to be eager and competent to carry it through to a successful conclusion.

RANK WITH THE BEST

In connection with the remarks made by Sir Julian Byng as to his never having seen finer soldiers than the Canadians, I may mention, incidentally, that a very high British military officer recently stated that it was recognized at British Headquarters that one of the Canadian divisions had covered itself with glory, that throughout the whole of the advance with which it had been connected its work stood second to none engaged in the entire operations, and that for general efficiency it could favorably compare with any division of the allied armies.

CAVALRY'S FINE FEAT.

Sir Julian Byng, with great satisfaction, told the newspapermen how a troop of Canadian cavalry from Calgary, acting as a patrol, started off on a certain expedition on a recent night, and brought off their objective in the most brilliant fashion.

It was a very fine piece of work, declared Sir Julian, "and it was carried out entirely by only two officers and 30 men. Undertaken at 3 o'clock in the morning, these dragoons returned after gaining their object, and securing the most valuable information. The only loss during the operations was one man killed."

GOOD WORK OF MACHINE GUNS

While at the General's headquarters before starting for the battlefield, the visitors met the Brigadier-General commanding the Royal Canadian Engineers, also the Commanding Officer of the Canadian First Motor Machine Gun Brigade, to take charge of which he was specially selected, and with the happiest results, his work having continuously given the greatest satisfaction.

Speaking of the work of the Canadian Motor Machine-gun Brigade, the Colonel said that in the battle of Courcelette, on September 15th, the number of rounds fired from Canadian machine guns amounted to two million, and that in the Thiepval and Combles battles, Sept. 25-26, the number of rounds fired was 1,800,000. In the latter fight, stated the Colonel, the Canadians turned ten guns on to the fleeing Germans and simply mowed them down.

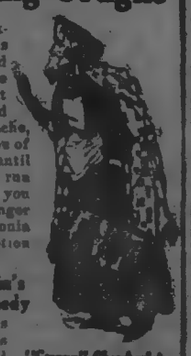
Hacking Coughs



"Granny" Chamberlain

For hacking coughs—the kind that make your throat sore and your head ache, that rob you of your sleep until you are so run down that you are in danger of pneumonia or consumption—take

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

It soothes and heals the inflamed air passages, stops the tickling in the throat, and by its tonic effects helps you to throw off the disease.

Chamberlain's is quite different from the ordinary cough medicine, for it not only soothes but also heals, restores the affected parts to a healthy condition. I believe it is the best and most reliable preparation ever produced for coughs and colds.

High Blood Pressure

When your case becomes complicated and medicines fail, the doctor makes a test of the blood pressure, fearing that there may be something wrong with the condition of the kidneys and the action of the heart.

He realizes that when the kidneys fail to filter the poisons from the blood that there will be a hardening of the arteries, and when the pressure of blood comes on they will snap like so much deteriorated rubber-tubing—the result is a clot of blood on the brain, hemorrhage in the heart, or wherever the weak point may be.

But why allow this condition to be reached when you can so readily regulate the action of the liver and kidneys by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Troubles of this nature have their beginning when, from over-eating or lack of exercise, the liver goes wrong, and throws an undue burden on the kidneys. Headaches, biliousness, constipation and indigestion give due warning, and by the timely use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills there need be no further trouble.

The liver is awakened to action, the bowels regulated, and the kidneys strengthened in their all-important work by purifying the blood and thereby preventing pain and serious disease. This is the greatest of family medicines, because of the host of ills that are relieved and prevented by keeping the liver, kidneys and bowels healthy and active.

One pill a dose, 25 cents a box. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

IS DISCHARGED

Los Angeles, Cal. — Clinton A. Bamber of No. 901 North Los Robles Avenue, Pasadena, has received from the war department his discharge from the Union army in the Civil War. He believes that he is the last veteran of that war to be mustered out.

"I enlisted," he said in 1861 in the Seventh Illinois infantry, but that was only for three months. I never got my discharge as there were rumors that the company's papers had been lost.

"Then in 1863 I enlisted in the Seventeenth Illinois cavalry. I served in this regiment until the end of the war and got my discharge from it.

"As years went by I thought that I should like to get my discharge from the first regiment in which I had served, but the only way in that I could do so was to get two affidavits from comrades who had also served with it.

"One of these comrades was Captain George Wheeler. I searched for him for several years, but could find no trace of him until a short time ago when I ran across him at the Soldiers' Home in Sawtelle, when I got his affidavit.

"A few weeks ago I met at a neighbor's house R. Tucker, another schoolmate, who had served in the same company with me. I pressed an affidavit from him, and now have my discharge.

DYSPEPSIA

MOST DIFFICULT TO CURE
BUT B. B. B. DOES IT

Dyspepsia is one of the most difficult diseases of the stomach there is to cure.

You eat too much; drink too much; make the stomach work overtime. You make it perform more than it should be called on to do. The natural result is that it is going to rebel against the amount of work put on it. It is only a matter of time before dyspepsia follows.

That forty-year-old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, will cure the dyspepsia, and will cure it to stay cured as we can prove by the thousands of testimonials we receive from time to time.

Mr. Neil A. Cameron, Kilkarlity, N. S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what your great medicine Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I was troubled very much with dyspepsia for the past two years. I was recommended all kinds of medicines, but they did not help me any. At last a friend advised me to try a bottle of B.B.B. I took four bottles and was totally cured. I will gladly recommend it to all sufferers."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Metal flowers of fine workmanship and real beauty, are one of the trimming novelties on autumn hats of velvet.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

On the Beautiful River

An Episode of a Century Ago

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

When what is now known as the middle west was opened up to civilization the Ohio river was the main thoroughfare for emigrants moving in that direction, and the flatboat was their conveyance. Flatboats were built of boards, their propelling power being the river's current, and when the emigrant reached his destination the lumber was used to build his house.

The great danger of the earliest voyagers on la belle riviere (the beautiful river) was the Indians. The scum of civilization is always washed toward new countries, and mingled with the redskins were white men who assisted their native allies to plunder the emigrants by acting as decoys. The renegade would sell to the Indians ideas to come and take him aboard, so that he had been captured by Indians and escaped and if recaptured would be tortured and killed. If the voyager yielded to the call he could be ambushed by the savages.

With the beginning of the nineteenth century the Indians had largely been eradicated, but the low grade whites remained. The river from time to time was infested by pirates, who, though they did not always murder, robbed their victims.

It was during the second decade of the nineteenth century that a flatboat was carrying a number of passengers between Cincinnati and Louisville. There were an Irishman, a Scotchman and a Frenchman, all of whom had been born in Europe. Besides these were several native Americans, including a carpenter, a gambler and a land speculator.

When the boat reached a turn in the river, called South Bend, about twenty miles south of Cincinnati, while passing near the Kentucky shore, it passed a log cabin before which stood a woman waving a white cloth and indicating by her gestures that she wished to speak with them. The sweeps, which were intended to increase at times the boat's velocity and were needed to give steerage way, were manned, and the boat headed for the shore. As soon as it came near enough for the men on it to hear the woman said:

"Kin you ther take me down to Louyville (Louisville)? Ef you're goin' that way pull in kyar and throw a line."

"I do not like," said the Frenchman, "to go to ze bank of ze riviere. I have heard that those who go to ze bank of la belle riviere on a call for help nevaire return to ze steamer."

"Nonsense, you bloomin' idiot!" said the Englishman. "You're thinkin' of the last century, when the Indians used renegade whites for decoys. That's all in the past now."

The Irishman accorded with the Englishman (the only case on record). The son of Erin declared that to decline to listen to the call of a woman would be dastardly and no one except a coward would do such a thing. But the Scotchman was in favor of caution.

"I would ne go in too far," he said, "without inquirin' what she wants wi' us."

The commander of the craft paid no attention to these suggestions, but surveyed the woman and her surroundings with a critical eye. But he gave no order to make for the shore.

"That's a low down trick," cried the woman, "for to leave a pore woman who wants to go to her man!"

With this the Englishman, backed by the Irishman, threw out so many innuendos respecting the captain's action that he gave in, but with a bad grace.

FOUR DOCTORS DISAGREED

Pains Disappeared After Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Wilmington, Del.—"I was suffering from a terrible backache and pains in my side, with bearing down pains and was very nervous. I was always tired, always drowsy, never could get enough sleep and could not eat. I had four doctors and each told me something different. I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. I got good results and I now feel better than I have felt for years and I am gaining in weight. I can gladly recommend it to all women."—Mrs. GEORGE W. SEBOLD, 1611 West 4th Street, Wilmington, Del.

Backache and bearing down pains are danger signals which every woman should heed. Remove the cause of these aches and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that good old root and herb medicine. Thousands of women have testified to its virtues.

For forty years it has been making women strong, curing backache, nervousness, ulceration and inflammation, weakness, displacements, irregularity and periodic pain.

If you want special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. confidential, Lynn, Mass.

"By the time you sail," he said, "I have navigated this yere river as long as I have you'll larn that there's only one place in it that's safe—the channel. If you git rid o' your money by this maneuver don't blame me. I hain't got nothin' to lose. Jim, head in!"

The helmsman turned the fore part of the boat toward the shore and when sufficiently near swung the stern in, from which a stout rope was thrown, caught by the woman and made fast to a stump. By the rope the stern of the boat was pulled in so that the woman could be taken aboard. Taking up a bundle tied in a bandanna handkerchief, she unwound the rope from the tree and slipped aboard the boat, which the current took down the river.

There were no separate rooms aboard the boat, but the stern was partitioned off into a cabin. This the men gave up to the only woman passenger, betaking themselves to the deck, for in all new countries there is a singular deference on the part of the men for the few women they have among them, and this woman, who was about twenty-five years old, was for a denizen of Kentucky at that time not bad to look upon. True, she had no sooner settled herself on the boat than she produced a corncob pipe with a reed stem and began to smoke, but in those days many southern women—unless it were in the longer settled portions—not only smoked, but "dipped," which means they chewed upon snuff balls. She proved an attraction for her fellow passengers, who swarmed about her like flies to a sugar barrel.

"Are you men well armed?" she asked.

Most of them admitted that they were not armed at all. It was their first visit to the country, and they supposed the days when persons went about armed were over.

"Over!" exclaimed the woman. "Just you fall in with river pirates and you'll find out whether they are over or not."

"Nobody didna tell me anything about river pirates," said the Scotchman anxiously.

"I thought," said the Englishman, "that the law was well enforced in these parts."

"So it is in the towns. You kin git a lot of it in Cincinnati, but who is goin' to take hear o' the law on the river? Do you expect to find courthouses on the bars? Hello, cap'n! You goin' to wreck us on that sand?"

The boat was guided safely around the trunk of a dead tree the roots of which were partly submerged in shallow water, the branches standing out in position to receive anything the current might bear to them. And the woman proceeded:

"I got a pistol and a bowie knife with me, but I don't reckon I'll try to use 'em if we're attacked. I don't mean to give up my life tryin' to save the few dollars I got with me. Besides, the pirates ain't mean enough to march a woman, and I got my valyables under my frock."

"Mon Dieu!" exclaimed the Frenchman. "I have wit me all ze largent for to open a store in Louisville. If ze riviere pirates take it away, what will I do?"

"I've bought a thousand acres," said the land speculator, "on Green river and have $1,000 to pay for it in my money belt. To lose the money would knock me cold."

"Och, murther!" said the Irishman. "I don't believe in river pirates, at all, at all. I've lived in Cincinnati for two years, and I niver heard anything of 'em."

"You didn't, eh?" protested the woman scornfully. "A boatload of 'em pulled up to my cabin yesterday and made me cook a dinner for 'em. They party nigh skeered me to death, howsomever."

"Did they rob you?" asked the Englishman curiously.

"No, they didn't rob me, and they paid me for the dinner. They said they wasn't sich low down varmints as to injure a woman."

And she pulled from a pocket in her dress a handful of Mexican silver coins which were the principal small currency in common use in the west at that time.

The flatboat turned a bend in the river, and several miles below a rowboat was seen in the middle of the stream, her crew resting on its oars. As soon as the flatboat had rounded the bend the oars began to dip and rise, the boat moving slowly toward the current.

"Fo, landsake," exclaimed the woman, "ef thar ain't the boat that stopped at my cabin yisterday!"

"How do you know it's the same?" cried several men at once, paling.

"I ain't shore, but I kin tell purty soon."

"Say," cried the land speculator, "would you mind hangin' my money belt beside your purse?"

"Reckon I will," was the complacent reply.

"And my pocketbook?" said the Englishman.

"And my portemonnaie?" added the Frenchman.

The woman put the purse and the money belt under her tape waistband and stuffed the pocketbook under it. Within a few minutes enough watches were dangling from her waist, sandwiched between the purses and pocketbooks, to do credit to a pawnshop window.

Meanwhile the flatboat was nearing the boat, which now was seen to contain only three men. Those on the flatboat numbered a half dozen, though there were few arms among them. They consulted as to whether they would put up a fight or not. Some were in favor of doing so, but the majority were against it, arguing that the pirates would respect the woman and their valuables were safe without risking their lives.

"I ain't quite shore," said the woman as the flatboat drew near the other, "if they're the men that came to my cabin yesterday or not."

"Well, hold on to the plunder till ye're shure," said the Irishman.

"Hello, Sal!" cried one of the men from the boat.

"Lordy, Ben, is that you?"

"Reckon. Whar yo' goin'?"

"To Louyville. Jim went over thar a week ago to find somepin to do. He sent for me to take the first chance to foller him."

By this time the rowboat had pulled up beside the other, and a man in it held it to the larger with his hand. The woman walked the deck toward her friends, those on the flatboat remaining where they were.

Suddenly they saw her jump down into the rowboat. It was pushed off, and a few quick strokes sent it out of range of the flatboat.

"Those gents," called the woman, "have invited me to go to Louyville with 'em. You'll find your valyables thar when you get thar. You needn't be afraid o' their failin' into the hands o' river pirates while they're on me. Goodby. Much obleeged for takin' me aboard."

The men on the flatboat stood paralyzed at seeing their property thus taken from them without the ability to make any stand for it. The Irishman pulled a pistol from his pocket and fired at the retreating boat, but his shot fell short. The boat as soon as it was out of range turned and made up the river. Since the flatboat could not be propelled upstream the thieves and their woman confederate were perfectly safe from them. Soon they began to row leisurely, sending mocking remarks to those they had robbed.

MANY WORKERS TAKEN.

London, Eng., November 14.—Special despatches from Rotterdam dated Sunday, say the deportations of Belgians continue daily on a large scale. Antwerp and Ghent, the despatches say, are being slowly denuded of all able bodied men. Sixteen thousand have already left Ghent.

The men deported from Ghent have been almost exclusively of the unemployed class, but elsewhere, the despatches say, and especially in Antwerp, there has been less discrimination, and it is alleged that many workers were taken.

DON'T WORRY

London, Nov. 14.—Miss Kathleen Burke, who is writing in "Land and Water," a series of articles descriptive of her visit to the French front, sets forth the following litany of the Poilu:

"Of two things one is certain: Either you are mobilised, or you are not mobilised.

"If you are not mobilised, there is no need to worry; if you are mobilized, of two things one is certain: Either you're behind the lines or you're on the front.

"If you're behind the lines there is no need to worry; if you're on the front, of two things one is certain: Either you're resting in a safe place or you're exposed to danger.

"If you're resting in a safe place there is no need to worry; if you're exposed to danger, of two things one is certain: Either you're wounded or you're not wounded.

"If you're not wounded there is no need to worry; if you are wounded of two things one is certain: Either you're wounded seriously or you're wounded slightly.

"If you're wounded slightly there is no need to worry; if you're wounded seriously, of two things one is certain: Either you recover or you die.

"If you recover there is no need to worry; if you die you can't worry."

GLASS OF WATER BEFORE YOU EAT ANY BREAKFAST

Wash Poison From System Each Morning and Feel Fresh as a Daisy.

Every day you clean the house you live in to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected through the previous day. Your body, the house your soul lives in, also becomes filled up each twenty-four hours with all manner of filth and poison. If only every man and woman could realize the wonders of drinking phosphated hot water, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, woman and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

Everyone, whether sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and 5 yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

WILD DOGS AGAIN CAUSE OF TERROR

ALMOST AS FEROCIOUS AS THE WOLVES.

ATTACK THE FARMERS AND HELPERS.

New York. — The farmers in Northern Passaic County, N. J., and throughout the mountainous section about Greenwood Lake, have been terrorised during the last week by a pack of wild dogs that make their lair in the thick woods and the caves which abound there.

According to complaints received by William C. Klein, a New Jersey game warden, who patrols that section of the state, the wild pack occasionally appears in the settlements and makes off with poultry and small domesticated animals. They are almost as ferocious as wolves and attack farmers and their helpers who attempt to beat them off or accidentally cross their path.

On Tuesday a gardener on the Hewitt estate, at Ringwood discovered a number of the pack devouring fowl. He tried to frighten them off and was attacked, narrowly escaping with his life. In a fifteen minute fight, in which he used a heavy club, his trousers were torn from his body and he was badly scratched before he killed two of the dogs and put the others to flight.

The pack has its origin in the Ringwood mining camp many years ago. Miners who lived there, and had several watch dogs, left the animals there when the mines were closed. The dogs roamed the woods and finally driven by threatened starvation they attacked poultry for food. The pack grew to such proportions that the State authorities sent out an expedition to exterminate it. That was apparently not successfully accomplished.

Before sweeping the cellar it is an element of safety to sprinkle the floor with clean water in which crude carbolic acid has been shaken. The moisture will keep down the dust and the disinfectant will sweeten the cellar.

PRISONER'S EARS WERE HACKED OFF

El Paso, Texas. — Villa Bandits again are cutting the ears from captive Carranza soldiers, and then sending them back to their commands as a warning to other Carranza soldiers, said a Mexican civilian refugee who has reached here from Jimenez, Chihuahua. He asserted he had seen 16 Carranza soldiers at Jimenez with ears severed from their heads.

The refugee said he had been told by one of the mutilated soldiers that Villa bandits had cut off the ears of 33 Carranza soldiers at Santa Rosalia. These 16 soldiers, he said, had reached Jimenez from Santa Rosalia on their way to Torreon, and reported Villa bandits looted Santa Rosalia, impressing many citizens.

WOMAN SHOT BY BANDITS

Passengers arriving from Chihuahua City brought additional details of the Mexican Central passenger train which left Juarez, on Monday. They said three passengers were shot by the Villa bandits when they fired into the passenger train, one being a Mexican woman. It was not known whether they were killed.

The passengers reported Carranza guards fought the bandits and that eight of the guards escaped, the remaining 28, including Captain Guzman, being shot. The passengers said however that there was a report in Chihuahua City that a number of Carranza guards had joined the bandits.

The appearance of the passengers confirmed the report that both men and women were robbed of their clothing, some wearing blankets and even newspapers, into Chihuahua City.

ATTEMPT TO VERIFY REPORT.

American mining men having interests in Parral continued their efforts to-day to confirm the report received from Chihuahua City yesterday that Villa had reoccupied Parral on Tuesday. They have sent messages to Chihuahua City and Jimines, but have received no replies.

Passengers arriving from Chihuahua City said the report was general in the state capital. Carranza officials here and Juarez continue to deny the report although admitting that they had had nothing in which to base their denial.

Colonel Rosario Garcia, Villa commander captured on the Santa Ana ranch near Namiquipa by Carranza troops and cowboys, was brought to Juarez from Madero, Chihuahua, today. Papers found in his possession and addressed to Villa, also were brought to Juarez to be used as evidence. Colonel Garcia is said to be a Sonora commander, and the Carranza officers in Juarez claim he was carrying the papers from a general in Conora to Villa. It is expected that he will be shot as a bandit.

TORREON REPORTED CUT OFF.

Torreon is now isolated, according to a report received by the government agents from semi-official sources in Juarez. The railway is reported to have been cut between Jiminez and Torreon and also south and east of the Coahuila metropolis.

From the same source it was reported that Villa captured a large number of Carranza prisoners in Santa Rosalia. The entire garrison is said to have joined the Villa bandits, and also 200 men captured from General Fortunato Maycotte's Carranza command, sent south from Chihuahua City.

It was also reported that General Maycotte is now in Torreon, having found it impossible to return to Chihuahua City, because of the burned bridges near Ortis.

OPEN NOSTRILS! END A COLD OR CATARRH
How To Get Relief When Head and Nose are Stuffed Up.

Count fifty! Your cold in head or catarrh disappears. Your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more snuffling, hawking, mucous discharge, dryness or headache; no struggling for breat at night.

It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothing and healing the swollen or inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Head colds and catarrh yield like magic. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable. Relief is sure.

POLICE SHOCKED

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 14. — An order, believed to have been issued at the instance of Mayor Woodman, has created what to put it mildly, is a "profound impression" among the members of the Los Angeles police department.

The mayor, and incidentally Chief of Police Snively, wants to know where some of the officers and patrolmen got the money with which to purchase their "cars."

The order requires that division commanders send to the chief the names of all the members of the force, owning automobiles and ascertain if possible how each of the machines was obtained, "so as to explain certain rumors which have come to this office."

Unless satisfactory explanations are forthcoming the whole affair will be laid before the police commission.

A SOLDIER'S MESSAGE FROM THE BATTLEFIELD

God's arms are round the undying Dead
Who serve Him. Torment seeks in vain
To touch them, though because they bled
Fools take their passing for a pain.

IN HONOUR.

The dead soldiers of this war have given mankind the splendour of their example and the abiding memory of their love. But they have done something more. From the trenches and from those vast battlefields where man is crucified anew they have sent back countless messages of comfort and hope. "Is it well with them?" That question which will eternally rise to the lips of those who have loved and lost, is answered by them in anticipation with the assurance of prophecy, "It is well".

This answer rings through that remarkable series of letters from a young French artist-soldier to his mother which has recently been published in France with a preface by M. Chevrillon under the title "Lettres d'un Soldat". (Chapelot, Paris. 2.50 fcs., or 2s.). It has in a peculiar degree the qualities of sincerity and directness. The artist was never destined to paint the great picture of which he dreamed; he vanished in the fearful fighting in the Argonne of April 1915. But if his grave is unknown he has left a monument more enduring than brass in this record of a soul that faced death with unfaltering courage and calm. No translation can reproduce the rare beauty and no selection do justice to the vast compass of the original, from which we extract some of the thoughts that make the deepest appeal to the heart:

DISCOMFORTS AND TERRORS

Rain in war-time. It is a punishment of which you can form no idea. For three days and nights we have been able to do nothing but shiver and whimper, and yet we must carry on. To sleep in a trench full of water has no equivalent in Dante, but what of the awakening when you have to watch for the moment to kill or to be killed!

You must never know what man can do to man. For five days my boots have been foul with human brains. I have been treading on throats and stepping in entrails. Two dear friends, one of whom made a charming model for my last portrait have been killed. It was one of the terrible discoveries of the night. His body lay, white, magnificent in the moon. I lay down close by him. Beauty of things woke within me.

Our condition as infantrymen is rather like that of rabbits which are being shot. We have acquired—or at least the more timid of us have—a perpetual inclination to look for a hole.

ON THE SOLDIER'S STATE

I recall my satisfaction when I receive my military discharge at 27. And now at 28 I am again part of the army, far from my work, from my interests, from my ambitions, yet never did life bring me such an abundance of noble emotions; never perhaps have I had such freshness of feeling in receding them or such peace of soul.

I think our life must resemble the existence of the months of old.

We are children.

A RANSOM FOR MANY.

Tell M. that if death strikes the best it is not unjust. The less noble who survive will thus be made better. Let her accept the sacrifice and know that it is not made in vain. You do not know what a lesson the dead teach. I know it.

In the spectacle of the soldier who falls there is a lesson in nobility and immortality which steels us and by which we ought to wish those dear to us to profit. I know because I have seen how the soldier whose leader has fallen is transfigured with heroism.

MOTHERS AND WAR.

Mothers have overwhelming agonies to suffer in this war, but be of good cheer, nothing here is lost.

PLEASURE AS USUAL.

What passes our understanding—and yet, after all, it is a natural enough—is that civilians are able to continue their normal existence, while we are in torment.

COURAGE AND FAITH.

We have need of courage, or rather we have need of something difficult to obtain, which is neither patience nor excessive confidence, but a certain faith in the order of things—a power to say as each trial befalls us that it is well.

Let us always and in every condition have faith in God. Like you, I feel we can only worship Him in spirit; like you, I feel that we ought to avoid every kind of pride which offends the beliefs of others.

Why am I sacrificed when so many others who are not so clever as I are preserved? And I had something great to do in this world. But as God has not willed that this cup should pass from me, let His will be done.

HIS IDEAL

The artist must put forth his buds without dreading the frost, and perhaps God will permit me hereafter to realise my ideal.

BLESSED IS THE PROPHET

Our consolation lies above all in the super-humanly clear conviction that the divine and immortal energy which acts in our race, so far from being weakened, is exalted and rendered infinitely more potent by these turmoils. Blessed is he who will hear the hymn of peace, but blessed already is he who divines it in the tumult. And what does it matter if this magnificent vision should be realised when the prophet has gone? He who has foreknown its coming has gleaned abundance of joy on earth.

THE DEATH OF THE SOUL

The true death would be to live in a conquered country, for me above all, whose art must then be destroyed.

It would be shameful to think for a moment of saving my own life when my race demands my sacrifice.

NATURE AND MAN.

Spring has triumphantly arrived. It finds men full of hate, doing utter outrage to creation.

There will always be beauty on earth, and man, for all his mischievousness, will never be able to root it out. I have amassed enough to furnish my whole life.

The dead will not hurt the spring. After the horror of the moment of the moment of their loss has passed, when you see how large a place is filled by their memory, you feel a kind of relief at the thought of that which really persists (after death). It is in these dismal woods that you understand the vanity of burial and of funeral rites. The soul of these poor brave lads does not need that.

SUFFERING.

If there is one thing absolute in the realm of human sensation it is suffering. Now I understand what life is. It is the instrument that clears the soul's path to the absolute.

BEFORE BATTLE.

Human separations mean little; that which is really ourselves is in the ardour of the soul.

We have the order to attack. I don't want to face the risks which that involves without sending you my thoughts in the few moments of quiet that we have left. Everything here combines to impart peace of heart—the beauty of the wood in which we are living, the want of intellectual complications. It is paradoxical, as you say, and yet the best moments of my inner life are now being passed.

It is perhaps a destiny and a privilege, of which our generation should be proud, to witness these horrors; but what a terrible ransom it has to pay. In fine: Eternal faith dominating everything. Faith in an evolution, an order surpassing our human patience.

IN FULL BATTLE.

One word only. We are in the hands of God. Never, never did we so sorely need steadfastness and confidence. Death rages but does not reign. Life is still noble.

I have seen all my leaders struck down and the regiment decimated. I am in the hands of God, and I pray only that He will allow me such a condition of mind and heart as will permit me to enjoy all in His creation that man has not been able to pollute and spoil.

LAST WORDS

Dear mother, we are again in the care of God. We leave at 2 for the storm. I think of you: I love you: I commend all three of us to Providence. Whatever happens, let us be ready for it. In the full possession of all my faculties, that is my prayer. Hope to the last, but above all steadfastness and love.

We are now at the last waiting-point. I send you my love. Whatever happens, life will have been beautiful.

Thus he passed, in the exquisite words of our own Poet Laureate, "nobly, as saints and heroes die, with heart and hand unstained by hatred or wrong," speaking even in death his glorious message to the world of living men.

"Beans Is Beans"—and the cost is soaring skyward with pork, beef, eggs and other foods until the cost of living represents an increase of from 30 to 50 per cent. While meats and vegetables are beyond the reach of many millions of families, Shredded Wheat Biscuit continues to sell at the same old price and retains the same high nutritive quality. Shredded wheat biscuit contains all the rich body-building nutriment in the whole wheat grain, including the bran coat, which is so useful in keeping the bowels healthy and active. HUGHES WOULD NOT ACCEPT PREMIER'S PROPOSED PLANS stores and supplies by British officers were without foundation. General Hughes says that he called Sir Robert Borden's attention to these facts, and that the latter said they must abide by the decision of the British officers.

Determined to Act.

However," he said, "I did not wish to raise any trouble in the matter, but determined that Canada was not to be treated as a crown colony, and that, as we paid the bill and furnished the goods, which in nearly every instance were better than the British, I would act. I ordered a muster parade of our men and tried to overcome the scandalous neglect, going on in the pay department. A change was also ordered in the convalescent policy."

Resident Minister "Absurd."

Speaking of the proposal to appoint a resident minister in Britain, General Hughes declared it to be absurd, declaring that there was no more need for a resident Minister in Britain than there was for one in the various camps in Canada. Indeed, there was less, because whereas formerly General Carson was alone the representative, he was now surrounded by an able sub-militia Council, which reported promptly to headquarters in Ottawa.

WANTS CATTLE TO ROAM OVER GRAVE

Lord Newborough Barred the Tourists—Strange Will Filed by Probate.

LONDON, No. 13.—Lieutenant Lord Newborough, Welsh Guards, of 39 Parkfane, W., and Bryn Llewellyn Festiniog, who died on July 19, aged 43 years, from the result of a chill caught in the trenches, left an unsettled estate of the gross value of £71,776, of which £6,827 is net personalty. The public trustee is the sole executor of the will, dated Oct. 29, 1915, with two codicils, made previously to his going on active service. The will reads:

I wish to be buried if I die in England in the simplest manner compatible with decency, on the summit of the Bluff, in Festiniog, which lies on the western side of the road from Bryn Llewellyn, and which bluff is known to my sisters and intimate friends as Newborough Hill, as from that spot there is my favorite view down the Vale of Festiniog, and I wish my tombstone to be a simple slab of stone from my estate, protected from desecration by tourists, but other wise leaving my burial place free for sheep and cattle to roam all around the actual grave.

The testator gives £1,000, his house in Park-lane, the furniture, etc., and an annuity of £3,000 to his wife, to be increased by another £1,000 a year should his brother succeed to the family estate; an annuity of £350 to his sister, the Hon. Mabel Annesley; an annuity of £400 to his mother-in-Hon. Dorothy Beatrix Chapman; and an annuity of £400 tohismother-in-law in the event of her surviving his wife. Lord Newborough, dying without issue, the estates in Merioneth became settled on his brother, Lieutenant the Hon. Thos. John Wynn, M.N.V.R. Subject to the provisions of his marriage settlement, he directs that the estates in Denbigh are to be held in trust for his wife and sisters and the survivor of them, and ultimately for the person who shall be Lord Newborough. The residue of the property he leaves in trust, to pay the income thereof to his sisters and his niece Stella for life, with ultimate remainder to the person who shall for the time being be Lord Newborough.

MADE VOW; FEEDS 1,000.

Poor Russian Immigrant Makes Good on Pledge 20 Years Old.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14. — Twenty years ago Max Gootschneider, with his wife and baby girl, arrived in New York penniless from Volna, Russia. He begged help from charitable organizations and was given a job as a fur dyer. In return he made a vow that when his daughter should be married all men who were hungry, as he was then, should be fed.

The immigrant became a prosperous fur dealer and yesterday announced the coming marriage of his daughter to a diamond merchant. He drove to the Hebrew Society's headquarters in his limousine. "How many immigrants have you here now?" he asked. He was told about 200.

"Not enough," he declared "go out into the neighbourhood. I want to feed any number up to 1,000, perhaps more if you can get them."

Nearly 1,000 were fed at his expense between one p.m. and midnight.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S KIMONO APRON AND DUST CAP.

By Anabel Worthington.

An outfit that will greatly add to the worker's comfort, because it is trim and neat. It may be worn without a dress and is quite an improvement upon the old fashioned wrapper of a few years ago; infinitely more becoming, for it has its own measure of "style."

The body and sleeves are in one, and although the fulness is unconfined, a fitted effect is given across the chest and back. The neck may be low open and may be cut round instead of square. In the illustration the sleeves are loose, but they may be gathered and banded with contrasting goods; the collar is in harmonizing tone and the patch pocket in each front is trimmed to match. Closing is at the left front side.

The cap, gathered at the outer edge, has a snood trimmed to match the apron, and completes a most serviceable and sightly outfit for the round of duties to be attended to daily.

Gingham, linen, Indian head, percale, chambray and like materials are desirable for this type of garment. The making will take less than one hour.

The apron pattern No. 7,967, is cut in sizes 36, 40, 44 inches. To make in size 36 will require 5¾ yards 36 inch material and ⅛ yard 27 inch contrasting goods.

To obtain the pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

Price 10 cents, or 3 for 25 cents.
When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

THE ONE CERTAIN THING

Out of every thousand men of the age of thirty-five, TEN will be dead A YEAR FROM TO-DAY.

If you knew that you were going to be ONE of the TEN, it would not take ten minutes for you to decide to put on all the Life Insurance you could stand.

But, you do not know that you are NOT GOING TO BE ONE OF THEM. Therefore you should insure NOW.

REMEMBER THIS: There is ONE DAY in your lifetime when you pass from a HEALTHY MAN to an UNHEALTHY MAN.

One day you can get Insurance and the next day you cannot. Therefore you should insure NOW.

Even a Life Insurance Company cannot afford to insure one life ALONE, it can only afford to give Insurance when there is a group of policy-holders.

If a Life Insurance Company cannot AFFORD to insure one life, HOW MUCH LESS CAN YOU DO SO.

Should you neglect this important matter until it is too late, the ones to suffer will be those dependent upon you, (those of your own flesh).

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for 50 cents a large bottle, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Russo-Roumanians Resume The Offensive

A German Sub Reported Off The East Coast Of Canada

Russo-Roumanians Progress On The Whole Dobrudja Front

Are Again on the Offensive and Boasiac on the Lower Bank of Danube Has Been Occupied--French Have Made Fresh Gains in Fighting in St. Pierre de Vaast and Hold All Ground Previously Won Despite Counter Attacks.

BRITISH HAVE TAKEN MORE PRISONERS

BUCHAREST, November 15.—Roumanians and Russians again are on the offensive in the Dobrudja region.

The War Office announced to-day that Boasiac, on the Lower Danube bank, about nine miles north of Cernavoda, has been occupied.

"We occupied Boasiac and have progressed along the whole front," the announcement said.

The enemy's flying corps has been very active recently, the Roumanian official report said. Enemy flyers bombed the Palace which the Queen and Princesses left after the death of Princess Mircea. They also attacked the non-combatant population in the fields and village streets.

PARIS (French Official Communique), November 15.—French troops have made further progress north of the Somme, the War Office announced to-day, at the northern edge of St. Pierre Vaast Wood, following a most intense two-day bombardment of the German lines.

Despite desperate counter attacks in which the Germans employed burning liquids and tear-provoking shells, all positions gained by the French on November 7 have been maintained and the attacks repulsed, except at Presoire ,where small German detachments gained a foothold in a group of ruined houses.

Other assaulting German waves that were rolled up against French positions about Presoire were mowed down by machine gun fire..

German artillery is now bombarding French positions and French heavy guns are replying.

FOUNDATIONS FOR PEACE BEING LAID

Hungarian Leader Says He is Sure Peace on Its Way—Two Chief Belligerents Are Getting on Closer Ground in His Opinion

BERLIN, via Sayville Wireless, November 15.—"Campaign worries off his mind, his election assured, President Wilson may prove an altogether different President and see his opportunity when the moment arrives to help obtain peace in Europe."

So declared Count Apponyi, one of the most prominent of Hungarian leaders, and a world figure before the war in the peace by arbitration movement, on his arrival here to-day, from Budapest, to speak at a special meeting of the Reichstag. He declared peace was "getting nearer," and negotiations might open this winter. "I'm sure its on its way," he said. "I don't mean peace will come next week, or next month, or within two months even. I am only cerain that the foundations for peace are now being laid."

"If you will compare the speeches of Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg and Earl Grey, made at the beginning of war with what they save said recently, you will see that the two chief belligerents are getting on closer ground. They are still wide apart, but they are approaching common ground. The peace which closes this war must be peace which guarantees world peace if such peace can be, and I don't know why not. Then all this horrible bloodshed will not be in vain for future generations."

GERMAN SUB IS REPORTED OFF COAST

PROVIDENCE, R.I., November 15.—Captain John Ryan, of the Merchant and Miners' liner Howard, which arrived here to-day, reported that he had received a wireless from a British warship giving notice of the presence of a German submarine off the coast of New England and Canada.

The Howard received the message while off Block Island.

The British warship, Captain Ryan said, did not divulge either her name or her position.

The message said the submarine was "waiting."

BRITAIN'S LOSS FROM SUBS UNDER 3 PER CENT

LONDON, November 15.—Since the war began, slightly more than 2¾ per cent. of the tonnage of British merchantmen of 1,000 tons or over, have been lost, Dr. MacNamara, Financial Secretary of the Admiralty, announced in the House of Commons to-day.

BRITISH DROP BOMBS ON ZEEBRUGE AND OSTEND

LONDON, November 15.—ZeeBrugge and Ostend were heavily bombarded early to-day by flying squadrons, the Admiralty announced this afternoon.

Bombs were dropped on the docks and submarine shelters.

A great fire was noted after a direct hit was made on a petrol tank.

All the machines safely returned.

RUSSIAN TROOPS ARE ON THE OFFENSIVE AGAIN

LONDON, November 15. — Russian troops, on the River Narayuka, north of Halicz, in the region of the heights to the east of Lipniczdolna, in Galicia, yesterday assumed the offensive and threw back the Austro-German troops, according to the official statement to-day.

GENERAL LESSARD NOW MENTIONED AS MILITIA MINISTER

Brilliant French-Canadian Soldier Regarded in Toronto and Montreal as a Logical Choice For the Position

HAS A FINE RECORD

TORONTO, Nov. 15.—That none of the men yet mentioned as new Minister of Militia, but a French Canadian and Liberal, namely, Major General F. L. Lessard, will succeed Sir Sam Hughes, and by his entrance to the Borden cabinet, give it a sort of "coalition" aspect, is the opinion of leading civil and military circles here and in Montreal. General Lessard has admittedly been side-tracked during part of the war, because of a well known personal matter between Sir Sam and the French Canadian general. At no time since the beginning of the war have the friends of General Lessard, including many strong Conservatives and Cabinet ministers ceased to point out that the service of a general admittedly of great value should be utilized to advantage the prosecution of the war. General Lessard is now 'retired' on his farm in Meadowvale, Ontario. It is pointed out to-day that undoubtedly the greatest task before the next Minister of Militia, no matter who he may be, is the recruiting problem in Quebec province. Who, it is asked here, could make so effective a campaign in that direction as that distinguished French Canadian soldier, Francois Louis Lessard, as Minister of Militia, whose brilliant record and personality has popularized himself not only in his native province, but all over the Dominion of Canada.

Sir Sam Says His Farewell

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Nov. 15.—General Sir Sam Hughes took informal leave of the members of the headquarters staff in his office this morning. There were present all the heads of the branches of the department who have worked under him for the past five years, including Deputy Minister Fiset and the other members of the militia council.

General Hughes who had discarded his uniform for a plain blue mufti briefly thanked the officers for the work which they had done during the five years of his regime and especially during the two years of the war. He shook hands with each and bade them goodbye.

There was an unmistakable atmosphere of gloom in the department this morning. Nobody seems to know exactly where they are at.

The ex-minister appears to be in a decidedly determined mood and shows no signs of bing in the least subdued by his forced retirement. His underjaw is as firm and pugnacious as ever. He will remain in Ottawa for some days yet.

De Laval Request Was "Considered"

The De Laval Company's most recent note to the Council requesting the city to safeguard the company from the nuisance and damage of spring freshets that reach a high tide in the neighborhood of Park and Lans downe streets was considered by the Board of Works last night. It was stated that the trouble could be relieved with the co-operation of Monaghan Council by clearing out the drain on the west side of Park street from Lansdowne to the river. The Board of Works decided to write the township and also to ask the De Laval Company to write them urging their assistance.

NEW EXAMINER SERIAL BEGINS ON SATURDAY

The Examiner has great pleasure in announcing a new Serial Story, which will commence on Saturday. "Destiny" is the title, and the author is Charles Neville Buck, author of "The Call of the Cumberlands."

There are few splendid novels. This is one. It is nobly conceived and exquisitely wrought. It is a serious book in its purpose, but teems with liveliest interest from the first page to the last. Situations that thrill abound, and these are relieved by a delicate play of humour and graced by descriptions that charm.

The central figure is of one who, as a boy on a sterile New England farm, realizes in himself a child of destiny. With supreme egotism he enters New York to conquer the money-power of the nation. He triumphs and wins for himself and his family every luxury. He is impelled ever by the lust of power—to what end? The answer to the question is the theme of the novel.

There is a love-story, wonderful in its purity and strength and romance. The primal emotions of human hearts are revealed with an art that is the master of psychology and, too, of its interpretation.

The author interprets marvelously as well the material heart of the nation which beats in the New York Stock Exchange. The accounts of panic moments in the Street give to the reader a new and vivid understanding of men's moods under the spell of money-madness.

There comes a climax of tremendous tragedy. There is the desolation of final ruin over the scene.

There is another climax, utterly strange and beautiful.

The book offers a teaching of vital and nation-wide significance. The lesson is not given by preachment. It is revealed in a narrative supremely dramatic.

Don't miss the opening on Saturday.

Lieut. Stuart Now With 2nd Canadian Battalion At Front

Peterboro' Officer Who Went Overseas With the 93rd Battalion Writes Interesting Letter From the Firing Line Pte. W. T. Rowe of 93rd Battalion Killed in Action ---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Mrs. J. W. Stuart, Homewood Ave., has received the following interesting letter from her son, Lieut. Lloyd Stuart, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and who is now at the front:

In the Trenches,
Oct 30th, 1916.

Dear Mother,—I thought that being so comfortable here, I would write you a short letter while in the trenches.

As I told you in my last letter, I am attached to the 2nd Battalion, and doing duty with them. The officers are a fine bunch of fellows, if anything, better than the first, and they made me feel right at home from the start. Of course there aren't any of the Peterborough officers left, Art. Ackerman, the last one, having died of wounds a short time ago. However, there are several of the men left, and I have been speaking to them all.. I think there are only four—Sgt.-Major McHeard, Corp. Sheperdson, and Ptes. White and Duguall. As a matter of fact, I feel more at home now in the 2nd than I did in the 1st. Then, too, on account of so many home boys having served with this battalion, I feel that I really have an interest in it. At that I don't know how long I will be here.

I am writing this letter in a nice comfortable dugout, which I share with the M.C.O. The dugout is about ten feet square, and down so far in the ground that it is out of reach of anything. The sides are of corrugated iron, and the roof is made of planks, held up by pieces of timber. There are two beds, or rather benches, with chicken wire bottoms, one above the other. To get into the dugout one has to go down several steps. It is just like a home, and I don't care if we stay here for the duration. Whenever it gets a little chilly we just get our brazier going and put on a little coke.

This time C Company is in support, about two hundred yards from the front line, which is from thirty to one hundred yards from the Hun front line.

We came in last night, and expect to be in for four or eight days.

Of course I can't tell you where I am. Suffice to say, that it is very quiet here, with only a few "minnie-wefers" coming over.

Must close now. Hope you will pardon this dirty paper, but it came off the inside of my haversack.

Your loving son,
"Lloyd."

PTE. ROWE KILLED.

Another member of the 93rd Battalion has given up his life in the person of Pte. Wm. T. Rowe of Lakefield, who was killed in action on October 10th. Pte. Rowe with his brother, Pte. George E. Rowe enlisted in Peterborough last winter with the 93rd Battalion and went overseas with the battalion afterwards being transferred in a draft to the 5th C.M.R. just before the 93rd left for Barriefield Pte. Rowe was seriously ill with pneumonia but recovered in time to join the battalion in camp. He was the son of J. J. Rowe of Douro township and was born in Smith, spending all his life in and around Lakefield, where his wife and children reside. Besides his brother George now overseas he is survived by another brother. Pte. Albert Rowe a member of the 247th Battalion.

Pte. Rowe's death is the fifth among the men of the 93rd Battalion, since Lt.-Col. Johnston's unit went overseas and singularly all five were Canadian born members of the battalion. The other fatalities were Ptes. Tom Frost and Henry Smith of Peterborough, Pte. G. R. Weaver of Hiawatha and Pte. Thomas Cross of Norwood Recruiting Conference.

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman is in Kingston to-day attending the recruiting conference.

The Kingston Standard says: A military conference will take place in the city, to which Brig.-General Hemming has invited all the officers commanding units in the Third Military District. The conference will take place in the Armouries, and will open at ten o'clock in the morning. Brig.-General Hemming will preside.

The principal subject under discussion will be recruiting in this district for the winter. So far the Third District has contributed a large number of men to the C.E.F. and it is felt that if the district is to maintain its recruiting reputation, it is necessary that the G.O.C. should have the co-operation of every officer and that the system of recruiting should be uniform all over the district. The matter of billetting the men for the winter will also be discussed. Last winter the scheme was successful in this district, and there is a feeling that it is the only way to get recruits under the voluntary system.

LOOKING AFTER OUR PRISONERS OF WAR

Peterboro' Branch of Red Cross Society Explains Method by Which Weekly Parcels Are Being Sent to the Peterborough Boys in Germany.

DOING SPLENDID WORK

There are many who do not yet understand about the parcels sent by the Peterborough Red Cross Society to the Canadians who are prisoners in Germany.

The Executive decided that all details regarding the cost of the parcels now frequently sent, and the contents be fully explained, also particulars regarding 'adoption' and assignment of pay (10/-monthly).

How Frequently Sent.

The parcels are sent every week now, instead of one every two weeks, as formerly. It was found that our men had to depend more and more upon the parcels of food and clothing sent by the Red Cross and friends.

Some boys had no friends, and consequently would have starved to death but for the Society undertaking this splendid branch of its work.

To avoid this, or any chance of such an awful thing happening, the Canadian Red Cross Society holds itself responsible and pledges itself to send one parcel every week to every one of the 2,200 Canadians who are now prisoners. As the number of prisoners increase, so will the parcels, not a single Canadian boy will go unsupplied if the Society can avoid it.

Cost of Parcels.

The cost of a parcel was formerly $1.25. Owing to the high prices of almost all food commodities, the price is now $1.75; (7s in English coinage). Several subscribers expressed the desire to 'adopt' a prisoner and paid the sum of $2.50 a month to do so. This was sufficient when parcels were sent only twice a month, and when they cost only 5s. each.

Now that they are sent four times a month and cost 7s. it does not even pay half the cost. The Society is now expending 28s. (or $7) per month for each Canadian prisoner for food alone. This outlay involves a liability of between $10,000 and $12,000 every month for the Society to meet.

Contents.

The parcels are packed in the Civil Service Stores, London, under supervision, censored on the premises, and delivered intact without further examination to whomever addressed.

(1) 2½ oz. tin Army Rations, 1 No. 1 tin corned beef, 1-2 lb. carton Margarine, 1-3 lb. Shand Cocoa, 1 lb. tin Apricots in Syrup, 4-oz. tin Bloater Paste, 1-2 lb. tin Salmon.

(2) 2 lb. tin Boiled Rabbits, 1 No. 2 tin Pork and Beans, 1 mono pot Dripping, 1-4 lb. No. 3 Tea, 1-2 lb. tin Condensed Milk, 1 lb. tin Herrings in Tomato.

(3) 1 lb. tin Army Rations, 1 lb. tin 1 tin Corned Beef, 1-2 lb. tin Butter, 1-4 Shand Cocoa, 1 lb. tin Chivers' Jam, 1 bottle Sauce.

(4) 2 lb. tin Boiled Rabbits, 1 No. 2 tin Pork and Beans, 1 mono pot Dripping, 1-4 lb. No. 3 Tea, 1-2 lb. tin Condensed Milk, 1 lb. tin Lyles' Golden Syrup, 4 oz. tin Bloater Paste

(5) 1 lb. tin Army Rations, 1 lb. tin Sausages, 1-2 lb. Carton Margarine, 1-4 lb. Shand cocoa, 1 tin Herrings in Tomato, 1 tin Peaches in Syrup, 4-oz. tin Chicken and Ham Paste.

(6) 2½oz. tin Army Rations, 1 No 1 tin Corned Beef, 1-4 lb. No. 3 Tea, 1-2 lb. tin Condensed Milk, 1 tin (1 lb. 1 oz.) Baked Beans, 1 mono pot Dripping, 1 bottle Sauce.

Assignment of Pay.

Directly the Red Cross Society receives the name of any Canadian taken prisoner (which it does usually within a few days), a parcel is sent

CREWS SHUFFLED ABOUT FROM BOAT TO BOAT BY HUNS

Crew of American Steamer Columbian Torpedoed by Germans Have Thrilling Tale of Their Adventures to Tell

THEIR FLAG IGNORED

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 15.—How ship after ship was stopped, then sunk, and the crews literally shuffled about from captured boat to captured boat, by the German submarine U49, which sank the American Hawaiian steamer Columbian, was told here to-day in stories of the Columbian's crew related in despatches from Spain.

Captain Curtis was at dinner when he heard first shot from the U49, and went up to the bridge. He ordered the Stars and Stripes to the mast. The submarine did not approach closely, but ordered the Columbian to follow her. Curtis was told that any suspicious move would result in a torpedo against the Columbian's side.

Next morning Capt. Curtis was ordered aboard the submarine, where he protested vigorously with the result, for insults to the American flag.

With the Stars and Stripes flying the Columbian was torpedoed, sinking in twelve minutes, the crew having been sent aboard the captured steamer Balto, then all aboard the Balto were sent aboard the Swedish steamer Baring, and the Balto was sunk by bombs. Next the Norwegian ship Fordalen was stopped, her crew put aboard the Varing and the Fordalen sunk. When food began to run short on the Varing the sub commander permitted her to turn to port.

Enough Snow For Sleighing

"A premature winter" was the way the local weather man characterized to-day's fall of snow which was almost sufficient to make sleighing. The minimum temperature throughout the night was nineteen degrees above zero or about eleven degrees of frost. The temperature is not so unusual as the snow for this season of the year. It is hardly likely that the present snowfall will remain on the ground very long as finer and warmer weather is promised in the course of a few days. Indians and others are inclined to the opinion that this winter will be more or less of an open one and that the real winter weather will not set in until late in the season.

This, no doubt will be good news to the average householder who is called upon to pay eight dollars and fifty cents a ton for coal and likewise the coal dealer who is confronted with the problem of making one ton of coal do where two or three are required.

Only in one or two instances were the snow ploughs reported out, although in any of the districts their use would not have been out of order

Give This Tea a Trial

They say that a good deal depends on the tea you drink, whether you feel in good trim after breakfast or supper. Be this as it may, tea will be drunk now, more than ever, since prohibition came in force, because tea is "the cup that cheers, but not inebriates." This being the case, better lay in a chest or a ten-pound box of it now, when it is offered at the very unusual low prices by the Peterborough Grocery Co. of Simcoe street. All you have to do is to determine the kind of tea you like best, then stock up with as much as you can afford, while this chance is offered. See advertisement. But be sure and learn how to brew it correctly.

ONE FOR SIR SAM.

With all his faults, imputed and actual, we have one reason for loving Sir Sam Hughes still. If, as is asserted, when he found a short supply of nitre for munitions purposes, he procured the refinement in Canada of British Columbia zinc ores at home, he did a notable national good thing. He set an example to his leader and colleagues in the government. If we can refine zinc ores in Canada, we can do the same with nickel and also treat the vast bulk of our vast natural resources at home. Sir Sam's methods in many ways, not only did violence to constitutional traditions, but did violence to the dilatory traditions of governments, not excepting the Borden government. While Sir Robert is leisurely taking his time in investigating the origin of the Canadian nickel that furnishes part of the cargo of the "Deutschland". Sir Sam Hughes in contrast did something—he investigated, "got busy" at once and acted in the matter of minimizing the shortage of nitre. If the government could take in some of the energetic spirit of Sir Sam and apply it to the problem of dealing with our national resources in Canada, so as to meet the demands of the slogan—"Canada for Canadians—the fullest development at home of all our resources—the late Minister of Militia would have been well worth while. Even while he was in office, meteoric and erratic, we might reasonably, in respect of one characteristic, adopt the apostrophe of post, Cowper to England—"Sir Sam, with all your faults we love you still".

DEVONSHIRE'S FIRST JOB.

The first official action of our new governor-general was not very exhilarating—it was to study the family quarrel in the Borden cabinet. His Excellency's first work yesterday morning was to look into the correspondence between Sir Robert Borden and Sir Sam Hughes, which led to the latter's extinction as Minister of Militia. This correspondence may show the immediate causes why Sir Sam's services were dispensed with; but it will not show that for many months, nearly since the war began, Sir Sam demonstrated his independence of his leader and his colleagues and disregard of his responsibility as a minister of the Crown. He has been a free lance, an irresponsible, nearly all the way through. That he was allowed to persist and remain is due to Sir Robert Borden's weakness — amiable weakness no doubt. But reluctance to do a disagreeable duty does not indicate a strong man for a highly responsible position. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is an amiable man, but in office and as a leader—a captain that kicked the bridge and would not take advice from the mate—he showed that while was the iron hand under the velvet glove. When the late Hon. J. Israel Tarte, wanted to exploit his own policy, when he practically revolted against cabinet discipline, his punishment was not delayed. He only made one instance of insubordinate and independent attitude, incompatible with the constitutional status of a minister, and he was relieved of his portfolio, without national scandal. Sir Sam Hughes for months and months and repeatedly, has performed scores of "indiscretions" more serious in principle and more serious in consequence than the single insubordination that brought the application of summary discipline to Mr. Tarte. It is stated that Sir Robert Borden is to take Sir Sam's place as acting head of the militia department; and one can easily fancy the magnificent sniff Sir Sam will execute at the idea of Sir Robert Borden filling his shoes—a leader that was weak enough to retain in office an insubordinate subordinate who flouted his authority, took his fling at will, and for many months did violence to the traditions of ministerial responsibility.

GRIN AND BEAR IT.

The Toronto News gives this easily administered advice:

Every newspaper in the country should to-day be telling its readers that, despite all the authorities can do high prices of foodstuffs, clothing and other necessities are a part of the inevitable contribution of home-staying Canadians to a cause for which their countrymen are offering their lives at the front. Such advances in commodities as are unavoidable must be borne with patriotic patience by those of us who pursue our ordinary lives in safety while others fight for us at the front. Politicians and journalists who try to lead people in the other direction must be classed as traitors and treason-mongers.

In the main there is considerable reason in these reasons for accepting the situation—to grin and bear it. It is not however easy to smile when hunger or its approximation, pinches. No doubt the war causes a great disturbance of transportation and makes unusual demands upon available supply. The advice of the News shows little faith in its own declaration that, > the government has "furnished the machinery for circumventing, and punishing persons, firms and combines that may be curtailing production, withholding the necessaries of life from the market or otherwise manipulating prices in this period of stress and strain."

Here is exactly the point that concerns us. "In this period of stress and strain," there is reason to believe that domestic causes quite apart from the general causes due to war conditions and transportation, are operating; and these causes it is the duty of the government to investigate and remedy. If it "furnishes the machinery" for remedying admitted abuses, it is in duty bound to put it into operation and keep it going. In this the government has a distinct responsibility. Many persons of both parties express doubt of the adequacy and effectiveness of the "machinery" provided by the government, and yet a partizan organ wants us to accept this and relieve the government from all further responsibility. If criticism or urging to action is hard on the government "in this time of stress and strain," so are high prices — under proper action capable of being dealt with— unwelcome to suffering consumers.

It would no doubt be very agreeable to the government if the people would "grin and bear it," suffer in silence, while the government complacently watched the people struggle with the admittedly ineffective machinery it has provided.

The News of course denounces any attempt to relieve the local situation by removal of duties from food stuffs, which in the United States are—for instance tinned tomatoes —one-third less than the prices the Canadian Canners' Combine imposes, it is declared, upon the people of Canada.

The "machinery" in the government's hands independently of an order-in-council, to curb combines is, unfortunately, not put into motion. No real attempt is made to deal with causes instead of effects. A case in the police court yesterday illustrates how the technically innocent are punished and the really guilty left alone. Three reputable grocers were fined $25 each for selling vinegar that did not meet the government standard of quality. They asserted, and it was not doubted, that they bought the goods in good faith, under the guarantee of the manufacturer. They were innocent, in intention, yet they are punished and publicly humiliated, while the real offender, the dishonest manufacturer, escapes. This case is cited to show that the government spends money and energy in dealing with effects while it neglects the duty of getting at the causes. It would be very pleasant to the government to be relieved of responsibility; but we have governments to do things for us and we expect them to do their duty, to make some real attempt to do it, and not put us off with the advice to grin and bear it.

A GIRL'S PATRIOTISM.

The house-surgeon of the Fishmongers' Hall Hospital has received the following letter from a girl engaged in business in the city. It shows a splendid spirit of patriotism and self-sacrifice:

"I am taking the liberty to write to you to ask if it is true that often a soldier's wound could be the easier and the better healed were there plenty of skin available to graft on to the wounds? I have been told that many wounds are badly healed because the doctors cannot get skin; if this is so, I would consider it an honour to be allowed to put myself at your disposal at any time in order that my skin might be taken to graft on to a wound. I am prepared to give as much as would be practicable to take from me.

"This is no impulsive movement on my part. I am obliged to come to town each day to earn my own living, and am therefore debarred from working for the soldiers as other girls of my own age are doing. I have two brothers fighting, and for their sakes I feel I must do something.

"I am writing to your hospital because I know of nowhere else; if you can find no use for my services I shall be obliged if you will kindly inform me where I could go."—London Times.

Something About Canadian Nickel Serving The Purpose Of German Munition Makers

The Government cannot credit the story that the big cargo of nickel that has been taken on board the Deutschland for transportation to Germany, to make guns to slaughter more Canadians at the front, really came from Canada's nickel mines at Sudbury. It seems such a strange thing that the foreign corporation which owns all Canada's nickel and ships it out of the country as fast as it can be dug up, should sell it to anybody in sympathy with Germany, whether openly or covertly. The Government now announces that they will make an enquiry to find out if Canadian nickel really has been stowed on the Deutschland. Canadians would be better pleased to hear that the Government were taking prompt measures to make sure that no more nickel would filter through to the wily agents of the German government, instead of trusting to a foreign corporation, which does not care a snap of the finger for Canada and the Allies to do this for them.

In connection with this story it is interesting to recall that Mr. P. A. O'Farrell recently sent a memorandum to Sir Robert Borden, in which he declared that the five billion dollars' worth of copper and nickel in the Sudbury deposits, were being exploited for the Krupps and the German Empire. He stated that 25 per cent. of the stock of the International Nickel Company, was held by New York bankers as trustees for Krupps, who owned it in other people's names, and that the Krupps always had been, and always intended to be, the largest consumers of Ontario nickel. He says Krupps have long-time contracts with the International Nickel Company for 25,000,000 pounds of nickel to be delivered to their order, "at any time, in peace or war."

Mr. O'Farrell further told Sir Robert Borden that "all these are secret agreements hidden in the archives of Berlin and in the strong boxes of the bankers in New York. They have all been contrived to fool the Dominion Government and the Ontario Government, and knowing that their friends were powerful in the Ontario Government they have admirably succeeded in deluding the Dominion Government, and through it they have also succeeded in deceiving the Imperial Government at home." This, however, is not all. He charges that Canadian nickel is being withheld from the Allies, and cites the following concrete instance:, "Last January McKinnon & Dash of Toronto, bought 400 tons of nickel from the International Nickel Company, and resold it to an agent of the Russian Government, who arranged for its shipment from New York to Vladivostock via the C.P.R. to Vancouver and the C.P.R. steamship route across the Pacific Ocean. The Imperial Government was, of course, quite willing to have this nickel delivered to Russia, but as soon as the International Trust discovered that this nickel was to reach the Russian Government over the Trans-Siberian Railway, on one excuse or another they refused to deliver it. The Krupps took good care that nickel should not go by such an easy route to the Russian Government."

By the very fact of starting an inquiry, the Government show that they are not sure about the destination of Canadian nickel and the workings of the International Nickel Trust. Why not immediately take steps to make Canada supreme over Canada's nickel, instead of meekly conceding supremacy to a foreign trust which the government cannot prove has no Krupps of Germany behind it? — Montreal Herald.

It is expected that the work of the conference will only take up the morning, and that every officer will be able to return to his unit by evening.

To-Day's Orders.

Daily orders by Lieut.-Col. C. H. Ackerman, commanding 247th Batt., C.E.F.:

Orders or Wednesday, Nov. 15:

Parade—All officers, N.C.O.'s and men will parade in Drill Hall for pay, after which they will continue with recruiting canvass.

Duties—Orderly Officer for Wednesday, Lieut. Strickland. Next for duty, Lieut. P. J. Hayes.

Memorial Service—Memorial service at Mark Street Methodist Church at 7 p.m., Sunday, November 19th, to which all officers, N.C.O.'s and men of the 247th Battalion are invited. This memorial service is in memory of the late Pte. Naish, killed in action.

Strength—Capt. Belton, transferred from the 208th Batt., C.E.F., to the 247th Batt., C.E.F., as of Nov. 11th, 1916. Authority—3d 26-247-2.

Strength—Pte. Arthur King, Pte. Wm. Jas. Armstrong, and Pte. Raymond Gibb were attested and taken on the strength as of the 15th Nov., 1916.

R. Brooks, Lieut.,
Acting Adj., 247th Batt., C.E.F.

Among the Peterborough soldiers invalided home who have arrived at Quebec is Pte. C. Joliffe.

A Peterborough man enlisted with the R.C.H.A. in Toronto yesterday, in the person of J. McAllister.

Pte. R. H. Muir of Peterborough has taken a position in Lindsay, according to the Lindsay Warder which says that Pte. Muir left Lindsay with a detachment for the 21st Battalion. As a matter of fact Pte. Muir although he reached Kingston with the Lindsay detachment did not leave Lindsay with them. He with Ptes. J. H. Rogers and H. C. Evans of Peterborough boarded the troop train as it passed through here, taking a chance on passing the medical examination at Kingston. All three got to the front where Pte. Rogers was killed and Ptes. Muir and Evans wounded. The Warder says:

Pte. R. H. Muir, 21st Battalion, who left Lindsay with a detachment of the 45th Regiment on November 3rd, 1914, under Capt. Kennedy and Lieut. Flavelle, is now in town and has accepted a position here. He intends to make his home in Lindsay in the future.

Pte. Muir was wounded in Belgium by shrapnel in the head, and carries with him a souvenir, in the shape of a small piece of shrapnel still imbedded in his left jaw which only allows him to open his mouth about one-half an inch.

Pte. Muir is well known to the Lindsay boys in the 21st Battalion. He deeply regretted to hear of the death of Percy Darke with whom he was personally acquainted and often shared a dug-out with him. He pays a great tribute to him as a brave soldier and noble young man, and the Town of Lindsay ought to be proud of possessing such young men.

Sales Doubled Prices Reduced

At the end of the Ford year, July 31st, 1916, the Ford Motor Co. of Canada Limited, had shipped

Pte Muir is now fully recovered from his wounds, which his host of friends will be pleased to hear.

Pte. Muir was only three days in town when he was the means of taking a young man up to the armouries and getting him signed up with the 252nd Battalion, as he portrayed things in the firing line much ahead of the ordinary gossip one hears about the life of a soldier in Flanders.

The Warder joins with Pte. Muir's host of Lindsay friends in extending a hearty welcome home to him, with the earnest wish that he may be long spared to enjoy the life of a citizen of this fair town.

Word has been received that Pte. Aubrey Elston, a Peterborough member of the 97th Battalion American Legion, has gone to France with a draft.

The safe arrival in England is announced of the 159th Battalion of which Bugler Charles Reid, son of Mr. Chas. Reid, Stewart street is a member.

The many friends of Lieut. Alex McAllister, son of Mr. C. B. McAllister, formerly of this city will learn with regret that he is in a hospital in Boulogne, suffering from shell shock.

Pte. Walter Perks of Peterborough who went over with the 21st Battalion but was unable to pass the medical examination in England, is expected to arrive in the city soon. Pte. Perks cabled from England on the 5th of November immediately before leaving.

Word has been received that the wounds, in his ankle, received by Lieut. Cyril Moore, son of Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., will probably unfit him for further activity in the firing line.

Lieut. Wm. Sheffield, formerly of the Dominion Bank of this city, who enlisted with a Western Battalion is seriously wounded and at present in a hospital in London.
